What the Fashionables are Wearing

Illustrated Dressmaking Lesson Furnished With Every Pattern

By Annabelle Worthington

Today's smart little sports dress has chic, simplicity and wearability. There is immense satisfaction having a dress of this type in one's wardrobe for early Autumn. It's "just right" for town without a topcoat. And it's so easily slipped into and easy to fashion. A sheer worsted print made the original in rich brown tone. Style No. 569 comes in sizes 16, 18, 20 years, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust. Tweed-like woolen in fine diagonal stripes or monotonous are stars. Black crepe satin is very lovely with the rever and vest of pinkish-beige crepe satin. Size 36 requires 3 1/2 yards 39-inch, with 1/4 yard 27-inch contrasting. Be sure to fill in the size of the pattern. Send stamps or coin (coin preferred). Price of pattern 15 cents.

Shall the Nagging Mother be Allowed to Ruin Her Children's Lives? — Easy Marks— What Shall Parents do With a Restless Youth of 18?

Dear Dorothy Dix—As the last resort I turn to you for help. My mother nagged and tormented my father until he died at the age of 55 years with an unbalanced mind. Now she is determined to do the same thing to her children. She has four married daughters, not a one she can live with a week at a time. Two married sons whom she won't even visit because she formed a strong dislike for their wives even before they were married. Her two unmarried sons maintain an apartment so that she can live with them, but she nags them about their money, their girl friends, where they went last night, and if she runs out of anything else to be unpleasant about she will go back and drag out all the sacrifices she made for her children, how she worked to raise them and how little appreciated she is, etc. She is ruining our lives. We want to do our duty by her, but we don't want to see our homes broken up and our happiness needlessly sacrificed. What can we do about it?
 A DAUGHTER.

Answer:
 Dear lady, I fear that your mother's case is hopeless. Science has discovered toxins that will counteract snake bites and rabies, but nothing that is an antidote for the venom of the human tongue.

It has found ways to stop scourges of yellow fever and bubonic plague and diphtheria, but not any way to stop the nagger. It has isolated the germs that cause a thousand physical ills, but it has not yet discovered that malevolent microbe that festers in the heart and brain of a man and woman until it kills everything that is good and kind in them and makes them take an abnormal delight in torturing those they love.

The individual who discovers a cure for nagging will do more for the world than even Pasteur did and millions of grateful victims will rise up and bless his name and build him a monument that reaches to the stars.

You see the trouble with the nagger is that he or she, and it is generally she, for while there are some male nagers who hold world records at nagging, still it is more often a feminine complaint than a masculine one. But, at any rate, of whatever sex they are, they don't want to be cured. They have no desire to reform. They are like drunkards who get to much of a kick out of the bottle to be willing to give it up, even if they could.

You will find that the nagger is almost invariably a person of mediocre intellect and with few interests in life. Narrow-minded and bigoted and self-conceited and tyrannical, with an inferiority complex, and with a soul filled with malice and envy and bitterness. Nagging is the combined expression of all of these disabilities, so if we had time to consider anybody else's sufferings except our own, we might well pity the poor creature.

Therefore, when a woman nags, it is because she doesn't read or go about much or have any resources within herself, and so her mind dwells on the same subjects until she makes mountains out of molehills. The remedy for her is to get her to join clubs, to go about, to travel, to do anything that will give her something to think about except her own family.

Sometimes she nags because her nagging is a distorted form of love and because she is overanxious about her husband and children. Often her nagging is an expression of jealousy. She cannot endure her children to have the happiness she missed and when she nags about what she has done for her children it is just the cry of her hungry soul for a little appreciation.

But, as I said, there is no way to stop the nagger from nagging, because it gets to be a habit with her, and she doesn't know she is doing it, or because she gets a thrill out of it, and it becomes as necessary to her as dope is to an addict.

But there is no reason why innocent people should be sacrificed to the nagger, nor why she should be permitted to break up happy homes and ruin the lives of her unfortunate children, and so the only thing that her sons and daughters can do is to provide for her elsewhere than in their homes.

