His Excellency and Princess Alice Are Proper Titles

Throughout the Dominion there is considerable uncertainty regarding correct titular designations for the new Governor General and his consort. This is understandable because the position is unusual in Canada.

The Earl of Athlone is correctly referred to as "the Governor General", and at second reference may be styled "His Excellency." The form "His Excellency the Governor General" is rarely used, the term "Governor General" being considered more dignified.

Princess Alice, as daughter of Prince Leopold, Duke of Albany, and fourth son of Queen Victoria, retains her Royal title. She should never be referred to as "Her Excellency", but invariably as "Her Royal Highness." Shortest and most usual form of address and reference is simply "Princess Alice."

The expression "Their Excellencies" is incorrect and never used in this regime. The Governor General and Princess Alice, when mentioned together, should be referred to as "His Excellency and Her Royal Highness."

Princess Alice should never be referred to as the "Countess of Athlone," but the title "Princess Alice, Countess of Athlone," is correct and this may be shortened to "Princess Alice." The designation "Her Royal Highness, Princess Alice," is rarely used.

When the Governor General is referred to by name he should be designated the Earl of Athlone, and it may be made slightly more formal by adding K. G. Other letters need only be added when the most formal designation is required. In this case the Governor General's full titles are: Major-General the Right Honorable the Earl of Athlone K. G., P. C., G. C. B., G. M. M. G., G. C. V. O., D. S. O. F. R. S., A. D. C.

ARMISTICE, 1918 IS NEWS TO THEM

PUERTO MALDONADO, Peru, July 7 —(CP) — A white colony found after more than a quarter-century in the jungle fastness of Peru wants to stay there but would like to keep in touch with the rest of the world now with that "newfangled thing" called radio.

Two Peruvian army fliers, accompanying a Swedish - American expedition exploring the Colorado River, found the group. The fliers said the settlement, made up entirely of Peruvians, is at the mouth of the Pinquen River, a tributary of the Colorado.

The inhabitants, offspring of families of rubber collectors who remained on the Pinquen after the crash of the rubber industry, welcomed the fliers jubilantly. They plied the two pilots with an endless stream of questions concerning events during the last 25 years. The First Great War peace and the new war were news to them.

Despite their primitive life, members of the colony still have the habits of civilized peoples.

ARGYLE SHORE SCHOOL CLOSING

The public examination was held in the schoolroom on Friday afternoon, June 28th, with a goodly number of parents and visitors present.

The pupils were examined in their studies by their teacher, Miss Vivian Howatt.

Erma MacPhail and Helen MacDougall were awarded "The MacLean Senior Writing Certificates" Helen MacDougall also received her Grade VIII Certificate.

On behalf of the pupils, Helen MacDougall read a farewell address to the Teacher and Linda Inman presented her with a beautiful gift.

The pupils and visitors were then treated to ice cream by the teacher.

The visitors expressed satisfaction with the year's work and regretted that the teacher was leaving.

After complimentary remarks by those present, the singing of the National Anthem brought a pleasant afternoon to a close.

ON POLICE BEAT AWAITING CALL

LONDON, July 9—(CP)—Carrying a thermometer in one pocket and a pair of handcuffs in the other, Gordon Ayre of California paces his beat as a war reserve policeman while waiting to join the Canadian Active Service Force. The "cuffs" are a reminder of his days as a motorcycle cop in California, and the thermometer of the way he got here—by working as assistant to a ship's surgeon.

Ayre came here with the Canadians in the last war but authorities found he was only 15 years old and sent him home. He joined the military police a year later and then served in an expedition to Russia.

NAZI WAR PLANS WITH NUTRITION

LONDON, July 7 —(CP) — If Germany is able to maintain supplies her resistance will not be broken on the nutrition front as it was in the First Great War, according to Dr. J. C. Drummond, professor of bio-chemistry at London University.

He told the Royal Institute in a paper reported in the British Medical Journal that German nutrition experts played a big part in making war plans for the Reich. Existing German rations are based on the principle that a "peasant diet" of "high extraction" —wholemeal bread, plenty of vegetables and potatoes and some dairy produce in the form of cheese or separated milk —provides all the essentials of sound nutrition.

Dr. Drummon, who is scientific adviser to the ministry of food, said the German public is not at present getting so good a diet because potatoes and vegetables are in very short supply owing to the severe winter.

CUBA IS WARM IN ELECTIONS

HAVANA, July 9— (CP)—Cuba's general elections come July 14. The most active campaign ever seen in Cuba is being waged by Senor Fulgencio Batista and Dr. Ramon Grau San Martin, presidential candidates.

