Address to Miss Helen Biffin

The following is the address read to Miss Helen Biffin during the course of a social evening held in her honor at the home of Miss Margaret MacMillan, Prince St. To Our Former Classmate, Miss Helen Biffin:
Our Beloved Helen:—On the eve of your departure from your home town, we, your former classmates and chums, assemble here to-night to do honor to one with whom we have been associated so intimately since early childhood days. It is with hearts touched with sorrow that we realize that those happy days have gone by, and you go to begin the duties of the noble profession which you have chosen to embrace.

we will find ourselves—"Standing with reluctant feet, Where the brook and river meet." With you, dear Helen, there is no uncertainty you have chosen wisely, and we are sure you will grace that noble profession of nursing, which calls for endurance, courage, and sweetness of disposition. We feel assured, that the words of the poet will be fully exemplified in you.
"Whom pain and anguish wring the brow, A ministering angel thou." That kindly Providence may watch over and guide you in the years to come is our earnest wish and prayer. In conclusion we wish you to accept this small gift as a memento, and also as a slight token of our love and esteem.

ENTERTAINED BEFORE DEPARTURE FOR NEW YORK

Several delightful social evenings have been accorded Miss Helen Biffin, as she departed to New York, to take up the study of nursing. On Friday evening she was the guest of honor, at a charmingly arranged party given by her former classmates at the home of Miss Margaret MacMillan, Prince Street. An address, which appears in another column, was read by Miss Alleen Murray, and Miss Biffin was presented with a dainty gift, the presentation being made by Miss Dorothy O'Brien. Although taken by surprise the charming recipient responded graciously, thanking her friends for their words of appreciation and for the lovely gift. Local solos were then rendered by Misses Florence Cawtell and Margaret Allen; piano solos by the Misses Margaret MacMillan and Olive Johnston, violin solos by Miss Vivian MacGulgan, and Folk dances by the Misses Marlon and Jean McDonald, Miss Nora Murray was the accompanist of the evening. Dainty refreshments were then served by the young ladies when with regretful farewells and good wishes to the guest of the evening, the happy gathering dispersed.

THE MARKETS

(Canadian Press)
MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 29.—There was no improvement in the export business in grain here today owing to the fact that foreign buyers were not disposed to pay the prices asked by exporters. The demand from domestic buyers on cash grain in the Montreal market was dull and prices were unchanged. The trade in spring wheat flour was again reported to show slow there being no improvement in the demand from any source, and prices were unchanged. Business in winter wheat was also disappointing with few sales at the only a few odd lots traded. The trend of the milling market continued firm owing to the steady demand and a scarcity of supplies, the movement of standard grades rolled oats was steady and prices were unchanged. Further developments were noted in the haled market with spot prices about steady. A moderate amount of business was done.

There were no further developments in the local eggs situation but owing to the very cold weather prevailing the undertone to the market was firm for strictly fresh eggs and prices were maintained at the late advance noted. Business in storage eggs was reported slow.

There was no improvement in the demand for potatoes, the receipts being small with holders not pressing sales. The undertone remains steady and prices unchanged. Trading in butter was rather quiet but the undertone to the market was very firm with prices fully maintained. The condition of the cheese was unchanged with little demand from any source. Prices on the spot were steady and unchanged.

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 29.—Eggs.—The egg markets are steady to higher today with the cold weather having a beneficial effect. Toronto fresh prices high, wholesale specials 42, extras 46 to 47, firsts 41 to 42. Storage stocks selling better but no stability to quotations. Montreal market unchanged in tone and price with the cold weather helping to stimulate the market.

BIRTHS

ARSENALTY.—In this city, Jan. 27th to Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Arsenault, Rochford Street a daughter.

DEATHS

McALEER.—In this city, Jan. 29th Francis McAleer aged 55 years. Funeral, notice of which will appear later will take place from 24 Clark Street.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of our darling father Charles R. Diamond who departed this life January 29th, 1925. The last, the dearest friend we had,
One year ago today,
When father left his earthly home,
We could not bid him stay,
And though we have a host of friends,
There's none that we can find,
To take his place within our hearts,
His loved one's left behind,
Inserted by his loving Daughters,

"The Lucky Horseshoe" is in Western-Plus Class.

Tom Mix evidently is reaching beyond straight western pictures for more fields to conquer, for he has given us recently "Dick Turpin," which was a story of England's famous medieval bandit.

