in "Alibi Ike"
At Prince Edward

Joe E. Brown is always good for a big laugh. His is the film favorite of all kids in whatever part of the world motion pictures are shown, and taking the children to see Joe E. Brown, has become as pleasant a diversion for grown ups as taking them to the circus.

Now Joe E. has the kind of a role his fans have always sought for him, and the immortal humor of the late Ring Lardner combined with the comedian's own talents, made the Warner Bros. home run comedy "Alibi Ike" which opened yesterday at the Prince Edward Theatre, one of the season's smash hits.

Ring Lardner knew more about baseball than any author of his time, and his stories of their idiosyncrasies and habits made him famous. "Alibi Ike" was the most popular of them, and all the side splitting fun has been incorporated into the film version.

As the title would imply, Joe E. is a great ball player who always has an alibi, no matter whether he is right or wrong. This habit not only brought him his nickname, but almost cost him his girl, and led him into a series of adventures as thrilling as they are ludicrous.

That Joe is better than ever goes without saying, for he has a better and funnier role than usual, and one in which he is given a real opportunity. The story has more romance than is usual in a Joe E. Brown comedy, the feminine lead being taken by Olivia de Havilland.

Others in the cast who do remarkable work are Ruth Donnelly, Roscoe Karns, William Frawley, Eddie Shubert, Paul Harvey, Joseph King, Joseph Crehan, Adrian Rosley and a score of ball players.

Broadway to Remain Actorless On Sundays

NEW YORK, Aug. 15—Law or no law, actors won't act on Sunday next season.

The League of New York Theatres (comprising most of the producers and managers) is resigned to that prospect today.

For years, Manhattan has been agitating for the privilege of seeing stage productions seven days a week. But ancient statutes of more or less indigo hue forbade them on Sunday. At last session, the legislature not liberal, amended the state laws to permit Sunday shows. And everybody was happy.

Everybody but the actors. Although many of them had protested that movies, club shows and benefits had been permissible while legitimate attractions were banned on Sunday, they took a different tack when the lawmakers made it possible for them to work seven days a week.

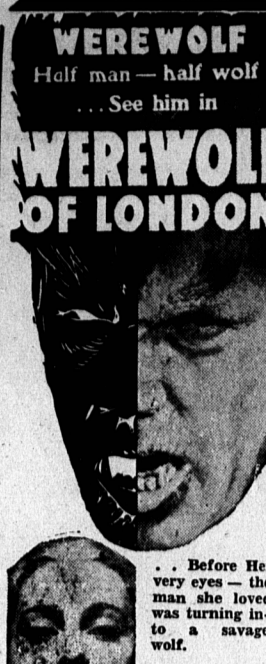

When the managers seized on the opportunity to bolster box office receipts and grab a share of the Broadway trade on the Sabbath, the performers hedged. They pointed out that even an actor needs a day's rest a week. And a goodly percentage announced they would demand double pay for Sunday work.

The managers, seeing golden opportunity slipping away, called a conference.

They conferred and wound up just where they started. No real decision was made on Sunday shows. As a compromise, a referendum among Actors Equity members was agreed on.

Results of the referendum will be announced early next month. But advance reports on the balloting indicate most of the votes will be against Sunday shows unless another day of leisure is granted (producers don't like that idea) or unless double pay is given for Sunday performances.

"Werewolf Of London" At Capitol

Based on the legend of the werewolf, this latest Universal picture aims at nothing except entertainment; entertainment of the thrilling, chilling type that has always pleased audiences the world over.

"Werewolf of London" is a story of a cultured English gentleman who, in carrying out his hobby of securing strange flowers from the far corners of the earth, finally meets with a fabled werewolf in the mountains of far-off Tibet. The werewolf bites him in the arm, and then he knows, according to the fable, that he is doomed to turn into a wolf each month during the full of the moon. The only thing that can prevent this terrible thing from happening is a plant called the "wolf flower."

Henry Hull, in the role of this scientist, finds the wolf flower, and brings several specimens back to England. But then comes the difficult task of keeping the flowers alive. They bloom only in the light of the moon, so he constructs a laboratory in which he creates artificial moonlight. And then thieves break in and steal his precious blossoms and he is left to the fate of becoming a wolf. Frantically he strives to avert the transformation. Frantically he watches the hair grow on his hands and face. He becomes a wolf and runs the darkened streets of London bringing death to the innocent and suffering to himself, for the next morning when he awakes he is a man again, but knows what he has done during the dark hours of the night.

