They were clean enough, and if the furniture was so bare as to be almost non-existent, the beds felt to be comfortable and well-sprung. Unfortunately, their landlady's sense of the conventions had caused her to put Diana on the ground floor, away from her two male companions; but at the time she raised no objection to this segregation, and when they had washed the dust of travel from their faces and hands, they rejoined the priest who was waiting below.

He had insisted that they should dine with him on this, their first evening, and he promptly took them along to his own house, which lay no more than a hundred yards away behind the little, old, white-washed church.

It was a rather shabby-looking abode, comfortably furnished in an unpretentious way. The housekeeper was an elderly female of forbidding aspect, who eyed them as though she fancied they harbored evil designs against her employer; but their host assured them that she successfully concealed a heart of gold and a heaven-sent gift for cooking beneath this unprepossessing exterior.

"Twenty odd years I've been here now," he told them, "and I'll probably end my days here without buying another stick of furniture. You wouldn't think it would be an attraction for a burglar, would you?"

"A burglar," Diana echoed, suspecting a joke.

"Yes, a genuine crackman," the priest told her. "And not only crack, either. I've had two visits in less than a month."

"What on earth for?" the Major demanded, glancing about the room with some disdain. "What did the fellow hope to get?"

"What indeed?" Father Maloney agreed. "But there it is. Each time he waited till his host and his housekeeper was away, and each time he turned the place upside-down. And as far as I could make out, he took nothing."

"Perhaps he was one of the locals, working up for serious operations in the great world outside," Toby suggested flippantly. "Just getting his hand in, so to speak."

"No; he wouldn't be one of my own boys," the priest said, shaking his head seriously. "They're not angels, but I know 'em better than to think they'd be taking a trick like that. No; it's one of these fellows from the road construction camp. But the queer thing is that he didn't take the queer objects that might have attracted him—the four silver cups. However, I'm hoping he'll have got tired of the game now and will be leaving me alone. I've enough to do in the ordinary way, without having to put back all the books and things he spreads all over the floor!"

"I suppose you get a good many of these fellows from the road construction camp down here, don't you?" Toby asked.

"I'll be the nearest centre for recreation till they move on again, but they're not the only ones."

"Too many!" Father Maloney agreed. "The town's full of 'em on Sundays and fiestas. But you'll see that to-morrow, which is the feast of Saint Matthew. They'll be down here as thick as flies, and every house on the water-front will be turned into a bar. I tell you, Major, there are very distinct drawbacks to the civilizing process, however good it may be in the long run."

"I don't doubt that there is always some temporary inconvenience," the Major responded stiffly. "One must take a long view in these matters."

"That's what the local colonos tell me," the priest admitted with a rueful smile. "All you come Maria to lay the table and the wine. The smell we'll soon have something more profitable to discuss!"

Suggest Tithe Acres

The report said suggestions had come from various quarters as to means of adding to the financial stability of the Church. These had been carefully considered and some might be acted upon as circumstances favorable to their success arose.

"The last to be received is from Saskatchewan where a beginning has been made with a plan of encouraging our Presbyterian farmers each to set aside an acre, the product of which would be sold for the benefit of the Church."

This recalled appeals of other days when even the children would set aside the ends of their yards to help the church to help the church.

JOHN BARLEYCOEN JINGLES

(John Barleycoen Will Fool Us If We Don't Watch Out!)

The brewers and distillers. Have come, they think, to stay. And try to sell the bootleggers. Are still not far away. The magazines are cluttered. With ads suggesting, "Drink!"

And many people acquiesce. (I guess some refuse to think). And so it's not a bad idea. To see what we're about. For liquor men will fool us. If we don't watch out.

Sometimes an advertisement. Of beer or gin or rye. Make it sound so delicious. It tempts some folks to buy. Too bad they can't wake up and think.

What Barleycoen can do. He certainly shall not fool me. I'm too alert! Are you? I'll keep a sharp eye out. And know what we're about. For Barleycoen will fool us. If we don't watch out.

Florence E. Marshall.

ON THE 18TH YEAR OF THE REIGN OF JOHN BARLEYCOEN IN B. C. (IN THE FISCAL YEAR ENDING MARCH 31, 1940.)

There were 371 beer saloons, 68 licensed drinking clubs, 59 veterans' clubs selling beer to members, 10 breweries, 3 distillers and 73 Government-Liquor Stores—a total of 555 liquor-making, liquor-selling, liquor-selling agencies, 422 of which are not owned or operated by the Government. So this is "Government Control."

