The Great George Street window of the Mackinnon Drug Co. is being appreciatively commented on by hundreds of passers by. The display is the creation of H. L. Bethune, a member of the firm, and in this instance he has surpassed all his previous efforts. The display is typical of Easter, that feature being prominently brought to the attention by "Easter Greetings" in gold letters. In the centre is a large Easter egg from which is seen an emerging very daintily attired young lady. The mercantile aspects of the window are looked after by an attractive assortment of Moir's chocolates for Easter trade.

Rev. J. W. McConnell, of Jubilee Methodist Church, who is conducting a series of special services, adopted a rather novel plan of making his announcements on Saturday evening. The enterprising clergyman pinned a sheet on the side of the church, and projected what he wanted to say upon it by means of a stereopticon machine set up in the window of the parsonage. Announcements, gospel extracts, and scenic pictures were all used in the composition of the evening's program. The entertainment drew a shifting crowd of a hundred people or so throughout its duration.—Sydney Record.
