CREATURES THAT CAN NOT BE CAUGHT

It was recently reported that photographs have been obtained of a notorious, almost unknown flightless bird, of which only four specimens have ever been secured.

There are many other birds and beasts at large in various parts of the world of which not even photographs can be obtained, and the zoological societies would pay substantial sums for specimens of them.

There is a nameless creature living in the region of the Andes, for instance, that has so far escaped capture. It has been seen by various travellers, and bones and other remains that have been discovered bear out the belief that the animal is a true member of the rat family-but a rather terrifying member, since it is the size of the fully-grown mastiff.

Then there is the okapi, an animal known to exist in certain parts of the Congo forest. It was discovered, just over twenty years ago, by Sir Harry Johnston, who believed it to be of the same species as a certain fossilized remains which were found in Greece.

Another creature still at large is the mylodon, a species of the ground sloth. Some few years ago Hesketh Pritchard, the author and big game hunter, led an expedition into Patagonia in search of this beast. Although no mylodon was captured, it is firmly believed that specimens of the creature are still at large there.

Among the birds that zoologists would welcome as mentioned, the bell bird, which has often been heard singing in a clear, bell-like tone, but never yet caught.

short time and then in a fit of rage whipped the child until he fell to the floor unconscious.

Less than two hours after the boy died from his injuries, Hillsabeck was arrested on a charge of murder and brought to Hanna. An inquest will be held Saturday evening but will be postponed pending a change in the condition of the body.

His wife telephoned the police at Hanna, "I must have been crazy," were Hillsabeck's first words, when the police arrived. "I did not think that I was hitting them hard. I think I lost my temper and I did not realize what I was doing."

THE NEW YEAR

Each of us is sentenced to death. The time and the place is the only mystery. Recently there were two men prominent in public life who received their doom and a definite time limit.

One of these was a distinguished surgeon who served in the war and who gave his best to scientific laboratory experimentation. The day came when he knew that he had probably three months longer to live. Through the X-ray he was relieved of suffering, and this is what he did with all that was left to him of life.

He sent a note to his friends saying, "My wife and I are retiring for three months. Do not come to us unless we send for you."

They measured the value of every hour. They lived not as one dying, but in the resolution to make each day count for all that it could hold. Favorite operas and concerts were attended-though they they both would enjoy. They read together the news and essays, which both of them had loved. Occasionally they entertained the friends who really counted, and they visited the homes of those who were dear to them.

A lifetime was enjoyed in those weeks. It was a little less than three months, but every day had been used to its utmost.

It takes a high soul and a strong character to face the end of the road this way. It is a lesson for each of us who is tempted to waste priceless time.

The other man who knew that his days were numbered accepted his fate as a good soldier, but without the philosophy which triumphed over death. He could tell his wife he was afraid to hurt her. He kept it a secret from his associates. Only his physicians and two friends who met him in the weak hour of his first shock knew the limit of his life.

This man plunged into his work with renewed effort, resenting any suggestion of illness. He projected plans for his corporation and worked intensely on programs which would not come to light until long after he had passed out of life.

In his work he lived as one whom death could not touch. His one desire was that no one should treat him as a dying man, but

Leaves To-day For Ice Race Circuit

Col. D. A. MacKinnon leaves this morning for Mt. Clemens, Mich., where Messrs. Ernest McTague and Ed. Houghton are with the horses Dan Patch, The Yank, Capt. Jackson and Colonel Waltz. There will be one week's racing over the ice at Mt. Clemens, and then the circuit will be taken up at Cleveland, Ohio, where there will be a two weeks' racing program.

There is more interest this year than ever in ice racing and the largest field of horses that have ever competed will take part in the various contests. Some of the greatest trainers in America are preparing stables for ice prizes this year, including Vic Fleming, Humphrey Morrison, West Mallou, Nat Ray, Wm. Chapman, Charles Lindburg, Chas. Valentine, Sep. Palin and others of lesser note.

The races will take place on the regular half mile tracks which will be flooded for ice. The public are made comfortable in witnessing the sport by enclosed heated grandstands. It is expected that there will be tremendous crowds at both Mt. Clemens and Cleveland, as horsemen from all parts of America and Canada will be on hand to witness the sport. This is a rather adventurous program for island horses to compete against such crowds as they will stake up against, and it is not to be expected that they will carry off any big share of the prizes, but it will be useful experience as it will give a good line on the methods of training, driving, etc., conducted by the leading reinmen.