Swordfish Puts Up Good Fight

(C. F. By Guardian's Special Wire.)
NORTH SYDNEY, N. S., Aug. 14.—Maddened by harpooned thrushes a giant swordfish lashed back viciously at its captor, E. C. McLean, veteran Cape Dauphin fisherman, today and ran its sword through the boat.

The impact almost capsize the craft, and it was with difficulty that McLean saved himself from being tossed into the sea.

He won the battle however, and brought his prize to port wildly applauded by scores who had lined the shore to witness the thrilling encounter. The boat was not badly damaged.

Several days ago Mr. McLean was hauling in his Salmon net and found a large sized Tuna viciously trying to disengage itself without success.

Compass And Car Take Women Through Australia

A compass, a brave little car, and two women made a trek across Australia, which gave to Mrs. Mary Ponder a unique distinction among women adventurers. The trip, made in a mature Chevrolet car, which its two passengers dubbed "Great Heart," led across uncharted country, where only the compass still told direction, through beds of creeks and narrow streams, and also through running streams, where the shallow spots made the crossing possible. Mrs. Ponder is overseas secretary of the Mother's Union of the Church of England and makes her home at Mary Summer House, Westminster, London. She was recently an interesting visitor in Winnipeg, the guest of Archbishop and Mrs. S. P. Matheson.

Accompanying her on the Australian "crawl" was a "Gulder." Camps were arranged as night came on, food prepared and repairs made. Directions were given by friendly ranchers when their homes were reached, and the hospitably many of the families who were living in the district were gladly accepted by the trekkers.

Only one accident marred the trip, said Mrs. Ponder in talking it over with a representative of the Free Press. She was driving across a stream and after the car was carefully led down the steep bank and they were well started when a whirlpool caught them, throwing the car against a bank and tree. It was a hundred and thirty miles to the nearest forge, and there "Great Heart" had to go, drawn at first by bullocks, and later by truck.

"The growth of the unions has been almost unbelievable," Mrs. Ponder remarked in discussing the work. "In 32 countries some 80,000 women are carrying on the prayer union. Particularly in the Sudan, in Guinea, in Africa and New Zealand it is forging ahead. When the Baby week was held one of the clinics standing highest in the exhibition of work was of the Sudan, and trained entirely by native nurses," she said.

Mrs. Ponder, a fresh faced English woman, tall and slim, is charming, and her blue eyes sparkle with humor and interest as she tells of her work. She was enrolled in a very old church in Hampshire at Mattingley, which is mentioned in the Doomsday book, and she now makes her headquarters at the house named after the founder of the unions. Mrs. Ponder has completed a circle of the world, and visited many of the unions of the 32 countries in which it has developed and has a familiar knowledge of the problems of the different groups.

He considered Christianity, educational institutions, the stage and the League of Nations "the greatest powers for good" in the modern world.

Noted Singer Must Learn To Sing Again

(By John Lear)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)
(A.P. By Guardian's Special Wire)
CHICAGO, Aug. 15.—Amelia Gal 11-Curl, internationally famous prima donna, must learn to sing all over again.

For 15 years—through the zenith of her brilliant opera career—the diva gave the world sweet music from a throat half blocked by goitre. By sheer will power, she forced her beautiful notes on a devious detour through her windpipe.

Today, the tumor—"potato," she called it—was gone. Her throat was cleared of its old problem, and filled with a new.

The successful operation that removed the 6-1-4 ounce obstruction Saturday doubled the amount of air she could hold. She must now accustom herself to control the increased volume so she can produce the same clear tones.

"The re-learning lessons begin tomorrow in Henrotin Hospital, where the singer was resting comfortably today. Her surgeon, Dr. Arnold Kegel, said, "no complications had developed."

Profit Taking Sets In On New York Market

(By Frank MacMillen, Associated Press Financial Writer)
NEW YORK, August 14.—Industrial specialties in considerable numbers were able to buck profit-taking pressure in the Stock market today which held most of the list to small losses or gains.

Alcohol, farm equipment and supply shares, many of the oils and such industrials as allied Chemical and General Electric, bettered the generally ragged showing of the body of the market.

The net result of the day's dealings was a small loss as measured by the Associated Press average of 60 stocks, which declined .1 of a point at 48.8. Industrials held even on the average, while the Utilities and rails shaded lower.

Turnover in the Stock Exchange was very active at the beginning of the week. Volume was 1,940,200 shares.

