By MARY KNIGHT

PARIS, Sept. 9.—(U. P.)—To have and to hold, when it comes to beautiful clothes, is the secret wish in the hidden recesses of every real woman's heart. Even if otherwise there seems nothing particularly feminine about her, her strictly tailored attire will prove that she did not choose it in a haphazard fashion.

Bows can be severe or frivolous depending on how they are tied and of what they are made. Some types of silk and satin and taffeta are like mischievous children that refuse to stay still a second, and dance and hop and skip around fluttering this way and that all the time, while other types have passive natures. They stay where they are put and never so much as turn their smart heads this way or that. Even when breezes blow they seem to show real will power and defy them to move a loop, or a loose end.

We have in mind just such a bow made of white satin with almost severe contour of black fall. The bow ties closely at the black dots. It is actually on the blouse that is worn with a plain, neck on the outside of the left shoulder. With the coat on one loop of the bow goes over the shoulder and the other loop and two ends remain in front.

For The Cook

DELICATE PUDDING
½ cup rice.
1½ cups water.
2 cups milk.
Yolks of 3 eggs.
Whites of 3 eggs.
½ cup sugar.
A little salt.
½ teaspoon vanilla.
Wash rice thoroughly. Boil in water until almost tender. Add milk and cook until the rice is soft. Add the yolks of eggs beaten with sugar and salt. When removed from fire add vanilla and fold in beaten whites of 2 eggs. Add ¼ cup sugar to the other egg white (beaten stiff) and spread on top for meringue. Brown slightly in the oven.

Etiquette

By Roberta Lee
Q. Is it proper for one to lean over the table to shake hands, when being introduced?
A. Never; it shows ill-breeding.
Q. Where is the proper place for a bachelor to entertain?
A. At a hotel, club, or home.
Q. Is it proper to decline to play bridge, when asked by your hostess, if one feels that he lacks skill?
A. Decline, but explain.

The members of the Jubilee Women's Institute held their monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Hamilton Gamble on Wednesday evening Sept. the second.

The sad death occurred, Saturday September the fifth when it became known that Patrick Abraham Noonan, little son of Mr. and Mrs. Austin Noonan, Searletown had passed away after a few hours illness at the age of three and a half year. Pat as he was called was a bright and lovable child and by his bright ways and pleasant smile won the hearts of all who knew him. He leaves to mourn his sorrowing parents, four brothers and one sister, Anthony, Ivan, Layton, Norbert, and one sister, Pertle. Much sympathy is expressed for the bereaved family in their sudden sorrow.

Would Complete Honesty Before Marriage Make for Happier Wedded Couples? — Are Handsome Funerals Necessary to Show Respect for the Dead?

Dear Miss Dix—If the actual facts in the case were brought out, half of the marriages could be invalidated on the grounds that the wedding rings are goods got under false pretenses.

In order to get a girl for a wife, or capture a man for a husband, men and women camouflage every taste, thought and feeling, and pretend to be what they think the other one wants them to be until they make the marriage ceremony nothing but a gold-brick transaction.

Under such circumstances, pledging a couple to "love, honor and cherish" each other is like giving a signed blank check to a stranger, who may bankrupt the trusting giver.

Instead of trying to hide their real natures from each other before marriage, it should be a time of the fullest self-revelation for people. If there exists incompatibility of temperaments; if they hold different beliefs and look at life from a different angle; if they have different ideals and aspirations; if they even have different tastes in cooking and a different God, instead of concealing it, why don't they turn the spotlight on it and see that they were never destined for each other and that they could never live together in peace and harmony?

Before marriage is the time for people to lay all of their cards on the table and call the game off before they have gambled away their happiness.

BOB.
Answer: These are true words, and worthy of serious consideration. Especially do I commend them to the young, for it is true that most marriages are contracted on a basis of misrepresentation that would land the perpetrators in jail if they carried on any other business as crookedly.

Courtship is conducted on a basis of lies. The young man who tells a girl she is the most beautiful creature in the world doesn't believe a word of what he is saying. He has seen dozens of prettier girls, and she is twin sister to a score of other girls he knows, but he knows it makes a hit with her to make her believe that she has hypnotized him. So she marries him under the deluded belief that she has cast a spell over him that makes him see her as she would like to be, instead of as she is.

Before marriage men are reckless about the way they spend money on a girl. They lavish presents on her. They ride her around in taxis and cars. They take her to high-priced restaurants and cabarets. Often they spend far more than they can afford. Always they are liberal and generous, with the result that after marriage many a woman gets the shock of her life by finding that she has married a tightwad instead of a spender and that the man she thought had ample means is as poor as Job's turkey.

Nor are women any more honest with men. Why, the average man has never really seen the woman he marries until the honeymoon begins to wane and she takes off her hand-made complexion and he finds that the face that launched a thousand ships for him is often enough to stop the clock.

Also he finds out, about the same time, that the matrimonial bargain he has got is not as was represented in many respects. He has been led to believe, for one thing, that the girl he led to the altar looked upon him as an oracle, and asked nothing better of fate than to sit at his feet and burn incense before him.

Likewise, the girl had "sold" herself to him, commercially speaking, by being so sweet and amiable that butter wouldn't melt in her mouth and by looking so soft and pliable that he never doubted that he could mold her to his taste.

But before he has been married a month he has found out that she has an unsuspected temper concealed about her person; that she is as set in her ways as a piece of granite and that, so far from thinking her perfection, she has set about to change everything about him from his politics and religion to his necktie.