"The Lucky Horseshoe" which opened at the Prince Edward yesterday, he gives us something else that is different from the old-time, stereotyped "western."
While "The Lucky Horseshoe" may be classed as a "western-plus," it is the "mix" part that holds the element of surprise and delight for the "mix" fans. This surprise consists of the dream or Spanish sequence, in which Tom drifts hazy from his western surroundings to the medieval life and habits of old Spain.

To make matters even more interesting, Tom finds himself enacting the dashing and cavalier role of Don Juan, kidnapping fair ladies right and left and finally winding up by running away with the most beautiful of them all, Lady Isabel, most bewitchingly played by Billie Dove.

After all sorts of fights, wild horseback rides, rescues and narrow escapes, in which he is ably abetted by J. Farrell MacDonald as Pancho, Tom wins his heroine, only to have his dream fade out and disclose him a captive in the hands of the villainous henchman while the real girl, also played by Billie Dove, is about to be married to the villain, Malcolm Walter. So Tom has to start in rescuing all over.

A feature of the Spanish sequence is the beauty of the girls, which scores of the prettiest girls in Hollywood are shown in artistic and tantalizing costumes of all lands. Ann Pennington, "Follies" dancer, also adds a distinct touch with her dancing in the dream sequence of the picture.

"The Lucky Horseshoe" is well worth seeing, take it from one who is heartily relieved when he finds something different in "Westerns."
The second chapter of the new serial "Sunken Silver" and "Dog Day," "Our Gang" comedy round out an excellent week end program.

fresh market. Storage stocks are drab. Winnipeg is unchanged. Calgary egg market is weak as the result of continued mild weather. Large quantities of fresh eggs are arriving at extras 28, firsts 25, seconds 20. There is no demand for storage stocks which are jobbing firsts $9.00 to $9.00 per case, seconds $7.00 to $7.50 per case, 32, firsts 30, seconds and pullets 22.

Halifax, N. S., is unchanged. St. John, N. B. fresh eggs arriving in large quantities and are selling under good demand. Chicago spot 34, January 34 1-8, February 29 1-2, March 25 5-8, April 23 1-8. December refrigerators 31 3-8. New York, unchanged.

COLOGNE, Germany, Jan. 29.—Joyously excited by the news that the Cologne exhibition of agriculture in this country, I consider that, both for the purpose of progressive agriculture and for the purpose of national stability, it should be encouraged rather than discouraged. Agriculture in those countries which are now held up to us as examples of efficiency and prosperity—for instance, Denmark, Belgium and Prussia—has been established upon a foundation of freehold tenure. Similarly, agriculture in our great Dominion has been established upon freehold tenure; and I consider it vital that no impediment should be put in the way of increasing the number of freeholders, and that, upon the sale of an estate, or a farm, the sitting tenant should have the first right of purchase under any scheme of agricultural reform. Indeed, in assuming this the policy would merely be carrying out modern practice, for to-day, at the sale of an estate by any reputable landlord, the sitting tenant is invariably given the option of purchase if he desires it. Moreover, the sitting tenant ought to be able to buy the land on the same terms as those granted to any public body. He ought to be able to buy at a fair agricultural valuation, and he ought to be supplied with the necessary credit upon reasonable valuations suggested themselves, both easily ascertainable and generally regarded as fair; death duty valuation, or a valuation based on Schedule "A" of the Income Tax assessment. There will be no need of arbitration, or long discussion of prices, on either of these bases, if they are well ascertained, and everybody knows the principles upon which they are worked. They would give the landlord a fair price, and the cultivator or local authority a fair deal.

The British Liberal Policy

which is now generally known as the "Green Book." Many of the proposals contained in this report were not only clearly unacceptable to a majority of the party with which Mr. Lloyd George is politically associated, but were quite definitely opposed by a great bulk of the agricultural interests throughout the country. There was no desire among the agricultural community that the State or local authorities should acquire, either on a fixed day or piecemeal, the whole of the agricultural land in the country. In conference with the Liberal and Radical Candidates' Association, Mr. Lloyd George agreed to certain compromise proposals. These fundamentally altered the original proposals—reduced them to much smaller dimensions, as well as restricting their virtuality to acquisition of land for small-holdings and allotments. In other words the proposals of the "Green Book" were abandoned. These compromise proposals have not yet been considered by the Liberal Parliamentary Party, who appointed a committee to report upon them. The whole problem is now to be discussed in the Liberal Convention in February.

