Modern Etiquette
By Roberta Lee

Q. May the bridal party stop and linger in the vestibule of the church, following the ceremony, to receive best wishes and congratulations?
A. No; it is not good form to do so.
Q. Should a secretary rise when an employer introduces her to a business visitor?
A. Yes, if the secretary is a man; if a girl, no.
Q. Is it permissible to eat the lettuce upon which a salad is served?
A. Yes, if you wish. It is entirely optional.

The Stars Say--
By Genevieve Kemble
For Saturday, October 8

ALTHOUGH it is desired to be a lively day, with creative urges and talents under high stimuli, yet it is probable that over-acting, rash drives, or other tempestuous or turbulent inclinations to forge ahead against large odds, may defeat all constructive objectives. Not only wild and ill-considered moves but want of support from high places may be a challenge. With these, as well as an undertone of treachery, malice, or hint of shady alliances, appearances may be deceptive.

Cook's Corner
BERRY SHERBET

2 cups sugar
1/2 cup light corn syrup
2 cups cereal cream
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 lemon, grated rind and juice
1 1/2 cups crushed berries
3 tablespoons sugar

Beat eggs until light and lemon coloured. Add sugar, blending well. Combine remaining ingredients except the berries and sugar; add to egg mixture. Freeze at low temperature in refrigerator tray until just firm. Remove from tray, whip until light and add crushed berries to which sugar has been added. Pour the mixture back into freezing tray and freeze until firm, about 3 hours. Yield: six servings. Garnish with whole berries.

Any fresh berries may be used. Raspberries and blueberries are especially good.

PROBLEMS CONNECTED WITH CONTACT LENSES

I have written before about contact lenses in which the correcting lens lies underneath the eyelids, and of how much they mean to so many women who have previously done without glasses rather than "look old", with the result that unnecessary and disgusting wrinkles appear at the corners of the eyes and on the forehead. They avoid damage to vision by wearing contact lenses which do not rob the eyes of their natural beauty.

Not only do contact lenses correct vision as do ordinary glasses, but they protect the eyes against undesirable fluids, gases and solids and in many instances replace safety goggles used in industrial plants.

One of the serious eye conditions which can be corrected with contact lenses is keratoconus, a hard cone-shaped deformity which is not helped by ordinary glasses.

Contact lenses are a great help to actors, aviators, chemists, dancers, swimmers and drivers, lecturers, microscopists, engineers, musicians, athletes and surgeons.

However, contact lenses are not free of their problems. The American Committee on Optics and Visual Psychology has authorized a committee composed of members of the four organizations of ophthalmology to investigate all the angles connected with contact lenses—complaints concerning bad fitting of contact lenses, best type, comfort of the patient and expense to the patient. A questionnaire was sent to 2,000 certified specialists of the American Board of Ophthalmology asking for a report from experience and observation on the above points.

Among the recommendations stated by Dr. Conrad Berens, New York, a member of the Committee, in the "Journal of the American Medical Association" are:

1. Medical opinion should be secured in every case before contact lenses are prescribed. 2. Ophthalmologists should establish standards for approving the fitness of technicians who wish to engage in fitting lenses. 3. Investigate why cloudiness of vision sometimes occurs when lenses are correct.

The thought then, as always, is to consult your family physician, who will then refer you to one qualified to properly fit contact lenses.

The Frying Pan
Do not put away a frying pan that smells of fish or onions. Eliminate the odors by putting some vinegar into the pan and bringing it to a boil. Then wash as usual, and all odors will be gone.

Curtains
When ironing straight curtains it is wise always to press lengthwise of the material, as ironing crosswise has a tendency to make the edges wavy.

Painted Walls
Clean spots on painted walls with a cloth moistened in water, to which a small amount of ammonia has been added.

DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS

DOROTHY DIX SAYS—

Romantic Love

Loss Of Appetite, Sleep, Not Essential To Happy Marriage

DEAR MISS DIX: Is the kind of love when one can't eat, sleep and so forth absolutely necessary to make marriage a success? In most marriages don't you think that love is stronger on one side than the other? Is stronger than that of the young man? He loves her very much, but cannot say he loves her desperately. Would it be taking a chance for her to marry him?
A READER

ANSWER: If no one got married except those whose appetites and ability to sleep were affected by the tender passion, there would be a terrific slump in the matrimonial market.

It is only in novels that people in love cease to take an interest in food and sit up all night star-gazing, thinking upon the beloved one and go hot and cold and have palpitations of the heart at the sound of a footstep. In real life men and women get just as hungry when they are in love as they do out of it.

A PITY
It is a pity that the poets and fictionists have set up these impossible and neurotic standards for young people to check their love by, because it makes many level-headed and common-sense young people doubt the state of their affections. They know that nothing has happened to their appetites or their ability to put in eight hours of sound sleep at night. They are perfectly aware that they would not die of a broken heart if they lost the other and so they doubt the good honest love that would take itself out in trying to be a good husband or wife.

Of course, in every love affair one cares more than the other, because one is capable of a deeper affection than the other. But, unfortunately, love is not a bargain. It is a gift and it is literally true that in love it is more blessed to give than to receive and we get more kick out of loving than we ever do out of being loved.

