The SNAPSHOT GUILD
IT'S FOOTBALL TIME

Enlargements of long distance shots will often bring out the "action" detail of a football play (left). A shot from the side lines (right).

HOLD that line! Hold that line! Yes, football season is with us again with its excited, yelling crowds, rascally coats and joyous celebrations by supporters of the winning team. What a paradise for the snapshot! He who goes to the game without his camera is missing a golden opportunity. Pictures of the game, the crowds in the grandstands and informal shots of his classmates and friends will furnish him many hours of pleasure year after year as he looks back through his snapshot album. There are countless opportunities for interesting, story-telling pictures at football games. All you have to do is use a little imagination. When you are blocked in the traffic and remark to the girl friend, "Gee, look at that line-up of cars and the crowd at the gate," don't stop with that—take a snapshot. Don't be satisfied with stepping out of the car and just snapping a straight line of cars. Stand on the bumper and shoot down on the traffic and crowds. The results will be much more pleasing than the ordinary, conventional view. The period before the start of the game offers further opportunities for unusual snapshots. For instance, take a picture from the top of the grandstand steps showing the crowds coming up the steps to their seats. A shutter speed of 1/50 of a second will stop the motion of the people as they walk directly toward your camera. Stand on your seat and take a full view picture of the crowds in the grandstand and as you do this you may see some of your friends seated nearby. Attract their attention and as they wave with a cheery, "Hey, Bill," you can snap another interesting, story-telling picture. Even a chance, "blind" shot over your shoulder may bring unusual and pleasing results. See today that your camera is ready for action, load it with film and leave for the game determined to get the kind of pictures you will be proud to show your friends. JOHN VAN GUILDER

Quebec Expects Record Breaker In Men's Votes

(Canadian Press) QUEBEC, Nov. 22—Political leaders look for a record provincial election vote Nov. 25 when the men of Quebec ballot for members of the Legislature among the candidates supporting the Liberal regime of Premier L. A. Taschereau, the Conservative policies of Maurice Duplessis or the Action Libérale Nationale proposals of Paul Gouin's insurgent party.

With the help of women voters in the Dominion general election Oct. 14 Quebec rolled up a total of 1,142,028 votes. But the Quebec Election stipulates electors in the provincial field must be male. 21, British subjects by birth and naturalization and be entered on the electoral list in force on polling day. The women have no vote in the present election.

Electoral lists in effect Oct. 30 when writs were issued stand as the only valid lists. L. P. Geoffrion, Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, has announced. Provision is made in the Quebec Election Act for revision in rural districts for 10 days after issuance of writs but available figures reveal approximately 700,000 qualified to vote.

Prospects are about 550,000 ballots will be cast since the three parties had more than three weeks for campaigning and the percentage is expected to be as high as that of 1931 when 77 per cent of the eligible 689,005 electors cast their ballot. This was the highest percentage ever recorded in the province.

Judges of the Supreme Court, Magistrates, Recorders and anyone absent from Canada for more than one year and a day are barred from voting. Indians living on reservations have no franchise under the Act. Appointed for the life 24 members of the Legislative Council, Quebec's Upper House, are not involved in the election.

The popular vote in previous Quebec elections follows: 1931 1927 1923 Liberal 260,938 187,799 155,310 Conservative 213,255 113,450 116,024 Labor 2,099 4,432 930 Independent 1,146 4,050 930 Ind.-Liberal 7,056 8,232 Ind.-Cons. 5,136 Ind.-Labor 65 Others 18,384 Total 489,686 317,963 290,638

Although Scotland's population is only one-eighth of that of England, the consumption of Canadian flour in Scotland is actually greater than that of England. On the other hand, the imports of Canadian wheat into Scotland are about one-fifth of those of England.

The Central Guardian Quebec Election Recalls Days Of Stormy Politics

(Canadian Press) MONTREAL, Nov. 22—Prevailing political winds in the province of Quebec, where a provincial general election campaign is now in process, have not always been general. While it is necessary to turn the political clock back nearly four decades to find a Conservative regime in power, Quebec nevertheless has decidedly of Conservative complexion at Confederation and the first three administrations were Conservative.

The change in political disposition was associated with two violent political storms. One was a prolonged controversy in 1878 about the powers of the lieutenant-governor; the other was the violent quarrel that surrounded the condemning to death of Louis Riel.

In 1867, Hon. P. J. Chaveau had 51 supporters among the 65 members in the Legislative Assembly when he formed the first Quebec government in Confederation. He was followed by Hon. G. Oulmet and Hon. G. B. Colombe (Charles de Boucherville, both of whom had comfortable majorities. The constitutional issue arose in 1878 when Premier de Boucherville, ignoring a request by Hon. Luc Letellier de Saint Just, the lieutenant-governor, to call a referendum, submitted to him first a bill respecting the North Shore Railway passed in the House without consulting him.

Incensed, Letellier abruptly dismissed the ministry, although de Boucherville remained undefeated in the House, and called on H. G. Joly, Liberal leader, to form a government.

Joly, a French Huguenot, who later took the picturesque name of Joly de Lotbiniere, was knighted and served a term as lieutenant-governor in British Columbia accordingly set up the first Liberal administration in the province. General elections were held and Premier Joly found himself with a majority of one in the House Party designations in the official records were taken as nominal, because the records show the House composed of 35 Conservatives, 28 Liberals and two Independents.

The controversy over Letellier's dismissal of an undefeated ministry waged for several years and became a major issue in the Dominion House. Advice of the Colonial Secretary in England was sought. Eventually Letellier himself was dismissed on the ground he had exceeded his powers.

Joly was defeated after 18 months in office and followed by Conservative administrations followed, the last of which held power for perhaps a shorter period than any ministry on record.

Ill health compelled the retirement of Hon. J. J. R. Es in 1887 and his colleague, Hon. O. T. Tallon, was called upon to form a government. A general election was held and both parties boasted victory.

Louis Riel had been executed two years before and a fierce dispute had arisen for a time threatened to set different groups at each other's throats. The Conservative government of Sir John A. MacDonald at Ottawa had refused to revoke Riel, who was partly of French blood.

Tallon, who had many followers he could muster, faced the Legislature. He was defeated the day it opened. Officially, his administration lived from Jan. 25 to Jan. 27, 1887.

Hon. Honoré Mercier, the magnetic Liberal leader, demonstrated he had the support of the Nationalists in a closely divided House and he was called on to form a government.

After his defeat in 1890, three Conservative regimes followed. The 10th day of 1897, Hon. F. G. Marchand led the Liberals to victory. Since that day all governments in the province have been Liberal.

It was also decided to hold a dance in the school on November 15th. The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows: President, Mrs. Bruce MacAulay (re-elected). Vice President, Mrs. Emmett Cusack (re-elected). Secretary, Kathleen MacDonald. Directors, Mrs. Joseph MacKenna, Mrs. Peter MacKenna and Mrs. Wm. B. Fitzpatrick. Auditors, Mrs. Basil MacDonald and Mrs. Patrick Lacey.

Mrs. A. J. MacDonald invited the members to her home for the next meeting. Roll call to be answered by suggestions for improving Institute. A program consisting of recitations, and contests by Mrs. Joseph MacKenna was much enjoyed. A dainty lunch was served by the ladies, assisted by Mrs. A. J. MacDonald and Miss Kathleen MacDonald. Meeting closed by singing of National Anthem. (Patriot please copy)
