Happenings Of The Week

The King and Queen during their recent tour in the South and East of Scotland paid a brief visit to the Balmoral and Birkhall district, where they have not had their usual autumn holiday since 1938. On Deeside the King and Queen met Lord and Lady Aberdeen, who have been in Scotland since their marriage. It is probable that Lord Aberdeen will very shortly be appointed Lord High Commissioner to the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland. He and Lady Aberdeen will then represent the King and Queen at Holyroodhouse when the Assembly meets in May. The King has been making inquiries about the Balmoral estates. These, it appears are rather overrun with foxes, wild cats and other vermin. The same thing happened in the last war, and afterwards hundreds of foxes were shot on Upper Deeside.

The Earl of Strathmore, the Queen's father, who was 86 on March 21st, has now only a few seniors in the list of Peers. The present "Father of the House" is Lord De Mauley, who was born in 1846. Lord Hayter is two years younger, and Lord Ormonde three. Next come Lord Balfour (brother of "A. J. B.") and Lord Macdonald (of Skye, but not "Macdonald of the Isles.") In the same year with Lord Strathmore, a fortnight later, is Lord Ullswater, perhaps better known as Mr. Speaker Lowther. A minor but interesting point about the Strathmore family is that two of the granddaughters bear the Christian names of Nerissa and Cinderella says a London Observer writer.

War has popularized a new hair style in England known as the "Blitz Bang," a cross between the shingle and the page-boy boy. It has been created in answer to the demands of women in uniforms for a hair-do short enough to clear the collar without appearing too masculine. One hairdresser described the new style as "very like Margaret Sullivan's," but the actress' fringe is not an essential part of the new coiffure. The short hair in front can be parted and swept to the side if desired, and the main point is a shorter cut, and the easy-to control wave is just a slight upward sweep at the neck.

THE COOK'S CORNER

DAFFODIL CAKE

1 1-4 cups egg whites (10 to 12 whites
1-2 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cream of tartar
1 1-4 cups fine granulated sugar
1 cup and 2 tablespoons sifted cake flour
4 egg yolks
1-2 teaspoon vanilla
1 teaspoon grated orange rind

Method: The eggs have to be at room temperature before you start beating them. Another thing you have to be careful of is that there isn't a speck of egg yolk in the egg whites, otherwise the whites will not beat up as well.

One way you can avoid having this happen is to separate the yolks from the whites when the eggs are cold (when you take them from the refrigerator). The yolks seem to be firmer when they are cold, and less apt to break. When the eggs are separated, place a cover over the whites and yolks and allow to stand until they reach room temperature.

Add the salt to the egg whites and beat until foamy, then add the cream of tartar and continue beating until the egg whites stand up in peaks, but are not dry. Gradually beat in 3-4 cup of the sugar, which has been sifted before measuring. Add only a small amount of the sugar at a time, until all is used

Sift the flour and measure it, then sift again with the remaining 1-2 cup sugar which has also been sifted before being measured. Now fold the flour-sugar mixture into the stiffly beaten egg whites — a little at a time. Then divide the mixture in two.

To one part of the mixture add the egg yolks which have been beaten until very thick and lemon-colored, and the grated orange rind. To the other half add the vanilla.

Now place alternate spoonfuls of the white and yellow mixtures into an ungreased tube pan. Bake in a moderately slow oven (325 deg. F.) for from 1 hour to 1 hour and 15 minutes. When the cake is done, invert the pan and let the cake hang thus until it is thoroughly cold before attempting to remove it from the pan.

This cake may be iced with either a boiled frosting or a seven minute frosting, or it may be left un-iced and served with whipped cream, if preferred.

BOILED FROSTING

2 cups sugar
2-3 cup water
2 tablespoons light corn syrup
2 egg whites
1-2 teaspoon vanilla

Method: Combine the sugar, water and corn syrup. Boil these together to the soft ball stage (328 deg. F. on a candy thermometer) Beat the egg whites until stiff and pour the syrup onto these in a thin stream, beating the mixture constantly. Continue beating after all the syrup has been added, until the mixture reaches a spreading consistency. Add the vanilla before spreading on the cake.

SEVEN MINUTE FROSTING

2 egg whites
1 1-2 cups sugar
Dash of salt
5 tablespoons water
1 tablespoon light corn syrup
1-2 teaspoon vanilla

Method: Combine all ingredients except the vanilla in the top part of a double boiler. Place over boiling water and beat the mixture with a rotary beater constantly for 7 minutes. Remove from the heat and continue beating until the mixture is stiff enough to spread. Add vanilla and spread on the cake.

