Dorothy Dix's Letter Box

And comfort yourself with this knowledge—that when your husband does get back home you will look mighty good to him. There is nothing that keeps love alive so much as a little judicious separation of husband and wives.

There Is No Reliable Test For Love

Dear Dorothy Dix—If you love a boy and you don't know whether he loves you, how can you find out without his knowing it and without asking him? Please let me know because I don't want to lose him and it is bad on my brains and nerves being so anxious. SILENT.

Answer: That question is a brain teaser and I wish I could give you some definite recipe for easing the mental strain under which you are laboring. But, you see, nobody has ever been able to devise a reliable test, for love and feel whether a boy is in love or not. Often he doesn't know himself. Sometimes he thinks he is when he isn't, and sometimes he is in love when he doesn't know it. So there you are.

There are so many difficulties in the way of a girl finding out if a boy is in love with her or not. She can't tell by the way he acts because he may give her a rush and make her think she is the only girl in the world because she is the best-looking girl around; or he wants to make some other boy jealous, or because her mother always keeps a chocolate cake handy. And the girl may think she is virtually engaged to him, then he may kiss and ride away and she will never hear of him any more.

She can't tell by what he says because his love making may be just a line. It is too dangerous to ask him because if he is sort of on the fence it may scare him so he will fall off on the wrong side. So you will just have to use your woman's intuition and trust to luck that you are guessing right. DOROTHY DIX.
