

HAD SUFFERED FOR YEARS WITH RHEUMATISM

Tried many remedies—Simple home treatment brought relief

A sufferer from acute rheumatism for many years, a Winchester, N. H., man at last found that he could at last get rid of the pain, and relieve the swelling and stiffness by a simple home treatment.

"After trying various remedies," he writes, "Sloan's Liniment was recommended to me, and it stopped the pain."

What is the reason for these remarkable results? Simply that Sloan's doesn't just deaden the nerves. It stirs up your own forces to get rid of the conditions that are causing the pain.

Apply lightly without rubbing, and at once you'll feel the comforting warmth as fresh, healing blood begins circulating through the affected spot. The stiff, swollen tissues relax, the inflammation goes down, the pain stops, and soon you feel normal again. Get a bottle today and have it on hand. All druggists—35 cents.

SPECIAL POULTRY NOTICE

Thousands of Dollars are lost annually to Poultry raisers through improper handling of their Poultry. To obtain highest prices consideration must be given the following points.

- 1. Poultry must be crate fattened. Be sure birds are full grown before crating them and fatten them well before killing.
2. Poultry should be starved for twelve hours before killing.
3. Birds should be bled through the mouth. Head and feet left on. If you are not familiar with this method it would be best to get an experienced person to teach you otherwise you are likely to spoil your Poultry in your first attempt. You would be glad to give you a demonstration at our Branch in Charlottetown or at any of our killing stations in the country.
4. Your Poultry must be dry plucked and free of all pin feathers. Also be careful not to tear the birds. These points are very important for otherwise perfect Poultry can easily be damaged in the plucking.
5. If convenient hang the birds for twelve hours after they are plucked to allow them to be thoroughly cooled. It is unnecessary to tie them up with cord before bringing them in to market. Just leave them in the natural shape in which they have cooled while hanging up.
6. Be sure that any blood is removed from the birds' mouths and their feet are clean before packing.

We can handle all grades and quantities of Poultry but the premium on the first quality will repay you for the extra trouble necessary to get the highest prices. Call phone or write us for our quotations before disposing of your stock or better still bring in your Poultry and if you find you can do better elsewhere than our offer we certainly do not wish you to leave it with us.

We feel, however, that you will find we are paying the top market prices for whatever grade or quality of Poultry you have to sell and that you will be well satisfied with our returns.

The Unwilling Adventuress

BY MILDRED BARBOUR

CHAPTER 26. ON APPROVAL

They lunched in Paris at the Ritz grille. Hartley, Sr., grimly put Doris beside him. Young Hartley was pined between his Aunt Ada's rhapsodies at seeing Paris again and his Uncle Howard's qualms over the advisability of lobster mayonnaise and sauterne.

The tireless Meekins was running about Paris securing accommodations on the Cote d'Azur midnight express and establishing their hand luggage in a suite upstairs for temporary use. Doris wished heartily that her tiresome "father-in-law" would permit her to feast her eyes and ears on the sights about her. Not that she was neglecting to eat—not at all.

Like everyone else in the world she was thrilled by the mere idea of being in Paris. But it overawed her, frightened her a little. The ceaseless traffic, the crowded sidewalks, the ear-splitting, unending din—a thunder that is unmistakably Paris—bewildered and wearied her. She found her throat aching from an effort to speak about the crescendo of sound that filled the streets.

She decided she preferred that peaceful, colorful, tidy, countryside through which the train from Havre had carried her. "Your first trip abroad?" Hartley, Sr., was asking.

She had a hazy consciousness that he had put that question several times before. When she answered in the affirmative, he inquired where she had been born and raised. She told him briefly. "My mother was educated in Paris," she volunteered. "She was an opera singer—a great opera singer," she added proudly.

His beetling brows drew together in a frown. "An actress?" he inquired with the grim triumph of one who has suspected the worse. "I suppose so," answered Doris hesitatingly. "Aunt Elsie says she had a magnificent voice."

"Who was your father?" Doris told him. "Is he dead?" "Something advised her not to relate to his grim man the circumstances of her father's exit from her life. Not that she really cared whether he knew or not. So she said only that her father was dead.