SEASONAL MAKE UP

"Key your make-up to your clothes and you will achieve that well-groomed look advocated by the leading fashion experts" says Gloria Bristol, noted dermatician who has streamlined Juliana of Holland and cares for the skins of such celebrated women as Schiaparelli, Martha Gellhorn (Mrs. Ernest) Hemingway and the Duchess of Windsor.

1. With blacks, navies, and greys, use a lipstick with a clear red foundation, a blue eyeshadow, dark brown eyebrow pencil, and a powder with a pink foundation.

2. With pastel shades, use a lipstick which has a bluish base, green eyeshadow, light brown eyebrown pencil, and a powder of light cream.

3. With browns, yellows, oranges, and reds, use a lipstick with a strong orange cast, brown eyeshadow, brown eyebrow pencil, and a warm sun-rich powder — to bring out the tawniness.

Home and Garden Merge in Modern American Style

Typical Example of Accepted Garden Style

The accepted style of small home garden design developed during the last decade, like most American ideas, is useful and practical, as well as sound from the artistic point of view.

It might be described as a method of equipping for family use and enjoyment the whole area of the home grounds. It creates an outdoor department of the home.

When the house is planned, its layout is considered with reference to the yard, especially the back yard, where the private garden naturally must be made. A terrace is often provided overlooking this garden, communicating directly with the living room. This garden entrance to the home is quite in contrast to the old-fashioned kitchen door, from which one entered the back yard to hang up clothes; so the private garden becomes a center for the family's life.

The layout shown in the illustration is a good example of the accepted American style. Infinite variations of it are possible, but all should provide the direct relationship between the living apartments of the house, and the "outdoor living room." This private garden should always be screened with fence, hedge of shrubbery border to provide privacy for the family, and background for the garden picture. It may be imposed in any fashion, formal or informal, depending on size, surroundings and the taste of the owner.

The manner in which a vegetable plot may be worked into the general design is illustrated. Here leaf vegetables for the bowl salad, greens and carrots for the children, and other table varieties of a quality impossible to obtain in the markets may be grown, in surprising quantity. Decorative planting of flowers are made in the borders surrounding the lawn.

While the perfect relationship between indoor and outdoor living rooms is not always possible in old houses, the new ideas may be carried out with some adjustments. They have demonstrated their value in making home life more enjoyable for two-thirds of each year even in the cold weather states and they put to use costly land which formerly contributed little to the pleasures of home life.

Dorothy Dix Says—

FINISH YOUR EDUCATION BEFORE ENTERING MARRIAGE

Is It Impossible To Stretch A Student's Income To The Point Where It Will Support A Family

Dear Miss Dix—I am an only son of devoted parents who have made every sacrifice to give me a college education, and I will graduate at the end of two more years. Now I have fallen in love with a girl and she insists that we get married this Summer, but my parents are urging me to wait until I have finished school, as I have no way of supporting a wife while a student. I am quite willing to wait, but the girl is not. Her argument is that we are both paying board we could pool our money and live on it. She seems disappointed when I say that I do not want to displease my parents, as they are helping me to prepare myself so that I can make a better wage then my father has made. What shall I do? Marry now and take the chance that we can get along on almost nothing, hoping that our love will make up for the lack of other things. Or shall I insist on waiting until I am through school, even at the risk of losing her? J. D. L.

ANSWER—Do not let any girl rush you into marriage before you are ready for it. It is the most fatal mistake that any boy can make and almost invariably wrecks his whole life. No girl who is not utterly selfish would be willing to jeopardize the future of the man she professes to love by forcing herself upon him when he is in no position to assume the responsibilities of marriage.

A girl who truly loves a man loves his ambitions, too, and is anxious for him to make a success of himself. She wants to build him up instead of dragging him down, and if she can help him best by leaving him free for a while she steps aside and lets him climb alone until he is ready to pull her up beside him.

Girls Should Wait

So if your girl does not care enough for you to wait for you for a couple of years you may be sure that she is not the kind of wife you need and want, and you should shed no tears even if you lose her. There are better fish in the sea than that.

That a wife is a serious handicap to a college boy is beyond discussion. It would be out of nature if a young bridegroom's thoughts and interests were not centered more on his bride than they were on his books. His chief study would be her moods and tenses instead of higher mathematics, and he would spend more time on billing and cooing than he would in learning dead languages.

And if you add to the amorous distractions the difficulty of trying to stretch an income that was barely enough for one over the needs of two, the endless pinching of pennies, the anxiety over the rent, the sleepless nights wondering how the grocery bill is to be paid, you can see that the poor young student has indeed, matriculated in the University of Hard Knocks, and that about all he is learning is to stand off creditors.

