The contractor of the Montague branch railway has finished laying the rails and the train came to Montague yesterday. The road will be ready for traffic in a couple of weeks. It is hoped the authorities will lose no time in getting the train running as it is much needed at this season where the public roads will soon become bad, in all probability, almost impassable for traffic. The train arrived in the afternoon. There was great rejoicing whistles blowing and flags flying. Boys shouted and horses ran away with their carriages but no accidents happened.