Batista, ex-chief of the Cuban army, and Dr. Grau San Martin, a former revolutionary President of the Republic, lead the government and opposition parties, respectively.

The Agrarian party has its own presidential candidate, Dr. Reinaldo Marquez Camacho, Havan University professor.

In the constituent assembly elections last Nov. 15, the seven political parties forming the Social-Democractic coalition backing Batista got 703,721 votes; the opposition, led by Dr. Grau San Martin, cornered only 271,622.

Batista was the army sergeant who on Sept. 4, 1933, led a coup d'etat which ousted all commissioned officers. For years he could have had the presidency by another coup, but he chose to resign his army command and leave it to the voters to decide whether he should be president or retire from public life.

RECALLS GREATS OF OTHER TIMES

TORONTO, July 9—(CP)—Canadian newspaperman for 44 years, including 14 years at Ottawa, Paul Bilkey, editor-in-chief of the Montreal Gazette, has had a wide opportunity to consider "Persons, Papers and Things." He has written of them in a whimsical way in a book of this name published by the Ryerson Press. Sub-headed "casual recollections of a journalist with some flounderings in philosophy" the work is bright in anecdote and retrospect, a pleasant tonic in the severity of current reading.

Wasn't Stumped Even by Hitler

WASHINGTON, July 5 —(CP)— Norman H. Davis, head of the American Red Cross, is one man who won an argument with Hitler.

It was in 1937, and Davis, the roving ambassador, was in Europe on disarmament. He talked for two hours with the chancellor. Hitler spoke of the American Civil War, and how badly the North had treated the South. He said that was the way with France and Germany after the First Great War.

Davis' eyes twinkled as he replied: "Now we are on ground which I know. I am from the South. It was 13 years after that war before Southern representatives were permitted back into the American Congress. And it was only nine years after the First Great War that Germany was invited into the League of Nations. From some aspects France has treated Germany generously."

Hitler laughed and said: "I see I have chosen a bad example."

More than any other among the diplomats who have tried to patch up Europe's wounds from the previous war, Davis has been associated with patient, persistent, tolerant visits in one capital after another, preaching co-operation. He has served under Presidents Wilson, Hoover and Roosevelt.

Since 1937 he has been chairman of the American Red Cross and now is charged with direction of the $20,000,000 America has been asked to pour into the basket for Europe's refugees.

Mr. Davis' life-long disarmament hopes lie smoldering in the ruins of Flanders. He says: "America must become disciplined. America must make sacrifices today that are still only half realized. We must work. Look at France and England. They were forcing their people to lie on softer beds through the very years Hitler was teaching Germans to lie on a bed of thorns.

Orangemen Hold Annual Parade At Brookfield

The members of the Queen's County Orange Lodge and sister organization held their annual parade and service at Brookfield Presbyterian Church last Sunday evening. The service was conducted by the Rev. Bro. Dr. Thompson of Brookfield, chaplain of the Queen's County Lodge.

About 150 members of the lodge participated in the parade which was marshalled by Bro. W. C. Burke, Charlottetown. The L. O. A. pipe band under the direction of Pipe Major Joseph Duncan was in attendance.

Bro. Thompson welcomed the visiting members of the L. O. A. and L. O. B. A. on behalf of the trustees and session. He gave a very inspiring address urging the congregation to increase their praying during these troublesome times and also stressed the need for greater faith in the outcome of the war.

After the service the members of the lodges gathered at the Orange Lodge Hall where Bro. C. W. S. Bentley presided and welcomed Grand Master P. M. McCaull who recently returned from attending the Grand Lodge at Vancouver, B. C. As Grand Master Brother McCaull was called upon to speak and he said that the most important proceeding of the meeting at Vancouver was the pledging of the Orangemen a minimum of ten thousand dollars to the Red Cross.

A vote of thanks moved by Bro. T. V. Moore P. G. M. and seconded by Bro. E. C. Holm P. G. M. was tendered by Bro. Thompson.

The meeting closed with the National Anthem.

Say No Better Army Hospital Than Canada's

By PAT USSHER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, July 5 —(CP) — The finest military hospital in Britain shortly will be ready to receive members of Canada's fighting forces wounded in war.

Officers of the Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps are convinced that the Canadian Red Cross Hospital, nearing completion in the quiet of the countryside, surpasses anything else of its kind here.