Interest Wanes

Not long ago the president of one of our most famous colleges said that when a boy began falling back in his studies there was invariably a girl at the bottom of it. And this goes double for marriage.

Also, I think that in honor you owe it to your parents not to marry until you are in a position to support your wife. They have worked hard and done without many of the luxuries and comforts they would have liked to have had in order to give you a chance at an education better than they had and that will fit you, they hope, for an easier life than theirs has been.

Surely you must realize that you owe a debt of gratitude to them, and that it will be a dastardly thing for you to add to their hardships by dumping your wife upon them to support or doing anything that will keep you from graduating with honor and distinction.

MOST HUSBANDS COME TO SENSES

Dear Dorothy Dix—I have been married 13 years and we have two children, a boy in the first grade in school and a girl just 10 months old. My husband has risen rapidly in his work in a large department store and earns a good salary. I adore him and I thought he was as happy and contented as I was. Now I find out that he is having an affair with a girl. I do not want to break up my home, because I have no way of making a living for myself and my children, but I feel that if my husband were free and without the responsibility of a family he would be happier, and I desire that above all things. He doesn't ask me to give him a divorce. Seems content to let things rock along as they are. What shall I do? H. H.

ANSWER—Let 'em rock. Give your husband time to come to his senses and get over his infatuation for this girl. Probably it is just a little flirtation that will wear itself out in a little while if you will let it alone. Wives often take their husbands' little affairs too seriously.

They think that their husbands wouldn't roam from home unless they were driven by a profound passion for the Other Woman. But in the great majority of cases this is not true. The husband goes chasing women just as he might go chasing rabbits, and he has no more feeling for them. He is bored and craves adventure.

Or he wants to bolster up his ego by proving to himself that he is still a devil among the ladies. And in his heart he really doesn't think that any of them compare with the Little Woman.

Also, for your comfort, remember that the husband who was not faithful to you will not be faithful to his light o' love. If he got tired of you he will get tired of her, but he will not tire of his children. They will pull him back if you will just have enough patience to play a waiting game.

Of course, the first impulse of a woman who finds that her husband is philandering is to rush to the divorce court, but, nine times out of nine is a mistake, because that cuts off allt he avenues of reconciliation. It keeps the man from repenting and begging for forgiveness and thus re-establishing the home, and it virtually makes the wife hand her husband over to the Other Woman, because he has nowhere else to go.

Certainly you will be very silly to give your husband a divorce before he even asks for it. Instead of putting your money in a ticket to Reno buy yourself some good clothes and get a new hair-do and look like a Lady Love instead of a neglected wife. Quit quarreling and reproaching your husband with his unfaithfulness and dry your tears and laugh. Make home a jolly place to come to instead of a reformatory from which any man would flee. DOROTHY DIX.

Surprising Meanings in Mysterious Dream Images

Have You Ever Dreamed This?

Strange dreams that leave you puzzled! Outside the window, a man whom you know gazes at you with wide, staring eyes—WHY?

Like all dreams this has a definite meaning. In queer symbols your dream mind expresses emotions you may have concealed—even from yourself—in waking life.

The friend gazing at you? Deep down you may fear he is critical of you, a fear that is affecting you more than you realize.

But if you dream you are peering at him, you are suspicious, asking yourself, "Can I trust him?"

When you take them seriously, your dreams often throw a helpful light on disturbing problems. Some dreams are real eye-openers. A dream of a screen? A hint you're afraid to admit something to yourself? Running from a snake? You may wish to be rid of some love relationship.

Other puzzling dreams make sense when you understand their symbols.

In our 32-page booklet, a well-known psychologist explains many common symbols in dreams of fear, hope, fulfillment; in sex dreams, "prophetic" dreams. Tells what it means when you dream of being naked in public, of flying, feeling pain.

Living & Leisure —The Woman's Realm

DISCOVEREY

Oh, I have come to know by journeying far,
How happiness is found in simple things;
A cottage silver thatched, beneath the moon;
A supper-table blessed by evening
grace;
Sweet benediction of the rain
against my face;
Across the painted desert of the sky
One lone bird's flight;
A garden where white lilies shine
at night.

Chiffons and crumpled artificial flowers may be freshened by holding them over the steam of a kettle for a few moments.

WHEN YOU'RE EATING FOR BEAUTY

Have you a greasy skin and oily hair? Your ideal menu is plain salads, plenty of raw and stewed fruit, less rich food. These are the foods which make for beauty.

The dry-skinned among you should drink plenty of milk, and take your food uncooked wherever possible, because this is natural food and has the natural oils untouched in it.

Remember that natural foods are always the best ones to choose, and that you cannot go wrong with fruit, salads and vegetables.