The per capita consumption of liquor is about $24.00. The B. C. Liquor Bill under Government control since June 15th, 1921, has been approximately $208,000,000. Whether this has been an asset or liability may be seen from the fact that the Provincial Debt in 1929 the last year of prohibition was $34,071,936. (See Public Accounts). On November 10th, 1939, Hon. John Hart, Minister of Finance, stated that the net debt then was $183,195,419. A provincial net increase of $2,981,254. The liquor business is not a national revenue getter, but a national blood sucker.

It has gone to a far country and wasted our substance in riotous living and begun to be in want. A. F. McIntyre.

CITIZENSHIP FOR WOMEN

(Mrs. John Wright at the School for Temperance Workers)

What is citizenship? The dictionary says: "Being vested with the rights of citizens."

What institutes good citizenship? That people should do their own thinking rather than let others think for them.

The Crusades of 1893 in the United States meant the anguished protest of countless women, and Canadian women too, then had no ballot. While the words of Dr. Dio Lewis at that time, "I have not a doubt that the women of America will rid the country of drink shops, if they can preserve their spirit in which they have begun, continue their combined movements against the enemy, give the politicians and wise men a wide berth, and keep them from their Heavenly Father's order before God," Frances Willard said, "I believe that woman's prayer is the most powerful agency on earth."

She also said, "It seems to me that our Heavenly Father has granted us just as fast and as far as He can. Today the Christian women of the States are using the ballot to order the nullifiers of the 18th Amendment. While 14 nations in the world have granted women official rights, their official rights do not mean very much."

Then as now, the first requisite was to get our names on the voters' list. The Woman's Suffrage Act provides that every female person shall be entitled to vote at a Dominion election, who is (1) a British subject by birth or naturalization; (2) is of full age of 21 years or upward; (3) who has resided in Canada for the twelve months pre-makeup of the date of commencing to make up the list, and in the constituency for the three months preceding the same date; (4) is not disqualified on account of race, blood or original nationality to vote at elections for members of the province in which such female person seeks to vote, and that she is not married to an alien.

Let us look longer to get the municipal vote for women. Any person resident or non-resident who is twenty-one years of age and a British subject who is assessed either, (a) as owner or tenant of a property worth $400; (b) for income of $400 or over.

Be sure your name is on the Voters' List. Remember the ballot is secret, but it is not an extra vote for husband, brother, father or son.

Let us endeavor to elect men who will work for reforms which we think will be beneficial to our country. What are we women, who num-

Extra Sacrifice For Kirk's Need War's Challenge

Reports of Committees to General Assembly Sound Call to Replenish Coffers For Normal Activities.

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., June 7 (CP)—Pulpit and pew alike should regard them as ambassadors for Christ to an age in which the triumph of paganism is a very real danger, said the report of the budget and stewardship committee of the Presbyterian Church in Canada at the 66th General Assembly here today.

The committee urged: "Extra sacrifice to be made for the duration of the war and so long as its effects last to meet the appeals incident thereto, so as to avoid diminishing those contributions upon which the Church has learned to depend for the prosecution of the enterprises necessary to the promotion of God's glory and humanity's good."

Budget estimates of the Board of Administration recommended there be no reduction in the budget estimates for the ensuing year and that the amount of $500,000 be set as an objective for 1941 to cover the Church's work at home and abroad.

Reporting the results of an "allocations questionnaire," mailed to presbyteries and congregations, the budget and stewardship committee said: "This survey would seem to indicate that the Church, under present conditions of interests and enthusiasm, will contribute to the budget approximately $200,000 per year. The Church would seem to desire a general lowering of the allocation."

The committee submitted if the basis of the annual contribution is really between $200,000 and $300,000, expenses must be cut 10 to 20 per cent. The only Board which could cut and continue its functions was the Board of Missions and they could continue only by cutting the grants and reducing the minimum stipend.

"The other alternative is to continue the process of education of our people with the enthusiastic assistance of our ministry that their people's idea of stewardship may be raised and their contributions to the general work of their Church correspondingly increased."

The report, praised the work of the Moderator, Rev. Dr. Stuart C. Parker, whose speaking tours of the Dominion, and his leaflets, had very effectively shown the depth of his appreciation of the world's need of the Church's message in these fearful times.

It was emphasized the committee expected some effect on the normal finances of the Church by the large number of appeals for war relief funds. Foreseeing this the committee "strongly urged that people should not allow their response to these extra appeals, legitimate though they be, to neglect the amount generally earmarked for the support of the Church."

We need to enlist more women in our W. C. T. U. crusade for the common welfare. We cannot expect conditions to improve if we do not exert ourselves through the franchise to clear up evils around us everywhere.

President Hoover said, "Every citizen has a personal duty to order his own actions, to so weigh the effect of his example that his conduct shall be a positive force in his community with respect to the law." Shall we women hold a lesser ideal?
