SELWOOD of SLEEPY CAT
 by FRANK H. SPEARMAN

COPYRIGHT BY CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS. W.N.U.SERVICE

"You're asking me, are you, how I feel tonight? If it wasn't just for one thing, I'd say I felt better than I've ever felt since that evening I saw that snow on top of the Rocky mountains."

"What's the one thing?" Selwood shrank in a little. "You couldn't mend it."

"I know what's a-matter with you. And, maybe, I can't cure you—not I, myself. But there's a little huzzy upstairs with her head as full of you as your head is full of her. That girl can do a thing I can't do. Go upstairs, man, knock on her door, and if you can't tell her anything else, tell her some of the good news you heard today. I gave her a hint. But she'd like to hear a few things straight from you—"

"Did she say that?"

"That and a whole lot more," averred Carpy, making his pre-variation violent, since he felt he had gone too far to retreat. "Go on upstairs and have a face-to-face talk with brown-eyes."

Perspiration dewed Selwood's forehead. Encouraging him in roughly honeyed fashion, Carpy got him to the foot of the stairs. He never did remember just how he got up the familiar flight that morning. But, once above, he had wit enough to turn toward his own room to consult the looking-glass about his hair.

What was his surprise to find the door of his room open and, looking inside, to see Christie smoothing up the counterpane on his bed. He stood perfectly still, watching her. In a moment she had finished and, turning as she straightened up, saw him in the doorway. She gave a startled little cry, and her face was a picture of crimson confusion. "Oh!" she exclaimed, trying to speak and to laugh at once, "You can come right in! I'm all through. Margaret has gone, you know, and Doctor asked me if I wouldn't tidy up his room and yours just for this morning—I—so—I made the beds—and I—oh, Mr. Selwood, were you very much hurt in that dreadful fight?"

Selwood protested he had received no serious injury, but seemed unable to add much to his disclaimer. "And all this morning," continued Christie, hardly giving him time to speak, anyway, "I've been trying to get a chance to thank you over and over again for all you did for me and for Father last night—I don't know what would have become of us—where should I be now, if it hadn't been for you! You can come right in," she repeated, growing a bit hazy herself; "I think things are in some kind of order," she faltered, not only out of breath but out of thoughts, for she had stood his silent eyes, and something she saw in them, about as long as she could stand them and keep her senses. "And," she said, dropping her own eyes before him, "I'm just going."

"Don't be in a hurry," he suggested, standing exactly in the doorway through which she was trying to make her escape.

"Oh!" she exclaimed for the fourth or fifth time—and her eyes bulged large with fear and apprehension. "I must go to the doctor's room now—his bed isn't made yet!"

If Christie's burning cheeks and distressed manner were to be believed, this fact pictured a terrible situation. But it did not impress Selwood. As Christie showed fright, he showed composure.

"If Doc Carpy ever saw his bed made, he wouldn't know where to get into it," he retorted unfeelingly. "He sleeps in a buffalo robe. Christie," he added, "I'd like a little talk with you. Do you remember the morning I met you and your father on the Crawling Stone trail?"

Christie spoke up promptly. "Indeed, I do."

"I picked up a girl's shoe that morning on the trail. I thought it was about the prettiest shoe I'd ever seen. There was a horse-shoe lying there on one side of the trail and this girl's shoe on the other. I'd had nothing but horse-shoe luck all my life out here, and it had been rotten luck. So I thought I'd take a chance on that girl's shoe—and I picked it up."

Christie laughed. "What an ideal! And what did you do with it?"

"I've got it. And what I want to find out from you right now and right here is, what kind of luck it's brought me. Sit down a minute, will you?"

Christie, somewhat flustered, did sit down.

"I said to myself," continued Selwood, "it must be a nice girl that owned that shoe. And if I could find her—and ever get some things in my own life straightened out—I'd ask her whether she'd marry me—"

He seemed to be running out of words and ideas, and Christie came to his aid. "Well, of course, I hope—her eyes fell—"It's my shoe, John. It's going to be a terrible temptation to—to claim it. Couldn't we make believe it's mine, John, anyway?"

"Do you really want it to be yours?"

Christie looked up very simply. "How could I want it to be any one else's, John?"

Five minutes later Doctor Carpy's loud whistle echoed up the hallway. Christie Fyler, in Selwood's arms, started like a frightened fawn. She tried to break away, and could not. "John!" she whispered frantically. "Some one's coming! Let me go!" With tear-brimmed eyes she looked pleadingly up. He would not release her. "He's downstairs," murmured Selwood reassuringly. "There's nobody at all up here."

"You'll start your arms bleeding again, John," she whispered in alarm. "I can't get a breath!"

Christie! Selwood looked down at her face, her head cushioned in the hollow of his arm. "I've got to tell you this, too—I'm dead broke."

She laughed—who as well as lovers can face the world broke? "I guess everybody is broke in Sleepy Cat, John. Then, besides risking your precious life for me, you've had a terrible misfortune—they burned your hall, didn't they, John? And you lost everything?"

He looked down at her. Christie, he said seriously, "I suppose you'll be willing to prove property by letting me try that shoe on you to see if it fits?"

"Oh, it isn't necessary to bother you—I can try it on myself."

"If you'll let me try it on you, I'll tell you a secret."

"Go ahead, then."

"I burned the hall, myself. Yes," he continued, as she looked at him amazed. "Why? Well—I was done with it—and everything in it. All that's behind me, Christie."