"Who was supporting you before my son—" he glared down the table at the luckless young man.

"I had indigestion so bad that I was afraid to eat anything. Couldn't even eat rice. Adlerika has done me so much good that now I eat anything. I have taken a lot of medicine but Adlerika is the best."

Adlerika gives the system a REAL cleansing and brings out old poisons which may have caused trouble for a long time. Unlike most medicines, it acts upon BOTH upper and lower bowel. Just one spoonful relieves GAS and takes away that full, bloated feeling so that you can eat better and sleep better. Even if bowels move daily, Adlerika brings out much additional poison which you never thought was in your system and which caused sour, gassy stomach, nervousness, sleeplessness, headache. No matter what you have tried for your stomach and bowels, Adlerika will surprise you. Hughes' Drug Co., Ltd., and other druggists.

Headache Made Her So Sick She Could Not Work

Miss Lola White, Cape Bald, N.B., writes: "I suffered severely, for a long time, with a bad headache. It would ache and ache until it made me so sick I could not work at all. A friend recommended and after using a few bottles of this medicine I feel that I cannot recommend it too highly to all those who suffer from headache of any kind." For the past 4 years B.B.B. has been put up only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

"I was living with my cousins in New York. I am studying voice, you know. Aunt Elsie wants me to be a singer like my mother." The drooping downward curve of her voice at this admission caused him to look at her sharply. "You don't care about it?" "No," she confessed, lifting guileless eyes. "I always wanted to marry a nice man and have children and—" her lips curved with amusement at the recollection of her frequently expressed ambition. Something in his stony silence brought her to earth. She broke off hastily and devoted herself to her fillet of sole.

"He thinks I grabbed his son," she thought resentfully. "If he only knew!" And suddenly she giggled.

The wrathful glance her supposed husband wrenched from his end of the table, warned her that this was not the right cue for mirth. But it only made her laugh more and, lifting her pretty eyes, she looked her "father-in-law" squarely in the face and continued to laugh over this private joke.

It almost routed Hartley, Sr. He realized that she didn't fear him, she didn't even bother to cajole him. She was thoroughly enjoying herself, and she didn't care what he thought.

After luncheon, the Cushings retired to the suite upstairs for Uncle Howard's nap. Hartley, Sr., joined them and the two young people were delegated to a brief sightseeing tour in a taxi, for Doris' benefit.

Young Hartley looked as though he would sooner have gone to the guillotine, but his gloomy silence failed to disconcert Doris. And that very fact made him harden his heart against her. While his father was questioning her, he had known a pang or two of pity for her, but the way she had come through the ordeal and had indeed not even considered it an ordeal, was slightly irritating.

But he piloted her stoically around Paris to see sights that were as familiar to him as his New York. In the course of a few hours, Doris saw the Arch de Triomphe, the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, the Madeline, the Tuilleries, and a glimpse of the Bois de Boulogne. She had got a crick in her neck staring up at the slender, transparent structure of the Eiffel Tower. At five o'clock, she saw all the world pass in front of the Cafe de la Paix, where Hartley ran across several acquaintances. On their way back to the Ritz to rejoin his family, they took in a bit of the Rue de Paix, that is artfully calculated to draw the alluring sartorial displays.

Doris stopped for several minutes entranced by a window of feminine vanities. There were hose of ravishing sheerness, lacy and coquettish fans, vanity cases, jewelled garters, mules with ostrich-roses, and many perfume vials, cosseter bits of chiffon masquerading as handkerchiefs, Spanish shawls.

Hartley said wearily, with a determined effort at geniality: "Would you care for one of these trifles, a sort of souvenir of your first visit to Paris?" "Do they cost more than three dollars and ten cents?" inquired Doris practically, feeling her slim purse. He flushed and made an instinctive gesture toward his pocket. "I say, I'd completely forgotten. You see how unaccustomed I am to being married. You should have told me, so that I could see that you're always provided with funds." "From you!" said Doris clearly. "No thanks!" and she laughed. That laugh cut him like a lash. He hated her more than ever! (To Be Continued)
