RATTRAY - GORDON WEDDING

A pretty wedding was solemnized on Wednesday, August 5th, in Greenwich United Church, when Thelma Jemima, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Rattray, was united in marriage to Harold William Gordon, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Gordon of Roseneath. The double-ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. W. A. Patterson, B.D., and witnessed by a large number of relatives and friends.

Mr. Lorne Webster and Mr. George Bowley acted as ushers.

To the strains of the Wedding March played by Miss Loma Anderson the bride entered the church on the arm of her brother, Harry Rattray.

The bride looked very winsome attired in a floor length dress of white sheer with bridal veil and carried a bouquet of mixed flowers.

Her bridesmaid, Miss Ruby Sanderson, was gowned in a Queen's blue sheer in street length with matching accessories.

The groom was supported by Mr. Ralph Sanderson.

The groom's gift to the bride was a beautiful gold wrist watch.

During the signing of the register Rev. Mr. Murray sang "Because". Rev. Mr. Wright, pastor of Tryon, was also present at the marriage.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride, where a delicious supper was served to the immediate relatives and friends of the contracting parties.

A large crowd of serenaders gathered to extend their good wishes to the bride and groom.

Mr. Harry McEwen furnished violin music for the evening.

After an enjoyable evening all departed to their homes wishing Mr. and Mrs. Gordon best wishes for a long and happy wedded life.

Previous to the wedding the bride was tendered a miscellaneous shower at her home, where she received many lovely and useful gifts.

FIVE HIT TUNES IN ROY ROGERS' LATEST PICTURE

Five hit songs are presented in "Sons Of The Pioneers," the Republic western starring Roy Rogers which opens at the Capitol Theatre today.

Three of the tunes—"Things Are Never What They Seem", "Trail Herdin' Cowboy," and "The West Is In My Soul" — are by Bob Nolan. The fourth, "He's Gone Up The Trail," is by Tim Spencer; and the fifth, "Come And Get It," is by Tim and Glenn Spencer.

Bob Nolan and Tim Spencer are members of the famous musical group, the Sons of the Pioneers, who appear in the picture.

Maris Wrixon has the leading feminine role, while George "Gabby" Hayes enacts a comedy characterization. Also in the cast are Bradley Page, Hal Taliaferro, and Forrest Taylor.

Dry Weather Would Aid Potato Crop

Dry weather for the next few weeks might mean hundreds of dollars in the pockets of Prince Edward Island potato growers, it was learned yesterday. Mr. S. G. Peppin, in charge of the seed potato inspection service for the Federal Government said there was considerable late blight. That did not necessarily mean the tubers would be affected by rot, however.

The chance of escaping rot was good provided no heavy rains came in the next few weeks to wash blight spores off the vines and into the soil. Last year potatoes blighted badly in the field and heavy rains followed. Many growers lost heavily from rot, some more than fifty per cent of their crop.

The development of the blight resistant variety known as the Sebago has not proceeded to the point where they are being grown in quantities sufficient for marketing. The Sebago is a direct cross of two older varieties, the Katahdin and the Chippeways. It is very resistant to blight.

Mr. Peppin said there was less than a half-barrel of the variety imported into this province three years ago from Maine where it was developed. It is a white potato, resembling the Green Mountain to some extent.

It is not known yet how well it will be received by the trade. Each variety of potato has its own texture and flavor and the Sebago may not meet the requirements of the consumer. If it does and no other difficulties develop it will have solved one of the biggest troubles of the potato grower. Late blight in this province takes a heavy toll of the crop very frequently. Spraying with control chemicals helps keep it down but the method is expensive and even then does not always prevent loss.

So far as this year's crop is concerned Mr. Peppin advised farmers not to start digging at least until the middle of September. Potatoes dug before then, unless they were for immediate sale, would be difficult to store. Growers usually consider potatoes need a certain time in the ground to season after the vines are dead.

Devereaux - Maddigan Nuptials

A wedding of interest to a large number of the younger set of this city was solemnized in St. Dunstan's Basilica yesterday morning when Mary Isabel Devereaux, R. N., daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Devereaux of New Haven was united in marriage to Sergt. Gerald Joseph Maddigan, R. C. A. F., son of Mrs. Maddigan and the late Richard Maddigan of this city.

The ceremony was performed and Nuptial Mass celebrated by Rev. Louis A. Dougan of the Basilica staff.

As the bride entered the Basilica on the arm of her brother Ivan, the Wedding March was rendered by Mrs. Jos. Dougan who presided at the organ and also accompanied the soloists, Rev. B. Gillis, D.D., and Miss Lucy Blanchard, who rendered appropriate solos during the Nuptial Mass.