Sugar and starch are energizing, but have the tendency to fatten, though they are less fattening if not eaten in combination with non-starch and non-sugar food. For instance, a meal of bread and potatoes and suet pudding would not be so fattening as if you added meat in with it. It sounds absurd, but it is true!

Starches are energizers, and so is iron, which is obtainable in lettuce, spinach and liver.

Trust to the grill if you want to make sure of saving meat juices and of keeping your figure.

BEAUTY ALPHABET

This is an alphabet for the hard-ups—tells you what you really need in cosmetics.

A, Astringents. Witch hazel is the cheapest. If quite on the rocks, use ice-cold water.

B is for blackheads. Steam with a teaspoonful of Friars Balsam to a pint of boiling water; rub round the blackhead with finger pads, firmly resisting the temptation to use your nail. Ultimately it will pop out; touch the place with peroxide.

Cleansers is C's mission. Cold cream does the trick. If a dry skin and no money, try a little ordinary milk.

D's for Deodorant.

E's for Eyes. Make pads of lint of cotton wool and dip in warm water to which a pinch of boracic powder has been added and a spot of rose-water. Lay these on the closed lids for up to ten minutes if you can spare the time. You'll feel like a new woman.

F is for foundations.

G for that extra greasy skin. It probably needs a good powder cream, which will make you stay smart all day.

H we come to hair first, hands after. Do use a brilliantine, even if you feel it an extravagance. Pure Castille soap makes a wonderful shampoo — it is cheap enough. Starch will give greasy hair a dry clean, and your chemist will supply you with a spirit lotion. Dry hair does not take kindly to this sort of cleansing, though, as it is too drying. Use a tonic on your hair.

H is also for hands. They need a little cossetting because they do a lot of work. If they get rough and red, give them a rub with a good hand lotion after washing. And occasionally cream them at night and sleep in a pair of old cotton gloves.

L is for lipstick. Use one to match your natural coloring and you can't go wrong. Remember that a little cold cream smoothed into the lips first makes the lipstick go on more smoothly and look nicer. And put the color on the top lip only, pressing the lips together afterwards. You get the most natural effect that way.

M is for make-up. Go at it gently. Give up elongated eyebrows, and too-vivid lipsticks and rouge. Aim at a natural effect; it is what is wanted today

Nails are feeling the hard times. If they are brittle and break a lot, fit court plaster over them, cut to shape; varnish with natural varnish on top. Take calcium combined with Vitamin D. Soak the nails in oil when you can.

O is for open pores. Add borax to the washing water, and use a good astringent always after washing and before making-up

P for powder.

R is for rouge—make it match your lipstick. Cream rouge stays put better than the other sort, but is more difficult to apply. If you smile while applying rouge, and put it on this little mound the smile makes, it will look just right.

T is for thinness; apply almond oil to thin places, massage in with a circular movement. Also drink more milk if you want to get a little plumper all over.

W is for wrinkles. Take a penny paintbrush and coat with almond oil at night. It will feed them and make the skin elastic.

SPRING SHOULDER ACCENTS

When you begin to set down plans for making your spring wardrobe, look for those, new soft shoulder lines that are accented with dressmaker tricks. Individualize your spring jumper or jerkin with odd-shaped shoulder epaulets, reminiscent of gay Robin Hood costumes. Extend them well over the top of the shoulder, so that the ends fall softly over the top edge of the sleeve. These epaulets are equally effective in evenly cut scallops, the centre scallop cut a little deeper, so that it will dip gracefully. Face the epaulets with self-fabric and stitch ricrac along the edges or use contrasting binding. Ruffled pinafore winged effects over the shoulders, braided yolks or intricately shirred shoulder yokes are new, too, and neatly and easily achieved by using the modern attachements to your sewing machine.

A Morning Smile

EDUCATION ENOUGH

"I've called to see why your daughter Emily hasn't attended school lately," said the school attendance officer.

"Cause I think she's learnt enough," retorted Emily's mother.

"Why, she's only passed through two classes yet."

"Well, ain't that enough?" asked the woman. "When I was young, if a girl understood the elements of distraction, provision, or replenishin' an' the common denominator, an' knew all the rivers and their obituaries, the currents and dormitories, the provinces and the umpires, she was reckoned to have eddication enough to see her through."

NEAR ENOUGH

The mouth organ was claimed by three soldiers, and the sergeant decided to arbitrate.

"I'll play a tune on it," he said. "You tell me what the tune is, and the one who's right gets the mouth organ.

A weird medley of sounds followed, and guesses were made.

"I think Alf's won", said the sergeant. "He was nearest with 'Roll Out the Barrel.' What I was playin' was 'As Pants the Hart for Coolin' Streams'!"