It is nothing more than fair that she should pay the price of her nagging.
 DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—We are two young men who have good, steady occupations and have been trying to save money, but we are so popular with the fair sex that we find it impossible to get a dollar ahead. Every time we start out in our car we run into a bunch of girls who want to be taken riding and are looking out for places to eat or they want to go to a show, all of which costs money. They ring up on the phone and ask us to take them to dances, and so on. Now we don't want to go through life hurting girls' feelings, but neither do we want to spend all of our money on them and we are very much puzzled as to what course to pursue. What should we do?
 TWO BEWILDERED SHEKES.

Answer:
 Well, boys, you may be shekles all right, but I see no reason why you should be bewildered about what to do in such a case. Brace up and have a backbone and refuse to be such easy marks.

You sound just like the answer to the gold-digger's prayer and how the pretty little blondes must have laughed in their sleeves when they were holding you up and going through your pockets! And, believe me, they were not calling you shekles. They were calling you saps. Boneheads. Easy marks. And they were not filled with admiration for your generosity. They were sloshing over with contempt because you were so easily taken in and strung along and parted from your hard-earned dollars.

Don't kid yourselves into thinking that it is your personal attractions that makes girls call you up on the phone and ask you to take them to dances and that causes them to flag you down for a ride in your car and that makes them remember nice places to eat. Any youth who has a car is popular and can get girls to ride with him. As long as you feed girls you will always be a WOW with them and while your money lasts you will always be a riot with the fair sex.

And you will never save any money as long as you let girls exploit you, for you are cheerful workers who never weary of the task of separating a man from his roll.
 DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—I have a son of 18, who will not study and will not go to school and who worries his father and me nearly to death. We are poor and have made many sacrifices to try to give him an education, which he will not take. He is a good boy, but has a very restless disposition and isn't content in any one place long. We live in a small town in which there are few opportunities for any boy. What would you advise us to do?
 A MOTHER.

Answer:
 How would he like to enlist in the navy? That would give him the discipline he needs and the change that he craves and an opportunity to travel the world over. Besides, in the navy the men are taught a great many trades by which they can earn a living when their term is over if they do not care to continue in it.
 DOROTHY DIX.

For The Cook

Olive and Shrimp Sandwiches
 1/4 cup finely minced ripe olives.
 1 cup canned or fresh cooked shrimp.
 2 tablespoons mayonnaise.
 1/2 teaspoon paprika.
 1/2 teaspoon salt.
 1/2 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce.
 Mash the shrimps with a fork and gradually work in the olives, mayonnaise and seasonings. When the mixture is smooth and well blended spread between thin slices of lightly buttered whole bread. Press the sandwiches together firmly and cut in small squares.

Etiquette

By Roberts Lee

Q. Is it proper to use the phrase, "Pleased to meet you"?
 A. No; it is regarded as poor taste in better society.
 Q. When dining at a friend's house for a single meal, is it proper for one to refold his napkin when through?
 A. No; leave it unfolded.
 Q. Is it ever permissible for one to ask for an invitation for himself?
 A. Never under any circumstances may this be done.

Paris Styles

(United Press Staff Correspondent)
 By MARY KNIGHT

PARIS, September 23.—(U. P.)—A French woman expresses her opinion of the threatened Empire mode in the following words: "It is theatrical and not in accord with present-day life. I am a Parisian and I do not understand how it will be possible for a woman to wear flounces or great wide skirts such as were seen in the days of the Second Empire."

"These kinds of things fitted well in an old barouche with several servants to extend every assistance to milady, but not in a 90 horsepower limousine. The frock would be crushed before it was five minutes old in the present rush and crush of things."

"However, I think that the harking back to the old way of dressing will accomplish something. It is bound to generate ideas and that after all is how we develop style."

I quote this Parisienne because she expresses the very general view held by her feminine countrymen. To get a happy medium in all things we have to have two extremes. These extremes today are the ultra conservatism shown in sports frocks and suits, and the equally ultra fanaticisms shown in evening gowns with bustles, puff sleeves of huge dimensions, hooped skirts and ruffles that seem not to know when or where to stop.