The bride, who was attractively gowned in poudre blue with hat to match, whits accessories and carrying an arm bouquet of pink roses, was attended by Miss Mary Maddigan, sister of the groom, who becomingly wore coral pink with hat to match with white accessories and wore a corsage of Talisman roses.

Mr. Leo J. Corcoran ably supported the groom.

Mrs. Maddigan, mother of the groom was gowned in blue, wearing a corsage of pink roses, and black accessories.

At the conclusion of Mass the bridal party motored to The Charlottetown where a wedding breakfast was served; a number of relatives being present. This was followed by a reception at the home of the groom where a large number of friends called to extend best wishes.

Mr. and Mrs. Maddigan left at noon for a honeymoon trip through the Maritimes.

The Guardian joins with numerous friends in extending hearty felicitations.

Pownal Man Listed In Naval Casualties

OTTAWA, Aug. 26—(CP)— The Royal Canadian Navy in its 106th casualty list of the war, issued late today, announced that Ordinary Seaman Joseph Alphonsus McKenna of the R.C.N.V.R., was killed on war service overseas on Aug. 19.

The list brought to 570 the number officially listed as dead or missing since the start of the war.

McKenna's official number was given as O.N. V-1540, and his next-of-kin was listed as his father, Peter J. McKenna, of Pownal, P.E.I.

The date on which he was killed was the same as the day of the Dieppe combined operations raid, but there was no indication as to whether he had been serving aboard one of the warships which took part in that operation.

In its 105th casualty list, the navy announced that it had been notified from the British Admiralty that Midshipman Allan Hopkins Wilmot, R.C.N., is safe and well in Tunisia after the loss of the Royal Naval ship in which he was serving.

Remembered April

By STEWART VAN der VEER

One morning, about a week after Mont had gone back to Frankfort, Anne was in the stable yard, when she saw Aunt Sue returning in a neighbor's car from a trip to Roper's Crossroads.

A few minutes later, the older woman came hurrying out to the stable yard.

"Sam Roper died last night," she announced.

Anne's eyes widened in surprise. She knew the old storekeeper had been ailing lately, but his death was unexpected. Only yesterday, she had seen him behind the counter of his store and had thought he looked better.

"How?" she asked.

"Heart attack," said Aunt Sue. "He lingered only a few hours. They say that, when he realized he was dying, he carried on something terrible. Started calling for little Elsa and cussing because he'd never found out who her father was — never avenged Martha's death."

CHAPTER XXV

"How is Mrs. Roper taking it?"

"Like a soldier. Well, there's one consolation. She was always afraid of what would happen if Sam discovered the man who'd betrayed Martha. Then there'd have been more tragedy. Now, at least, she'll no longer have that worry."

As they walked in the direction of the house, Aunt Sue glanced anxiously at her niece. "You look a little under the weather, Anne. Since Mont's been gone, you've been working too hard. You've got great circles under your eyes."

"Oh, I'm all right. The work won't hurt me." Anne's lips set firmly. "I'm determined to show Otis that things can go on at Fleetwood even with Mont at Frankfort."

"But you're killing yourself," argued Aunt Sue.

"No I'm not. Besides, all this is only temporary. I'm sure Mont will be released after Judge Daingerfield has a chance to talk to the governor and tell him the whole story. It's just a matter of weeks."

"After what Otis has done to Mont," said Aunt Sue, "I don't see how Judith can go on staying with him. I think she ought to leave him and come home to her family."

"I believe she'd like to, but she's afraid that might throw him into such a rage, he might do something worse. It's probably best to let things rock along for a while and avoid antagonizing Otis until we've got the upper hand."

"We're only postponing the showdown," sighed Aunt Sue.

As Thanksgiving approached Anne was troubled by the thought of not having her sister at home for the day, and yet she couldn't bring herself to invite Otis to dinner.

Then, on the day before the holiday, Judith phoned to announce, "Otis has gone away. He got a long-distance phone call this morning and departed. He wouldn't tell me where he was going—he never tells me any of his business—but he said he'd be gone several days."

Anne, delighted by this news, said, "Then you must come over here for dinner tomorrow."

"Why don't you and Aunt Sue come here instead?" Judith suggested. "That way, Aunt Sue can have a real holiday instead of spending half the day in the kitchen."

Anne hesitated, then said, "All right—that's a good idea."

The next day was gray and dreary. In the middle of the morning, snow began falling. By the time Anne and Aunt Sue drove over to Springbrook, the ground lay hidden under a white blanket.

Judith met them at the door and led the way into the gloomy living room, (which was brightened only by a log fire blazing in the wide fireplace. The ancient, heavy furniture and dark woodwork, overcast with an amber glow from a yellow-shaded lamp, was shabby and depressing.

