

Executorships

Too great importance can not be attached to the choice of the right Executor to administer your Estate after you are gone.

No man would entertain the idea of insuring his life or property with a private individual. Then why should he place his Estate in the hands of a person who, for any one of a number of reasons, might lose a considerable percentage of its value?

With a most efficient organization, the Dominion Trust Company solicits the management of your Estate now or the appointment as Executor. The cost will be no more than that charged by the individual and oftentimes less.

PICKLING SEASON

Frost last night September 9th, not much damage to tomato and cucumber vines, but the next may be more severe. What sense is there in putting off from time to time until pickling stock is unobtainable. Just now we can supply in any quantity, green tomatoes and ripe, small cucumbers and large, small pickling onions, red onions for chow, spice, peppers and choice pickling vinegar etc.—

Last year we were compelled to cancel very small orders in this line. Call at our market place and leave the list of requirements, or if inconvenient to call, order by mail. Please remember we are doing a cash business, prices on application.

GALLOPING COSSACKS CARRIED THE NEWS OF WAR IN SIBERIA.

LONDON, Oct. 5.—How the people of Siberia took the news that war had been declared, and their action in preparing for it, is told in a dispatch from Omsk, Siberia, to the Daily Telegraph, under date September 15. The dispatch follows:—

"Here in the heart of Siberia the most striking feature to a foreigner of the early stages of the war was the remarkably business-like fashion in which the country tackled the grim realities of war."

"We were in Semipalatinsk, 600 miles from the railway, when the war was declared. The news was carried all over Siberia by galloping Cossacks, who, like a multitude of Paul Revers, spread across the country notifying the farmers and peasants of the little villages and ordering mobilization."

"Omsk, three days' journey from Semipalatinsk, was found humming with well-regulated activity. There were nearly 200,000 reservists already gathered there, and being sent westward for drilling in the encampment in Southern Russia."

"The outstanding feature was the rapidity, precision, and smoothness with which the vast masses of troops were handled. This was an object lesson in the awakening of the Russian Empire, and a reminder that Siberia is adopting the aggressive American methods of grappling with its vast problems."

"The attitude of the Jews, who everywhere displayed an enthusiastic sympathy with the Russian attitude in the war was also interesting. It is a remarkable sign of the times, this Jewish movement. If the occasion is grasped, as there is reason to suppose it will be, it means an opportunity for the solution of the much mixed Jewish problem."

"The attitude of the Siberians toward this war is very different from their attitude during the Japanese war. Japan meant little or nothing to the Siberian moujik, but he knows the Germans. This is no struggle against an unknown foe over an obscure international disagreement, but a war in which the personal equation largely figures. Every man feels that he is going to help his brother Slavs in Serbia, and, at the same time, free Russia from Teuton tutelage."

"At Semipalatinsk the breweries and vodka shops were closed as soon as war was declared. As soon as the reservists began to pour in with the regularity of a well-oiled machine, they were sent in one door of the low building with housed military head-quarters, and sent out promptly with instructions where to report for service, with warrants for steamship and railway travel, and with an allowance of twenty-five kopecks a day for spending money."

"It was a thrilling scene as the reservists took the boat for the mobilization point. Great crowds thronged the pier where the Governor, in full uniform, harranged his people in stirring words."

"This is not a war of aggression," he said. "You are fighting to crush a cruel oppression, and Almighty God is with you. As for your women folks, who are left, perhaps, to mourn, let them be of good cheer, and by their courage and self-control emblazon the Russian flag with one more instance of the devotion of its motherhood."

"As he finished, the band played the National Hymn, and the priests robed in green and gold advanced to ward the ship, giving it and the passengers their blessing."

"The Russians have a great advantage in the good feeling between the officers and the men. Their treatment is paternal, almost to the extent of that exhibited in the schoolroom."
