Owing to the rapid growth of his business, Mr. E. L. McDougall has found it necessary to build an addition to his store. He is at the same time renovating the original store. This addition will enable him to conveniently handle the lines of fancy and sporting goods which he has recently added to his customary line of staples. Perhaps the excellent fishing tackle which he stocks will enable the sports to bring home the "biggest fish" just in so many cases as the past which just managed to escape leaving his would-be-owner with nothing but a "fish story" to take home. As a matter of fact a trout was caught here on Dominion Day which tipped the scales at two and three quarter pounds, and another almost equally large was caught on the same date.

Mr. McGowan, student, is supplying the pulpit of the West Point Presbyterian church for the summer.

Terrestrial Heat As Power Source

This is discussed in the New York Herald Tribune by Prof. H. H. Sheldon, of the department of physics in New York University. There are two sources of information that may help us, he says—the volcano, which sometimes supplies us with unwanted data at inopportune times and temperature data taken at deep oil-wells. It would appear that we are "skating on thin ice." We would not have to go through more than twenty or thirty miles to strike something decidedly interesting, Professor Sheldon thinks. He proceeds:

"Just how far we would have to go is difficult to say. Therate of increase of temperature varies over a considerable range. In South Dakota the temperature increases one degree Fahrenheit in forty-five feet. In other localities there is wide divergence. At Fairmount, West Virginia, a temperature of 170 degrees was found in a 7,500-foot well, while at Longmont, Colorado, a temperature of 212 was found at 6,600 feet. This temperature is high enough to boil water at ordinary pressures.

"There was recently published in Tycoos (Rochester) an estimate of the temperature at the center of the earth, based upon average figures for the rate of temperature rise in the last 1,000 feet of the seven deepest wells that have been measured. The staggering figure arrived at was 448,000 degrees Fahrenheit.

"As the author points out, this is unquestionably a ridiculous figure. We have never had temperature measurements taken more than two miles below the surface.

"It is unlikely that the temperature of the interior of the earth would be greater than that of the sun, which is about 11,000 degrees Fahrenheit. On the other hand, this is the outside and not the inside temperature of the sun, the latter is unquestionably very much higher.

"If we compute how far we would have to go to reach a temperature sufficient to supply molten lava, it is apparent that twenty to thirty miles would do it. It is unlikely, though, that at this depth the material is molten, as the pressures would cause the material to behave as a solid.

"On the other hand, there are those who believe that the earth is a cold mass and the radiation which escapes from the surface each year is generated by the disintegration of radium in the rocks. They attribute the heat observed as we go down to this radioactivity or to chemical changes."

If the earth's interior were a freely flowing liquid, we would probably be correct, Professor Sheldon concludes, in assuming that the temperature throughout was about 3,000 degrees. As a fact, experiment shows that, whatever may be its temperature, its elasticity is about like that of rigid steel. Owing to the great pressure and density it probably behaves much like a solid. He goes on:

"Perhaps if we could bore a shaft five miles deep we might supply the world with power indefinitely. But, so far, we lack the machinery to do it. Future generations will doubtless laugh at our feeble attempts and vast expenditures for power."

POLICE MUST MEMORIZE 615 FACES

(British United Press)

LONDON, July 25.—Fifty men in London have begun a task beside which the labors of Hercules were post-prandial amusements. They are the policemen who guard the Houses of Parliament, and they have to recognize and memorize the appearance of 615 members, many of whom they have never seen before.

It is a point of honor with the police at Westminster that no one shall be asked more than once to give a name. When a new member has successfully passed his first policeman within the precincts, he or she may be sure that further passage will be easy.

By some means, the officers seem to be able to convey to one another the name and full descriptive details of each member. On the second of third day the new member will be saluted with, "Good morning, Mr. —" The police who stop the traffic for members outside the House have the most difficult task of all, and it used to be said that they held up the traffic every time they saw a silk hat. In these less formal days, however, this is not a reliable guide, so the officers have to memorize personal details.

Theatres of Glasgow, Scotland are changing the time of evening performances from 7.45, and 7.30, to 7.15 o'clock following complaints against the "late hours."

Son of a locomotive engineer and grandson of a railway signal man, Robert Reid, of New Stevenson, Scotland, has just retired after 52 year's service with one railroad.

IN MEMORIAM

LATE W. E. MATTHEWS

As the shadows of the beautiful evening of Saturday, June 24th were falling over the peaceful village of Hunter River, the people were shocked and saddened to learn that two of its best and most respected men were drowned at Campbell's Mills, New Glasgow which has already been referred to in the Press.

The late W. E. Matthews was born at Hampshire where he spent his boyhood years. He enlisted in the 105 and served overseas, being badly wounded he was invalided to England where he recovered from his wounds. As he was on the eve of returning to the Front the War ended. Returning home he took up railroad work with the C. N. R. of which he was a trusted employee. He was sadly missed in the community as he was a favorite with everyone who knew and came in contact with him. But more especially in the home where his loss can never be replaced. He leaves to mourn a widow and five children, one of which is a helpless cripple, and an only sister, Annie.

Mrs. John Mobbs, of Brookfield who has been bereft of father, mother, and much loved brother in the short space of three years. His passing at the early age of thirty eight years was much regretted as he seemingly had many years of usefulness and was so much needed in the home. The heartfelt sympathy of the whole community goes out to the stricken ones, as was evidenced by the hundreds of people who called to express their sympathy and sorrow with the bereaved ones.

The funeral was held on Tuesday, July 9th. The service was conducted by the Rev. Mr. Chapman. The hymns Nearer My God to Thee, A Few More Years Shall Roll, and Abide With Me were feelingly sung by the large assemblage. After which the remains were tenderly borne to their last resting place in Princetown Cemetery by six of his old comrades of the 105.

Harold Bagnall, John McLeod, Miller Henderson, John D. McDonald, James H. Andrews, Russell Nicholson. The floral tributes were beautiful and included a casket from his wife and family. Wreath Sister Annie, Wreath Returned men of Hunter River, Wreath Spray, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. McMillan, Spray Mr. W. H. McLeod, Spray, Mr. Bruce Diamond, Flowers Mrs. Lorenzo Smith.

CHICAGO'S CHURCH ROLLS SHOW REMARKABLE INCREASE

Chicago, Ill. July 25.—Gangsters population in the world's third largest city has dwindled somewhat in the last year, what with Philadelphia jails and machine guns, but church membership has sprouted upwards.

About 60,000 persons were added to membership rolls of Chicago's 12,000 Protestant churches, Walter R. Mee, Secretary of the church federation reports.

Lutherans led all with 14,935. Presbyterians gained 5,681, Episcopalians, 4,039 Baptists, 2,352 and Methodists, 2,230. The smallest gain was made by United Brethren—1

MODEL ANSWERS CRITICS

Monna Lila, who sat for Van Dongen's painting, "Femme du Monde" (Society Woman), which is the sensation of the Paris Salon, has answered the critics, who declare that it emphasizes the sitter's legs more than her face. Miss Lila says that as a cinema artist, she has a right to show her legs, to which nature has given the classic proportions, without offending public modesty. Von Dongen, noted also for his wonderful beard and his monster studio receptions, is mute on the subject, and evidently is enjoying the tiny temptations his work has aroused.