"I had to turn on a light," said Judith. "This room is always dark and, on a day like this, it's like a tomb." She shivered slightly. "I hate winter and darkness. You don't know how glad I am to have you two here. I get so terribly lonesome. I wouldn't be so bad if we had a radio, but Otis won't have one —he hates them."

"I don't see why he should object to your having one in your room," Aunt Sue commented.

"Well, he does." Judith said bitterly. "He used to want me to have whatever I wanted, but not any more." She sat down before the fire, took the poker from its hook, and rammed at the blazing log. "After dinner, I think I'll go back to Fleetwood with you two. I'll stay there until Otis gets back."

"You ought to stay for good, Judy," Aunt Sue said bluntly.

"No—I can't do that. I married Otis and—well, I guess I've got to stick by it."

Anne pulled a half-finished blue sweater from her knitting bag. She bent her head, needles clicking. Judith, she thought, was afraid of Otis — afraid to leave him. They were all afraid of him. Yet why should they allow him to wreck all their lives? Something must be done.

Judith's voice broke through her thoughts. "Come on — let's have dinner!"

Otis was gone three days. Upon his return, late one night, he telephoned Fleetwood. Although it was past midnight, he insisted that Judith return to Springbrook at once.

To Anne, who had answered the call, he said, "I'm too tired to come after her, but some one will have to bring her home."

For several minutes after hanging up, Anne debated whether to comply with this unreasonable request. Should she wake Judith and take her back to her strange husband? A rising tide of resentment engulfed her. In the end, however, she decided to put the question up to Judith herself.

When Judith was wakened and told of Otis' call, she sighed and said, "Guess I'd better go, Sis. If I don't, he'll come after me and make a scene."

Anne regarded her. "How long does this have to go on?" she asked abruptly.

Judith sat up and reached for her stockings. "I wish I knew. . . ."

Inexpensive Meats Just as Nutritious

Who wouldn't prefer a plump juicy steak! But for thrifty housewives who are saving their pennies it's happy news that the inexpensive cuts are just as nutritious, just as rich in vitamins and minerals as the higher priced meats.

Fortunately, there are lots of things to do with inexpensive meats besides stewing. Combined with bran they can be used in all sorts of economical taste-tempting dishes. Typical are Ham Bran Cakes, served with baked peach halves; Bran Beefsteak Pie, a fine family dish when everyone's hungry; and Stuffed Sausage Roll, good to remember when the days begin to get cooler. The recipes for these follow:

Ham Bran Cakes

1 pound ground raw smoked ham.
1-2 pound ground lean pork.
1 egg.
1-4 teaspoon ground cloves.
1 tablespoon brown sugar
3-4 cup evaporated milk.
3-4 cup All-Bran.
8 canned peach halves.

Combine meat with egg, cloves, brown sugar, milk and AllBran. Shape into small cakes; place in shallow baking pan and bake in moderate oven (370F —400F) about 30 minutes. Place peach halves in separate pan and heat in oven during last 10 minutes meat is baking. Serve two ham cakes with one peach half.

Yield 8 servings (16 Ham Bran Cakes 2 1-2 inches in diameter).

Note: Grilled bananas may be substituted for peaches.

Bran Beefsteak Pie

2 pounds round steak.
1 1-2 cups sliced onions.
1-4 cup fat.
2 teaspoons salt.
1-8 teaspoon peppper.
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce.
3 tablespoons chopped parsley.
2 tablespoons flour.
2 1-2 cups water.
2 cups diced raw potatoes.
1 recipe All-Bran pastry.

Cut meat into one-inch cubes, add onion and brown in fat. Stir in seasonings, parsley and flour, mix well. Add water slowly, stirring constantly. Add potatoes; cover and simmer about 30 minutes. Pour into greased 8 1-2 inch casserole. Cover with All-Bran pastry rolled 1-4 inch thick. Prick with fork to show wedge-shaped pieces. Bake in hot oven (450 degree F) about 20 minutes.

Yield: 6 servings.

All-Bran Pastry

1-4 cup All-Bran.
1 1-2 cups flour.
1-2 teaspoon salt.
1-2 cup shortening.
4 tablespoons cold water (more or less).

Roll All-Bran until fine; combine with flour and salt. Cut in shortening. Add water, a little at a time, until dough is moist enough to hold together. Roll out on lightly floured board.

Stuffed Sausage Roll

2 cups chopped raw apples.
1-3 cup chopped onion.
1 cup bread crumbs.
1 cup All-Bran.
2 Pounds Sausage

Combine apples, onions, crumbs and All-Bran to form dressing. Pat sausage into rectangular piece about 1-2 inch thick. Spread stuffing over surface of meat; roll up like a jelly roll, beginning at the long side of the rectangle so that roll will not be too thick. Bake in shallow pan, in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) about 45 minutes, or until done. Cut in slices to serve.

Yield: 1 roll (8-10 servings).