Especially is this true of women, and so it is rather fortunate that unfortunate when the wife is more romantically in love with her husband than he is with her. Because marriage is harder on a woman than it is on a man. She has to make more sacrifices than he does, and it can only be worth while to her if she cares so much for him that just to be near him suffices her and everything she does for him is a joy and a delight.

DEAR MISS DIX: I know a man, an only son, who lives with his widowed mother. He has a strong fear of women, a fear of being dominated by them. He has been loved by some very fine, highly educated girls, but has always broken with them whenever they showed the slightest tendency to boss them. He claims that a college education spoils a girl and makes her determined to rule her husband and make a doormat of him. I am afraid this young man's fear of women will keep him from marrying at all, or make him marry some very inferior girl.
KATE

ANSWER: Probably the young man's mother is one of the possessive kind who has tried to keep him a little boy tied to her apron strings. There are plenty of women of that kind who never let their children have an idea or an opinion of their own and who boss the very life out of them.

But if the young man thinks that he will be able to manage a fool, if he marries one, he is tragically mistaken. The stupider a woman is, the more conceited she is, the more set she is in her opinions, the more determined she is to have her own way about every little thing. Education makes a woman bigger and broader and more tolerant and more just and easier to live with, as well as more interesting as a companion, and, taking it by and large, the college graduate is far less liable to henpeck her husband than is the moron.

ELLEN'S DIARY

By An Island Farmer's Wife

Jamie is enjoying his Fall holidays now, an interval from classes granted to farm children in the interests of "the digging" commencing to be more general now in ours and neighboring communities. Scouting that an outing to the city was in the offing for him, he was off to his home early this morning. An incident in his week, which up to this has brought no disturbing reaction was his vaccination on Monday. He received it without fear, and indeed with some anticipation of adventure, as Rob would "just too see what it's like!" These belong to a favored generation of children in regard to this treatment, we believe, as we hearken back to our own experience in childhood. We can still picture a queue, some with blanched lips, all with a sleeve rolled, and the oh-ooo! of anguish from a nervous child as the instrument used, scraped the flesh. It was a sound such as no other suffering had brought to the old school-room.

But even our experience was less painful than that which our parents had known. "Going to be vaccinated tomorrow?" busy mother-to-us paused a moment in her meal-getting to receive the news, "there's nothing to it nowadays—now that there's plenty of vaccine. Now in my time, we were vaccinated off another child, whose dose had taken. "In spite of this reassurance, which had been perhaps meant only to benefit us, we found presently having suffered in the interval over the prospect, there was plenty "to it" and the weeks that followed. In a memory that has never been effaced by the years we can count the crisp clear stars that kept vigil with us when a childish turning in bed, and a swollen arm had interrupted our dreams.

"Did you mind it Jamie?" we were curious to know, old memories crowding back to mind—remembrances of those present in the school that far away afternoon, of a beclouded Fall day, scattered far from the district of their birth, many a one is now, or gone to join those in a heavenly school—the nice girl or boy, the thoughtless, the rude, the awe-inspiring, the run of the mill that we were, who came back in a flash of memory to us. "Mind it!" Jamie chuckled, "who'd mind it?" "I shook my head recalling the coldly impersonal: "Next!" "That helps little one a lot, you know," he continued. "Doctors are better, nursery rhymes, "Infinitely better," we agreed, blessing those who had given the like of Jamie only pleasant memories of this event were lost of sorrowful ones, to carry with them to journey's end.

Granddaughter was away to town too, accompanying the farmers, who must go to pick up feed there as well as attend to the ends of business which have a way of accumulating on farms if neglected, and must be written off. And the afternoon? Then it was that an underlying thing was commenced, which if ever, has two sides to consider. Granddaughter spoke of one with obvious dislike when she said: "Let's close the door tight!" "Yes," we agreed. "That North wind blows a queer perfume today. But James mentioned it with satisfaction in his tones. "It's great to have it, Ellen—and should certainly go to build up the farm." Clearing Summer sties to the field, the farmers were, load after load of the stuff to add to the heap already there.

And on into the night the dry, wind blows, raising the branches of the old birch tree on the lawn as it steves the moonlight. "The last of September," Jack comments, setting down the last, and preparing to chat, "did you ever see a month slip away so fast?" September, blue skied month and gold, with its "glad days and sad days" all a remembrance now.

Until tomorrow . . . Diary . . . Good-night . . .

Morning Smile

"I didn't forget your birthday, dear, I bought you this beautiful milk coat." "But, darling, you promised me a new car." "I know, precious, but I can't find anybody who's selling imitation autos."

Boos: "How come you're only carrying one sack, when the other men are carrying two?" "Worries 'em!" I suppose they're too lazy to make two trips, the way I do."

How Can I!!!

By Anne Ashley

Q. How can I remove odors from the frying pan?
A. A little vinegar poured into the frying pan while it is still hot will remove the odor of fried onions, and also of fish. Another method is to sprinkle oatmeal in the pan, and shake it over the flame until the meal begins to scorch.

Q. How can I keep the buttonholes of a sweater from stretching and becoming unshapely when laundering?
A. Sew the buttonholes together before laundering.

Q. What can I use as a substitute for the misplaced oil can?
A. Use an old medicine dropper. The drops can be counted even better than when using the oil can.