Built and fully equipped by the Canadian Red Cross Society, it will shortly be turned over to the R. C. A. M. C., which will staff it. The property, situated on a private estate, has been leased for a nominal rental of one shilling yearly.

Costing approximately $1,000,000, it has accommodation under normal conditions for 60 officers and 480 men. If necessary it can take as many as 750 men.

Canadian newspapermen on a visit to the hospital found it occupied by an army of workmen. Construction began last January but frost delayed the foundation work for a month after that. Packages of equipment were being unloaded by men of the R. C. A. M. C.

Officers paid tribute to the work of the men of the unit —No. 5 General Hospital R. C. A. M. C.— in helping convey tons of freight from a nearby railway station. Captain Alec O'Hara, from Kenora, Ont., quartermaster of the unit, pointed to the big comfortable beds and described hwo they had been shifted from trains onto trucks, then onto trolleys, then taken on handcarts into the wards. All the packing cases were being salvaged, he said, and were fetching more money for the Canadian Red Cross than they originally cost in Canada.

The array of equipment includes tables and chairs from Stratford, Ont., and mattresses from Montreal; wheel stretchers from Woodstock, Ont., and an operating table from Toronto. Sterilizing equipment was brought from Madison, Wis., because none was available in Canada.

Especially impressive was the up-to-date kitchen. Its modern fittings were pointed out with pride by Capt. O'Hara. They include a battery of coke-burning ovens, giant steam kettles in which anything can be cooked, electric hot plates, and a cold roof with capacity for a fortnight's supply of food. Heating, ventilation and humidity are controlled by special apparatus fixed to the ceiling.

In the kitchen, ready to go into action when the hospital opens, was a veteran soldier and chef, Corporal John W. Sharley, who used to live in Winnipeg. Corporal Sharley was a chef of the Royal Fusiliers in the first Great War and has resumed his old job for the R. C. A. M. C.

"I'm as ready as the kitchen is," he said.

Equipment Work

Col. George Nasmith of Toronto, deputy commissioner of the Canadian Red Cross Society in London, mentioned the complexity of the task of obtaining equipment and supplies for a hospital of this kind. He paid tribute to the way in which this has been accomplished. This purchasing job has been in the hands of Major C. A. Scott of Toronto, well-known civil engineer who served in the last war with the Canadian Engineers.

Col. C. L. T. Arthur, well-known Winnipeg doctor who served with the Canadian forces in the First Great War, will staff the hospital.

The reinforced brick structure is laid out around a two-storey administration block. Every other section is one storey only.

General Design

The imposing white-pillared entrance to the administration block is surmounted with the Canadian coat of arms. A long enclosed corridor connects it with various departments. These include a special laboratory for Sir Frederick Banting which will be completed to his own requirements, x-ray department, dispensary, operating unit, dining room and kitchen and officers' wards. There will be three operating theatres.

Back of the administration block is an enclosed courtyard and back of it again a corridor 865 feet long —the full length of the hospital. It connects all the 15 wards for men.

Officers of the R. C. A. M. C. are confident of one thing in addition to having the country's best designed and equipped military hospital. They're going to have the best baseball team in the Canadian Active Service Force.

In Memoriam

ROBERT R. ROBERTSON

AMHERST, July 5—Wide regret has been expressed at the sudden passing of Robert R. Robertson, one of the agricultural pioneers of the Maritime Provinces. Not only was Mr. Robertson known for his interest in agriculture, livestock breeding and fox ranching but he was an enthusiastic curler, and was among the outstanding performers at the Cumberland Bonspiel this year, despite his 83 years of age. He is survived by one son, Bert, of Sackville, two daughters, Mrs. Winnie Etter, of Amherst, and Mrs. W. H. Outerbidge, of Montreal. Mr. Roberston died on Saturday, after an emergency operation.

A native of Howick, Quebec, he was appointed as superintendent of the Experimental Farm at Nappan, forty-two years ago. He had previously been a gold medalist farmer in Quebec. He held his position at Nappan for over fifteen years when he was succeeded by W. W. Baird. Mr. Robertson was then invited to take a post with the Prince Edward Island department, but later became interested in fox ranching and developed one of the first fur ranches on the mainland.

He took a leading part in getting the Maritime Winter Fair located in Amherst in 1901 and always maintained a personal interest in the big winter show.—(Amherst News.)