Meanwhile, there are many of us who differ fundamentally from the basic principles underlying even the compromise proposals. In the first place, the fundamental difference of principle is whether, by State or County Council ownership of agricultural land, cultivation tenure should become a form of tenure. Under any system of land reform I object most strongly to either the exclusion of freehold tenure, or any hostility towards or hindrance to the future development of freehold tenure. I am an unrepentant believer that freeholders will be the best farmers. Upon the sale of any estate, the compromise proposals give the County Authority, and it is only if the County Authority does not desire, or if not compelled by the Ministry of Agriculture, to acquire the land that the sitting tenant has any rights whatsoever. There is a section of opinion in this country to which freehold is anathema, which considers the freehold farmer the worst farmer in the world, and which wishes to see the land owned by local authorities and managed by them. A large extent in the position of remaining all his life in the status of a pupil, being carefully supervised by the official wisdom of a jobbing agent or permanent staff with this school of thought, I am a fundamental believer in freehold ownership, as the safest foundation of agriculture in any country. I consider that, both for the purpose of progressive agriculture and for the purpose of national stability, it should be encouraged rather than discouraged.

It is in those countries which are now held up to us as examples of efficiency and prosperity—for instance, Denmark, Belgium and Prussia—has been established upon a foundation of freehold tenure. Similarly, agriculture in our great Dominion has been established upon freehold tenure; and I consider it vital that no impediment should be put in the way of increasing the number of freeholders, and that, upon the sale of an estate, or a farm, the sitting tenant should have the first right of purchase under any scheme of agricultural reform. Indeed, in assuming this the policy would merely be carrying out modern practice, for to-day, at the sale of an estate by any reputable landlord, the sitting tenant is invariably given the option of purchase if he desires it. Moreover, the sitting tenant ought to be able to buy the land on the same terms as those granted to any public body. He ought to be able to buy at a fair agricultural valuation, and he ought to be supplied with the necessary credit upon reasonable valuations suggested themselves, both easily ascertainable and generally regarded as fair; death duty valuation, or a valuation based on Schedule "A" of the Income Tax assessment. There will be no need of arbitration, or long discussion of prices, on either of these bases, if they are well ascertained, and everybody knows the principles upon which they are worked. They would give the landlord a fair price, and the cultivator or local authority a fair deal.

he can himself advance to independence in agriculture. Apart from this brief statement, there remain such important questions as rural housing, rural education, agricultural research, improvement both in stock and in plants, the development of co-operation, particularly in marketing, and the study of the problems of the stabilization of agricultural prices—these are the matters which seem to be essential to revive the agricultural life of the country. Many, if not most, of the objects can be achieved by administrative action, within the scope of present Acts of Parliament. Many others could be achieved by slight amendments of Acts of Parliament relating to agriculture already in force. Any scheme which would strike at the roots of the fundamental principle of freehold, which would increase, rather than diminish, the sense of insecurity in the farmer; which would add to the burdens and complications of local administration; which would create inspired dictators in agriculture in each county; and which would burden the State with the overwhelming tolls of a financial experiment, at the present time, should be most strongly opposed as against the best interests of agriculture and of the community.

There seem grave administrative objections to the proposed powers and position of this new official, the County Cultivation Officer. His functions are almost limitless. It is proposed that an extraordinary position should be created for him. Although he would be paid and appointed by the County Council, he would be a permanent official, and would make reports, and the Authority would be obliged to take effectual action upon them. If they failed to take effective action, he would get the Ministry of Agriculture into default of the local authority. It is entirely contrary to the democratic principles upon which local administration has been founded for centuries to allow any local official to override the views of democratically elected bodies.

The main objects of any land policy should be: the advancement of agriculture, by aiding the development of under-cultivated estates, and under-cultivated farms, by the application of cheap credit by giving greater security to the farmer as a tenant, and greater facilities for the farmer to become a freeholder; by giving greater opportunities and greater rights to the labourer to obtain, in the form of other allotments, small-holdings or family farms, a progressive ladder by which, if he has the ability

Electors of Ward Five

Ladies and Gentlemen: Two years ago you elected me as one of your representatives at the Council Board. I trust my services have merited your approval and further confidence.

As ever I stand for improvements and the advancement of our City in every possible way consistent with our revenue and not involving increased taxation. There are many streets in ward five that require attention and it will be my aim, if elected, to find ways and means to have them put in better shape.

As it is impossible for me to see every elector personally I take this opportunity of soliciting your vote and influence.

Yours respectfully, W. ALLAN STEWART 7499-29-91.