There was just an instant of breathlessness. Then she tipped up on her toes just as high as she possibly could, and flung her arms as far as she possibly could around his neck, and smothered the rest of his words.

IN MEMORIAM

MISS CATHERINE MACDONALD

Miss Catherine MacDonald, 74, a resident of Greater Lawrence, Mass., for many years, died at her home, 397 Broadway, Methuen, Mass., February 24, 1931, after a short illness. She was born at St. Georges, P.E.I. For many years she had been the companion of the late Mrs. Harriet C. Nevins, of Methuen, Mass. The deceased is survived by two brothers, Hugh, of Charlottetown, P.E.I.; Stephen, of St. Georges, P. E. I.; and two sisters, Mrs. Johanne MacDonald and Miss Eugenie MacDonald, both of St. Georges.

The funeral was held from the late home, when a Mass of Requiem was solemnized at St. Monica's Church, after the services at the church, the body was forwarded to St. Georges, P.E.I., for interment. The subject of the above sketch was the daughter of the late Laughlin and Elizabeth MacDonald, of St. Georges. The funeral held from her former home in St. Georges was largely attended by her many relatives and friends. Her pall bearers were: Messrs. Peter MacDonald, Alfred MacDonald, Joseph MacCormack, Donald MacLean, Stephen MacDonald and Peter MacPhee.

WEST ROYALTY SCHOOL PICNIC

On Wednesday afternoon, July 1st, a very enjoyable picnic was held at Miss Lewis' shore by the ratpayers, pupils, and teacher of West Royalty School.

After an enjoyable hour in the water, young and old participated in field sports until five o'clock.

Lunch was then served by the ladies which included ice-cream donated by the Women's Institute. It was estimated about one hundred people were present at the gathering.

After lunch had been finished the teacher was presented with an address read by Raymond MacKinnon and a gift of ten dollars in gold presented by Ivan Frizell.

THE ADDRESS

Dear Teacher:—It is with great pleasure that we gather here together this afternoon, to present to you this small token of esteem and appreciation for your untiring efforts during the past year.

We are all very glad to know that you will be with us when school opens again, and are looking forward to another pleasant and profitable term together.

Signed on behalf of your pupils, Raymond MacKinnon, Cecil Stetson, and Jack Bell.

The teacher replied thanking the pupils for their gift after which all wended their way homeward feeling they had spent a very pleasant and profitable afternoon.

He Has Earned His Leisure
His income is assured

HE and his wife can look calmly out on the world. He is old and can work no longer but, he is independent—his income is assured.

How did he do it? He was fond of good things; he didn't live a miserly life. He couldn't save money in the ordinary way any more than the rest of us could, for only three men in a hundred are able to save enough money, unaided, to retire upon at sixty.

Long ago he did a wise thing. He called in one of our trained representatives who helped him to systematize his spending and showed him how a few dollars deposited each year with The Imperial Life would give him independence in his old age, and also provide for his family should he die prematurely.

He has earned his leisure—his income is assured. Will this describe YOUR future? Why shouldn't it?

May we tell you about the income you can insure for yourself twenty or thirty years hence, by making small deposits now—when you have the money?

Send the coupon today—tomorrow you may be uninsured.

WEST ROYALTY SCHOOL EXAMINATIONS

The annual examination of West Royalty School was held on Friday afternoon, June 26th, with a large attendance of parents and visitors.

The pupils, who were examined in the different subjects by their teacher, Mr. Hollis Jenkins, assisted by Mr. Harry Lewis and others, answered the numerous questions very readily and accurately.

A short programme was then carried out by "The Mayflower Junior Red Cross Society" which included a vote of thanks to the Women's Institute for their splendid co-operation during the past year.

The following pupils received their Public School Certificates: Cedric Stetson, Raymond MacKinnon, Ivan Roberts, Jack Bell, Ellen Curley, Cecil Stetson, Isabel Curley, Katherine Dixon.

The following prizes were donated by the teacher:

Perfect Attendance: Lois Hurry, Department: Bobby Gates.

Greatest improvement during the year: Bernard Trainor.

Highest number of points won at School Fair: Lillian Hurry.

For Proficiency: Grade X—Betty Curley, Grade IX—Lillian Hurry, Grade VIII—Cecil Stetson, Grade VII—Raymond MacKinnon, Grade VI—Florence Dixon.

Grade V—Laura Hurry, Grade IV—Athol Roberts, Grade III—Georgina Trainor, Grade II—Irene Frizell, Grade I—Elwin Burke.

Special prizes donated by the Island Red Cross Branch: Health songs, 2nd Betty Curley, Health posters, 2nd Lorne Hurry, Special prizes donated by the Inter-scholastic School Association: Girls 14 year and over, 3rd Katherine Dixon, Girls 12 years to 14 years, 3rd Lillian Hurry.

Special prize donated by interested citizen in "Feed the Birds Contest," awarded to Ivan Roberts.

The singing of the National Anthem brought the pleasant afternoon to a close.

GUTTA PERCHA TIRES
 GUM CUSHIONED

Why 'GP' Tires are shockproof

Examine the illustration above and you will see that the vital parts of Gutta Percha Tires are effectively protected by cushions of live rubber. The location of these Gum Cushions is exactly where undue strains are encountered. This invaluable protective feature is exclusive to "GP" Tires—an added safeguard to uninterrupted service. The constant shocks and strains thrust upon tires are absorbed by the cushions, saving the cords from injury. The longer life of Gutta Percha Tires is definitely due to these marvellous, protective Gum Cushions.