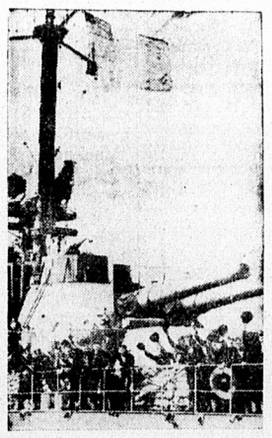
The Maple Leaf Milling Co. Ltd., and their Prince Edward Island Distributors, DeBlois Brothers, wish to express to the housewives of Prince Edward Island, and to the merchants, their appreciation of the splendid support and enthusiasm shown in this effort to make new friends, and re-cement the old friends, for Maple Leaf Flour, which has been the Standard, All Purpose Flour in Prince Edward Island homes for many years.



The Tricolor still flies on this French man o' war seized in the Royal Navy's "grievous but necessary" action, as British sailors cheer and wave their caps from her deck in a southern English port.

Where Parachute Saves Many Boys Of Fighter R. A. F.

LONDON, July 7.—(CP) — The parachute is saving scores of British fighter pilots' lives in this war—lives which are probably the most needed of all the Royal Air Forces flying personnel at present. On the fighter pilot depends a great deal of the allied resistance to the modern airplane-tank form of German attack.

Many of the pilots are not taken prisoner because of the open type of warfare chosen by the Germans. Pilots forced to land in enemy country have hidden in woods, farm buildings and in ditches, and at night they have stolen back through the battle zone to the allied defences. Some have had close escapes from capture; others have reported that they saw no sign of the enemy till they suddenly found themselves confronting a friendly advance post.

Most of these pilots have been reported "shot down" or "compelled to land" by brother fliers who saw them go down during combat.

Here are two of the latest examples: A young English fighter-pilot was shot down by anti-aircraft fire while fighting with a Messerschmitt 109. He took to his parachute and for 10 minutes of the time he was dropping to earth, he was a target for Germans shooting from the ground. He shook free from his parachute harness on landing, hid for a while, made his way towards the coast.

Shelled Rescue Ship

At the coast he was taken on board a friendly fishing smack. Within a few minutes of putting to sea the ship was shelled by a German torpedo boat. Then the German fired a torpedo which missed. The fishing smack was carrying 16 German air force prisoners, some of whom had been in the air only a few hours before.

The torpedo boat swung to attack again. A running fight developed, but the fishing vessel's single Lewis gun and the rifles of some British soldiers drove off the enemy. Four men in the smack were wounded. Next morning the fishing vessel reached a British South coast port.

The second story is about a sergeant-pilot during the last fighting in France. He had to make a forced landing with his Hurricane. Dornier bombers spotted his airplane, and dropped bombs all round it without success.

He made his way into friendly territory, and after 24 hours got a series of lifts in ration lorries to a French airfield which he discovered was being evacuated.

"While I was there nine Dorniers arrived and made shallow dive-bombing attacks. Two were shot down by anti-aircraft fire. When that was over I pushed on and eventually reached Wisques, near St. Omer.

"Just before noon next day the airfield at Wisques was bombed from 30 feet by six Dorniers, which also fired their cannon-guns and machine-guns. I dived into a trench when I saw three bombs falling towards me. They fell near by, but did not explode."

The sergeant-pilot arrived at his home airfield safely.

ARTISTS PORTRAY R.A.F. IN ACTION

LONDON, July 9—(CP) — To record for posterity the brilliant feats of the Royal Air Force, the Air Ministry has appointed two artists to picture the air war, another to work on various types of aircraft and one even to paint barrage balloons. Others are drawing portraits of service chiefs, armament and munition work.

Paul Nash and Keith Henderson were named official artists of the air war and Raymond McGrath is working on the various types of aircraft. Erick Kennington, Henry Lamb and William Roberts, all veterans of the First Great War, are doing portraits of service chiefs and other ranks.

When the war is over the pictures will be divided between the Imperial War Museum, the National Maritime Museum and possibly other galleries which may have a claim to some of them.

NEW WAR BABIES GET PREFERENCE

LONDON, July 9 —(CP) —Preference is being given where possible at Queen Charlotte's Maternity Hospital, London, to patients who are the wives of service men. This was announced at the annual meeting of governors and subscribers.

"In the last war," said Sir Samuel Scott, president of the Hospital, "Queen Charlotte's brought into the world over 5,000 babies of service men's wives, half of whom are today of military age and many of whom must be serving. No war work in these grave moments can be more important than the care of the mothers and babies, yet we receive nothing from the authorities or any war charities in respect of such in-patients."