Gains of four to five points were registered by Allied Chemical at 165, American Agricultural Chemicals at 55 1-2 and Cuban American Sugar at 71, while Goodrich at 52 1-2, Lambert at 26, Owens-Illinois Glass at 97 and United Carbon at 60 5-8 were each up to three points. Such recent leaders as U. S. Steel, American Telephone, Sears Roebuck, Santa Fe, Chrysler and American Can were fractionally lower.

In the Canadian list advances of from one to two points were chalked up. McIntyre-Porcupine, Noranda and Hiram Walker. Fractional gains included Canadian Pacific, International Nickel, Dome Mines, Distillers-Segars, taking prices to port widely applauded by scores who had lined the shore to witness the thrilling encounter. The boat was not badly damaged.

Several days ago Mr. McLean was hauling in his Salmon net and found a large sized Tuna viciously trying to disengage itself without success.

Want Intercolonial Railway Operated

(Canadian Press)
FREDRICKTON, N.B., Aug. 15.—A demand that steps be taken immediately to have the Intercolonial Railway operated as it was prior to 1912, with its management at Moncton, is now being presented to the Government at Ottawa by the New Brunswick government according to a statement given out at last night's meeting of the provincial cabinet.

Declaring that the operation of this railway by the Canadian National Railways had prejudiced materially the interests of the producers, importers and shippers of New Brunswick, and had affected seriously her economic and industrial development, the statement follows in full:

"The government has been giving its attention to the transportation problems confronting the people of New Brunswick, which have been weighing heavily upon the economic life of the province.

"Under the abnormal conditions that existed during the war period, a change was made in the operation of the Intercolonial Railway, by which eventually its management passed into the hands of the Canadian National Railways Company.

"The operation of this railway by the incorporated company is a violation of the confederation arrangement, under which it was intended the line should be operated by the Federal Government essentially as a service institution.

"The operation of the railway by the Canadian National Railways Company has prejudiced materially the interests of the producers, importers and shippers of New Brunswick, and has seriously affected her economic and industrial development.

Man's Hobby Started Big Canning Industry

WISBECK, Aug. 15.—Twenty years ago a Cambridgehire farmer took up fruit canning in his home as a hobby. His wife was not amused. So he gave up his hobby and went for three months to the United States, writes a special correspondent of the Morning Post.

Today, S.W. Smedley, the farmer in question, is managing director of a firm of canners which controls nine factories in Great Britain, employs over 4,000 workers, and keeps thousands of acres of farmland under permanent and profitable cultivation.

Mr. Smedley, who conducted me over his Wisbeck headquarters, observed at the end of the tour: "I have never lost a penny in the canning business and I hope I never shall."

Such, in epitome, is the tale of the English canning industry—twelve years ago a dream, eight years ago a novelty, today a flourishing and expanding reality.

Mr. Smedley and his business rivals have gained a foothold in a market which until a few years ago was monopolised by the United States. The benefits of an expanding market have spread into scores of supplementary industries. The Wisbeck factory alone produces to the value of 1,000 pounds a week from farmers in the neighborhood.

It is claimed for the modern canning industry that there is nothing which it cannot "can." Next week 250,000 tins of peas will be turned out from the Wisbeck factory every day. Within a few weeks peas will give place to French beans, French beans to red currants, and red currants to celery. The seasonal products of various fruits and vegetables working at full pressure until the end of September.

"There is no reason why every fruit or vegetable that Britain can grow should not be supplied in the canned form from British factories," said my guide.

All round us endless chains were rushing peas, automatically sorted and graded, into their boiling baptism. Tins were hergetically sealed at the rate of 64 a minute and sunk into massive boilers for final cooking. Again the endless chains took up the task and ran the finished ment at Ottawa that steps be immediately taken to have the Intercolonial operated as it was prior to 1912 with its management at Moncton.

Performed Sinus Trouble on Himself

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—A 40-year-old Trinidad oil driller, who performed a sinus operation on himself a year ago without an anaesthetic and then came here to have doctors do a "real job of it," couldn't understand tonight why hospital attendants were a bit bewildered at the success of his crude but effective method.

He is Charles Eggert, 250 pounds who said he is anxious to "get back to my string of tools" in Port of Spain now that he has "got the sinus trouble licked."

The left side of his face puffed out with surgical dressing and a silver tube buried in his nose. Eggert said he had pushed a silver tube up his nose to break through the nostril bone into the left antrum of his face to release the pressure of an infection that had formed in that lower cavity of his skull.

He said the reason he didn't come to New York for the original operation was "he was too busy drilling an oil well."
