Baptists Have

Best Year in Their History

WOLFVILLE, Aug. 31-The past year has been the strongest financially in the history of the church in the Maritimes, it was reported today at the annual convention of the United Baptists being held in the halls of Acadia university here. More than 200 churches have achieved their objective and have been placed on the honor roll, it was stated. The church had been strengthened by the addition of 1,600 members by baptism.

Much discussion centred about the missionary work being done by the Baptist church. It reaches into the Indian, South American, Latvian and Ethiopian fields with much being done in the home field to provide foundations on which to base those efforts which are being put forth abroad. The names of several of those who will go to the mission fields from the Maritime provinces were mentioned and they were highly commended for their action by the speakers of the day who stressed the importance of the step which they had taken.

Concerning the finances of the church it is stated that in many cases the salaries of ministers were less than $1,500 annually. This resulted in inefficient work in many fields.

Saturday morning they left the Island Mr. Perkins received the sad news of the death of her father, Mr. Oswald Gay of Summerside.

terday at a conference between the Maritime Provinces Association and their distinguished guests from the east. The Conference was the conclusion of a series and brought to an end the business side of the visit of the party of Cabinet Members of Parliament, business men and journalists from the Maritimes who have been here for the past few days.

The Conference was featured by an address by Prof. E. D. McPhee of the University of Toronto on the possibilities for marketing Maritime goods in Central Canada. The generally accepted belief that goods from the East would not profitably be sold here was a fact, he declared Mr. McPhee. There was no reason why a tremendous trade could not be built up from East to West. The speaker referred to one or two firms which had tried the experiment of shipping goods to Ontario from the East and had been eminently successful.

The Maritimes had many things which could be sold with advantage in Ontario, the speaker continued. Lack of knowledge of trade conditions and requirements in Ontario was responsible for much of the pessimism, which existed down East about the field for trade in Ontario. This should be remedied by keeping business men in the Eastern Provinces informed of conditions here from time to time. For this purpose and for other reasons, Prof. McPhee suggested the Maritimes should have an agent in Toronto. If energetic action were taken, the speaker felt sure that definite trend from East to West could be established.

In the evening Rev. Dr. John Pringle, the honored pastor emeritus of St. Andrew's Church, Sydney and ex-moderator of the General Assembly, was present at the service and gave a graphic description of his work as a Home Missionary for two years (1925-1927) on a mission field two hundred miles long, on the North Thompson River, British Columbia.

The music at the morning service consisted of two well blended and artistic selections by the Male Quartette of the Glace Bay Salvation Army Corps and an anthem by the choir.

The music in the evening consisted of a soprano solo by Mrs. Dr. Taylor from Gault's Holy City. Mrs. Taylor was in splendid voice. A mixed quartette "Lead Kindly Light" by Dykes was also rendered by Miss Flo Campbell, Mrs. Dr. Rodgeron and Messrs. Sutherland and Malcolm McKinnon.

During his absence, Master Horace McEwen officiated as Organist and gave splendid satisfaction.

The Sabbath School will meet September 8th at 2:30 in the afternoon. Wednesday evening the Teachers of the S. S. will meet in the Church Parlor.

Silver Fox Ranching Industry Grows in Canada

The Monetary Times gives the following splendid review of the fox industry in Canada:
 Fur farming is an industry which has made considerable progress in recent years in the Dominion of Canada, and while it is still regarded in some of the more conservative circles as a highly speculative undertaking, at the same time it appears to be developing rapidly on a sound basis. Further encouragement has been given in recent months to the industry by the campaign against furs taken from animals captured in the steel trap. In the Province of Prince Edward Island black foxes are mentioned officially among the important sources of income for the people there. In a recent issue of Natural Resources, published by the Department of the Interior at Ottawa, some interesting information regarding silver fox ranching is given. According to this article, which was prepared by G. Ennis Smith, superintendent of the Experimental Fox Ranch, Summerside, P. E. I., during the last two years there has been an increase of over 50 per cent. in the price of silver fox furs in spite of the fact that over sixty thousand pelts, from foxes raised in captivity, have been placed upon the market this season, and there is every reason to believe that silver fox furs are a staple commodity for which there will be a steady and increasing demand. The idea appears to have existed in the minds of the public and of some fox breeders as well that silver fox furs have been prized, and therefore, commanded high prices, because of their rarity, and that silver fox ranching was a mere bubble that would burst when these pelts were produced in large quantities. Numerous fox breeders held the idea that the chief hope of making money was by the sale of live foxes and that it behooved them to reap the harvest as quickly as possible. The mistaken view has done great mischief to silver fox ranching as breeders are now beginning to realize. Another contention was that silver fox furs commanded high prices because they could not be limited, and pessimists argued that the good imitations were produced cheaply the bottom would be knocked out of silver fox ranching. But one might as well argue that a greatly increased production of artificial flowers would put the florists out of business. In the early days of silver fox ranching the furs may have commanded, to some extent, high prices on account of their scarcity, but even at that, undoubtedly the greatest factors making for high prices were their rare and excellent qualities.

An analysis of the situation as a whole indicates that silver fox ranching is a well established industry, producing a commodity for which there will be a steady and increasing demand, and while, unfortunately there are some who are exploiting the industry and straining its possibilities, the more intelligent fox breeders are making determined efforts to build up silver fox ranching as a steady and increasing industry. The National Fox Breeders' Association of Canada, in cooperation with the Department of Agriculture, has already established a rigid and efficient system of registration of pedigreed silver foxes in order to improve the standard of the animals, and also a system of co-operative marketing of pelts to prevent undue sacrifices that previously were a cause of great loss of revenue to the industry. At the present time fox ranching is somewhat handicapped through incompleteness of knowledge in connection with the care and management of silver foxes in captivity. As might be anticipated breeding silver foxes in captivity presents certain difficulties that have not to be contended with in the case of other live stock. All the older classes of domesticated animals have been extensively studied along practical and scientific lines for many decades, but even with that knowledge, our domesticated breeding animals do best when turned out to forage for themselves on pastures, whereas, silver foxes in captivity are usually confined to quite small areas and their food is often too restricted solely to the selection made by the feeder, not the slightest opportunity being given the foxes to forage for themselves. Much progress has been made in the study of the various requirements of these animals at the Experimental Fox Ranch. In general it may be said that this information points to the need for ranchers to carry their animals along as far as possible, under conditions similar to those under which the foxes would live if running in the wilds.

Silver fox ranching is an industry which Canada has given the world, but the Dominion's favorable conditions for the production of fur and the knowledge that she has already acquired in silver fox ranching have given her such a start that for several decades other countries will naturally look to her for breeding stock and ranching methods; more especially is this true regarding the province of Prince Edward Island, where the industry was created and nursed through its infancy.
