PERFECT
COLD
CREAM

If you are a user of cold cream you have probably had some difficulty in finding a really good article.

A good cold cream cannot be made by carelessly mixing together ingredients of uncertain quality; it takes care both in the selection and material and in its preparation.

We would like to have you try our cold cream. It is white as snow, is not greasy, absolutely smooth and is daintily perfumed.

25 and 50 cent pots.

LORD STRATHCONA.

Remarkable is the record of Lord Strathcona when viewed from any standpoint, private, patriotic, commercial, national or imperial says S. A. Creemore in The Busy Man's Magazine. It is probable that Canada will not develop again such conditions that will result in giving to the world a Scotch-Canadian of his type, one who has been aptly styled "the most eminent personage that the Dominion can boast of during the past century."

Four cases are prominently set forth in all references to Strathcona as being in a large measure contributory to his splendid career—ability, experience, ceaseless energy and unflinching courage. He had done his life work before many prominent Canadians of the present day had been heard of. No one has a greater knowledge of Canada. He is part and parcel of its early history—Laureator Rupert's Land and, what was at one time the great Northwest—low the fertile provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. His services to the Hudson Bay Company, whose employ he entered in 1838, down to the date of his appointment in 1896 to represent the Dominion in London as High Commissioner are familiar to the multiplication table to every school lad. In every national and international post that he has filled he has shown rare tact, wisdom and judgment. He is a veritable lord of the north. At an age—88—when most men are leading lives of retirement and restful old age—if favored by length of days—the Canadian High Commissioner is crossing the ocean several times a year, attending to his duties in Victoria Street, London, delivering speeches at notable gatherings in the Old Land or making generous grants for worthy objects, that will ever cause his name to be remembered and recalled with gratitude and reverence. Even at the recent Tercentenary celebration in Quebec he was a visitor and took the warmest interest in its success. His great name will, in countless ways, remain linked in ties indissoluble with the people of Canada. He never for a moment lost confidence in its promising future. When others were inclined to waver and falter he stood firm. His faith was never shaken. Any project, no matter how large, to which he gave support, forged ahead in spite of fate or foe. He proved himself a man of splendid vision and implacable trust in any worthy proposition to which he gave freely of time, money and service. The backing of Strathcona in the industrial, commercial, railway or educational world counted. He stands to-day head and shoulders above his fellows as the greatest representative Canadian. It has been well said, that there can never be another such man in Canada because there never again will be the times that will make such a man possible. He is as unostentatious in dress and conversation as the most humble subject.

As Canadian High Commissioner he has, during the last twelve years, rendered the Dominion and the Empire a service that can be appraised at its true value only when the history of succeeding generations comes to be written and reviewed. The rumor is periodically revived that Lord Strathcona intends to resign or that he may be appointed Governor-General of Canada, but the venerable peer and princely benefactor still goes on from day to day working as diligently as he did a generation ago and will, in all human probability, continue to do so to the very end. It is a distinctly Strathcona characteristic.

The very latest rumor was that Lord Strathcona was to receive at the hands of His Majesty the King, a further advance in the Peerage, owing to his distinguished public services. This report also had it that the High Commissioner was anxious to retire, and that he would gracefully and worthily fill an Earl's domain in a reasonable period of time. While prophets propose fact often disposes, and no sooner do despatches from various centres appear indulging in speculations as to what will eventually be the lot of the veteran statesman than come official denials intimating that Lord Strathcona has no desire whatever to retire.

The Canadian headquarters in Victoria Street are always the Mecca of visitors from the Dominion. Hundreds call at the offices every week, where they register in the visitors' book, read the daily papers from the various leading Canadian cities and are assured of a warm welcome. There is something about the atmosphere and surroundings that makes them feel thoroughly at home. The touch of kinship and congenial association is everywhere in evidence. The secretary, W. L. Griffiths, who is an energetic coadjutor of the High Commissioner, receives a large number of callers each day. Tourists from American centres are also cordially greeted and any information that may be helpful or any service that may be rendered, is freely accorded.

The Canadian apartments are large, airy and inviting in appearance. The walls are adorned with pictures of Canadian personages and scenes and portraits from the various provinces of Canada make a sojourner from over the sea feel that after all he or she is not far from the scenes of home and home ties. The members of the staff are courteous and obliging. They all work in harmony and never lose an opportunity to uphold the prestige of the Dominion, to present its best traditions and to make known in the widest possible manner the resources, wealth and splendid inheritance of a land to which thousands have come from England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales.

The scheme of Dean Farthing to lessen intemperance at the recent sitting of the general Anglican Synod in Ottawa, is at least novel and interesting. He is reported to have said that in his opinion every man desiring liquor should be able legally to get it. Intoxicants should be sold in sealed packages. All sales should be under strict government control but all bars and public drinking places should be abolished absolutely. We advise Dean Farthing to look over this Province's prohibition which does not make residents a party to the legislation of a traffic which numbers its victims by millions throughout the world and is the direct cause of more misery and crime than even war.

Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended, and after taking several bottles, I am not only cured, but am an entirely different woman, and on the whole a healthier woman than before taking your valuable medicine. Every woman who suffers from any form of female ills should not fail to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."
