Banana Market Is Growing

(Special to The Guardian)
MONCTON, May 13—In addition to the banana market in the east there are possibilities for great expansion in the west according to Mr. J. M. Pringle, President of the Canadian West Indies Fruit Co., Ltd. The Canadian West Indies Fruit Co. handled the shipment of fifty thousand bunches of bananas, the first to reach Canada under the Canada West Indies agreement which was brought to Montreal by the Lac Somers of the Canadian National Steamships on her first voyage from the tropics to Canada. The bananas arrived in perfect condition and the entire shipment has been disposed of.

An Attic Salt-Shaker

WHY did Indians paint their faces? To save a lot of useless talking, answers Buffalo Child Long Lance, Chief of Blackfoot Indians (in his book "Long Lance").

"We had a different kind of paint for every mood we found ourselves in," says the Chief. "When we got up in the morning we painted our faces the way we felt so that all who should come in contact with us would know how we felt at a glance. It saved a lot of useless talking."

Silence is golden.

say risk to run" said the labor leader. "Say this vast number of madmen combined—could they not overpower their guards and free themselves?"

The Governor shook his head.

"Mr. Burns," he said, "you may know something about politics, but you know nothing at all about lunatics. Lunatics never combine."

TIM HEALEY—or to give his formal name and title: T. M. Healy, K. C. (King's Counsel) and first Governor-General of the Irish Free States—possesses a native Irish wit that was at once the envy and dismay of his political opponents during the many years he sat in the House of Commons as an Irish member. It was devastating. For instance, when an English member asked how many horses were sent to South Africa during the Boer War, Tim Healy interjected:

"And how many asses?"

DURING a lively Home Rule debate in the Commons, it was reported in the American newspapers that Tim Healy had had his silk hat battered during a mix up. As a matter of fact it wasn't his hat. But next day he received a cable from the Mayor of Alexandria, Louisiana, declaring that the city council had voted him a new silk hat and asking him to cable the size hat he wore.

HEALEY cabled the information and his thanks "at the cost of several silk hats," and received in due course an elegant "topper"—alas! too small—from the Mayor and council of Alexandria. In token of his gratitude says Tim (in "Letters and Leaders of My Day"):

"I crushed it on my head, and for the next twenty years wore it until my resignation from the House in October 1918."

WHEN Lord Dudley was Viceroy of Ireland, King Edward visited Dublin and stayed at the Lodge. An hour after his arrival the King's Irish terrier was found dead in the grounds. Lord Dudley, to make amends, replaced the terrier with another "the fairest this island can afford"—Caesar, which afterwards followed the remains of Edward to the grave.

CAESAR, on arriving at the Lodge (relates Tim Healy), was locked into a room where lay the Field-Marshal's uniform in which the King meant to review his troops next day. Morning came, and when Caesar's door was opened, it was found that he had eaten the Field-Marshal's boots! Edward laughed, and reviewed his army in the uniform of an Admiral of the Fleet!

THE readiness of Irish wit is exemplified in the story about some passengers who travelled in the same compartment from Liverpool to London. One of them missed his handkerchief. It was no ordinary handkerchief such as we know today, but a colorful and expansive affair—and bluntly accused his right hand neighbor, an Irishman, of having picked his pocket.

RISEING to leave the compartment the man found the handkerchief on which he had been sitting. A third passenger suggested that the accuser apologize. But the Irishman said:

"Oh, there is no occasion for an apology. There was a mutual mistake. He took me for a thief, and I took him for a gentleman."

THE first coin issued from the mint under Cromwell had on one

Children's Colds Treated With-out Medicine

Take a saucupan or pitcher of water, place it on a lamp or stove. Add half a teaspoonful Catarrhons to a pint of water, which is brought to a boil. Let the steam from the kettle fill the room, so that the medicated air is breathed in by the child. The distressing cough is relieved. The inflammation is reduced. Good results are quickly noticeable. Catarrhons will prove of utmost value when vaporized with boiling water in the manner above indicated. Drug stores everywhere sell Catarrhons, two months' treatment, $1.00, smaller size, 50c.

EDWIN FORREST, eminent tragedian, was one of many thousands of pacifists who wanted the Civil War ended and who marveled at Lincoln's obstinacy, says Francis Wilson (in his biography of John Wilkes Booth, Lincoln's assassin). To air his opposition, Forrest altered the text in "Richieu," and had the audacity to propel the speech directly at President Lincoln—who was a great admirer of Forrest's art—sitting in the stage box, during a performance at Washington. The correct reading is: "Take away the sword; states may be saved without it."

Forrest delivered it: "Take away the sword; states must be saved without it."

side the inscription: "The Lord is with us." On the obverse was the coat of arms of the republic, which caused a royalist to remark:

"The Lord and the republic are not on the same side."

AND such is fame! Edward Garnett, English author and critic—he "discovered" Joseph Conrad—wrote to his American publishers concerning an article he had read in an American periodical. Mr. Garnett called attention to the "young" writer as a discovery.

"You had better look out for him," wrote Garnett. "His name is, I think, Nicholson."

"And to think," said Meredith Nicholson, sadly, "that after writing thirty books I should be discovered by the discoverer of Joseph Conrad!"

EARL BEATTY, of Jutland fame, tells this:

Two old-time sailors detailed for special duty away from their ship were making out a list of rations.

"Two pounds semolina," sang out Jack to his mate who was doing the writing.

"Semer—sem—'ere let's 'ave t-a-p-l-a. 'Ow d'yer spell that?"

"Why, t-a-b-e—no, t-a-p-e-o-k. Well, look 'ere, put down rice."

"Right you are, matey," said the one doing the writing. "Two pounds r-i-s-e."

OVERHEARD in a book-store: A woman customer was examining a copy of "Leonardo the Florentine," which was being highly praised by the little clerk.

"Yes, but who was Leonardo?" asked the customer.

The clerk—new on the job—stammered a moment, reached for the book, looked at the fly-leaf, and then brightened.

"Why" she said, "he was the Florentine."

"Oh!" said the customer. "I'll take it."

Your Best Investment—A PERMANENT FENCE

There is no disputing the fact that good woven wire fencing adds to the value of the farm more than the actual cost of fencing. By good fencing we mean a fence that will enable the maximum area of tillable land to be cultivated, and that will not afford spots favorable for the growing of weeds and the protection of insects—conditions which certain types of fencing tend to foster—and a fence which will be a real protection to your crops.

8 WIRES. 48 IN. HIGH

Your thoughts first turn to "QUALITY" and "PRICE" when buying a fence. With "INVINCIBLE" Fencing you are assured of satisfaction in both. We have a fence suitable for every need.