Certainly no other one thing in the world would do so much to make happy marriages as for men and women to be honest with each other before marriage. But there would be mighty few marriages if they knew beforehand what they were getting!

DOROTHY DIX.
Dear Dorothy Dix—I work in an establishment in which several hundred persons are employed. Scarcely a month passes by that some one has not a death in his family, and the poor husband or father or son or daughter gives the deceased a funeral that puts them into debt for months or years to come. They say they do this as a mark of respect to the dead, but I do not believe the dead, who loved us, want to make life harder for the living. I think "show" funerals are the "bunk," don't you?

WILLIAM.
Answer: It always seems to me, William, that what we call "a handsome funeral," with its enormous expense, its long lines of carriages and automobiles, its costly flowers, its black-swathed mourners, is a relic of barbarism that ought to be abolished by enlightened and civilized people.

Such a funeral bankrupts a poor family. Often it plunges them into debt for years. Little children are starved, old people denied comforts and boys and girls must forego their educations in order to pay for the splurge made over the unconscious clay to which neither hardship nor luxury mean anything. It is sardonically humorous that sometimes almost the only ride in a motor that a poor, hard-worked old man and woman ever have is in the ornate hearse in which they are borne to their graves; the only silken cushion their heads ever lie upon is in their coffins, and those to whom no one ever gave a posy in life have their biers heaped with expensive floral tributes.

But many foolish poor people feel that they have to go to this ruinous extravagance because it is customary; because they think it is expected of them and because they are afraid their friends will think that they are showing some disrespect to the dead if they do not do so. That is one way of looking at the subject.

Another is that to many people all of this planning of a big funeral and the excitement is a real alleviation of their grief. Their pride solaces their sorrow and for years afterward they like to talk about what a great occasion it was and remember who was there. And, undoubtedly, the pleasure of getting her mourning and having new clothes carries many a bereaved widow through the first days of her loss.

So that's that, and whether it is "bunk" or not depends upon how you feel. Human nature is a queer thing. And perhaps none of us is so self-contained that he does not long for sympathy when he is in trouble and to feel that when he weeps he does not weep alone.

JUST A TYPOGRAPHICAL ERROR
ORRINGTON, Me., Sept. 9 — This village was named "Orring-ton" by mistake. It was planned to call it "Orangetown," but when articles of incorporation were drawn up in 1788 the name, through an error in copying the application, was spelled "Orington."

What the Fashionables are Wearing

Illustrated Dressmaking Lesson Furnished With Every Pattern
By Annabelle Worthington

Almost any supple woolen, canton-faille silk crepe, flat crepe silk and crepe satin would be suitable for this model.

The original in black crepe satin is much favored with the younger set. It may be worn for town for street or to the afternoon bridge. A dainty note is the pinkish-beige crepe satin rolled collar with jabot ends. The beige crepe appears again in the trimming pieces at the wrists.

The unusual cut of the hip peplum flounce gives it smart individuality, found only in the higher priced models.

And it's all so simple to make it. It's really amazing.

Style No. 571 may be had in sizes 16, 18, 20 years, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust.

Size 36 requires 4 1/4 yards 39-inch with 1/2 yard 39-inch contrasting.

Black crepe marocain is also very effective in this model, as is wine-red canton-faille crepe.

Be sure to fill in the size of the pattern. Send stamps or coin (coin preferred).

Price of pattern 15 cents.

SEDALIA, Mo., Sept. 9—Arnold Heman, seven, may be young, but he is handy with his hands. Arnold is exhibiting a "crazy-quilt" at the state fair this year.

Acids in Stomach Cause Indigestion

CREATE SOURNESS, GAS AND PAIN. HOW TO TREAT.
Medical authorities state that nearly nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble, indigestion, sourness, burning, gas, bloating, nausea, etc., are due to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach. The delicate stomach lining is irritated, digestion is delayed and food sour, causing the disagreeable symptoms which every stomach sufferer knows so well.

Artificial digestants are not needed in such cases and may do real harm. Try laying aside all digestive aids and instead get from any druggist some Bismarck Magnesia and take a teaspoonful of powder or four tablets in water right after eating. This sweetens the stomach, prevents the formation of excess acid and there is no sourness, gas or pain. Bismarck Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and is the most efficient form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

Once taste its rich, full flavour and you'll want it all the time.

WITH ALMA ARCHER
If I were a boy in college, or even if I were a girl in college, and so far as that goes if I were just anybody going somewhere reasonably often, I'd see to it that I owned a theatrical wardrobe trunk.

These are not outstandingly smart looking trunks, but they are marvelously constructed for durability which is what show people demand of their luggage. With a theatrical trunk, you can be reasonably sure that it will not only take your clothes to wherever they're going, but bring them home as well, an obligation which no small number of brands won't undertake after about three trips. I used to think some one might believe me silly for owning a theatrical piece of luggage when I didn't need cues in my vocation, but I changed my mind after my ordinary trunk fell apart once on a station platform, distributing far and near my most personal baby ribbons and what not.

Albany And Vicinity
Mr. and Mrs. G. William Trainor and baby George accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. James Greenan, Kinokora, were recent visitors to Charlottetown.

The marriage took place on Thursday evening, September the 3rd at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Sobey of Searletown of their daughter Miss Ruth to Mr. Hampton MacLean of Summerside in the presence of the immediate relatives. Rev. Mr. Archibald performed the ceremony. The couple were unattended. The ceremony was performed under a lovely arch of white dahlias. An enjoyable supper was served to the wedding guests after the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. MacLean will reside on Harvard St. Summerside. Mr. MacLean is a popular member of the staff of the Summerside C.
