Maybe For 1941 They'll Prefer Type of Blond

By ROBBIN COONS

Associated Press Staff Writer

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 28 (AP)—Maybe it's early to predict, but 1941 seems to have the making of a blond year.

Now 1940, as you know, was definitely brunet. It was a 12-month shadowed, in the movies, by the raven tresses of one Hedy Lamarr; a year that saw Joan Bennett, long a dazzling blond, emerge with hair as dark as Hedy's—ever darker; and a year that let Ginger Rogers desert the ranks of reddish blonds for a fling as a dark brunette. Ever the Lupino, famed for dizzy blondness, suddenly went "dark."

All this, obviously, was a reaction from the previous year, in which the late Jean Harlow, The pendulum swung away from platinum blond to rich brunette.

It is swinging back to blondness, Anita Loos, author of "Gentle Men PREFER Blondes" just about makes it official. She reports: "I was with those gentlemen who still prefer blonds I want to rejoice at the news—blonds are coming back in Hollywood. The swing a few months ago was toward the raven-tressed ladies. Serious times and a period of serious thoughts were probably as much the cause as anything else. Times are ill serious—even more so. But now the blonds with their light-hearted gaiety are undoubtedly more in demand."

Martha Scott, considered by many to be the new year's most promising star, is a reddish-golden blond. Betty Grable, up-and-coming again, is a golden girl. Virginia Dale, shapely song-and-dance comedienne from Charlotte, N. C., has hair as yellow as a canary.

Rita Hayworth naturally brunet, turned "strawberry blond" for the movie of that name, and is thinking about remaining blond. Joan Leslie, interesting starlet of "High Sierra," is a reddish-golden blond. There's also Lana Turner, who is considered sure to take the spotlight for "Ziegfeld Girl"—and Lana's blond as they come. Marie Wilson, back in films with "Virginie," strikes a blond note along with Madeleine Carroll, star of the picture.

Add these to Hollywood's already famous blonds—Anne Neagle, Una Merkel, Mariene Dietrich, Bette Davis, Penny Singleton, Garbo, Alice Faye, Virginia Bruce, Ann Southern—and you'll see that the fair of hair will put up a battle, at least for 1941 honors over the brunettes.

LONG RIVER W. I.

The regular monthly meeting of Long River Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Andrew Johnstone on January 21, with an attendance of fifteen members and one guest.

The President, Mrs. Murdoch MacLeod, presided and the meeting opened by singing the Ode and repeating the Creed in unison. Roll call was answered by "Gems of Thought." The minutes of last meeting were read and adopted and signed by President.

Thank you's were then read: One replying to a letter of sympathy and the other thanking the members for a Christmas gift. A letter from the Library was read and it was decided to order a box of books for circulation among the members. Miss Mae Found was appointed Librarian.

After the different committees had reported, new ones were appointed as follows: School Mrs. Elmer Paynter and Miss Mae Found; St. Andrew's C. Johnstone, Mrs. Bruce Bell and Mrs. James MacKenzie; Programme, Mrs. Edwin Bernard, Mrs. Andrew Johnstone and Mrs. Campbell; Lunch Mrs. Oliver Paynter, Miss Eva Paynter and Mrs. W. J. Profit.

It was decided to hold a Valentine's social if not time was held the first fine evening. The following committees were appointed:

be instructed to bring in an acquittal on the ground the Crown had not made a "prima facie" case.

The defence put no witnesses on the stand.

Mr. Johnston, addressing the jury on behalf of the Crown, explained the duties of counsel for the Crown and the jury. He urged the jurors to bring in a "conscientious verdict."

He explained the nature of the charge and the three verdicts possible—murder, manslaughter and acquittal.

Continuing, Mr. Johnston mentioned the procedure in a case of an insanity plea.

He said the Crown must prove the corpus delicti. In this case the death has been proved. It was also proved that Isidore Doucette died by violence. The evidence of the doctors brought this out.

Mr. Johnston then reviewed the evidence given by the various witnesses. It was disclosed that the wounds found on the body of Mrs. Jeremiah Doucette corresponded with those found on the body of the deceased.

Continuing he described the happenings at Jeremiah Doucette's home that night of July 13.

If the wounds had been self-inflicted or caused accidentally the instrument would surely have been found there, he pointed out.

A tremendous amount of coincidences took place all pointing a finger at the prisoner, he added. This was such an unusual and unnecessary crime to be difficult to find a motive for.

Mr. R. R. Bell

Mr. Bell, addressing the jury for defence, pointed out the seriousness of the charge.

He referred to his application for acquittal made earlier. The Crown had not proved that the prisoner caused Isidore Doucette's death.

Continuing, Mr. Bell said there was no evidence to show that the accused was there when Isidore Doucette came to his death.

The Crown was at a loss to find a motive for the crime.

Council for the defence went on to describe the conduct of the accused and deceased on the night of the tragedy.

Reviewing the evidence, he said that only one of the witnesses had told of seeing a knife at the home of the grandmother.

Mr. Bell said there was neither a great made against a man there, nor circumstantial evidence to prove that the accused was guilty of the crime.

It is a matter for the jury to decide whether or not the wounds on the deceased and those on Mrs. Jeremiah Doucette were similar, he continued. The wounds on her were apparently smaller according to the evidence he added.

The facts that were disclosed were consistent with the innocence of the accused, counsel for the defence stated.

The man could not be convicted on suspicion, Mr. Bell told the jurors.

He said he was not making a plea for sympathy on behalf of the accused but was confident the jury would find from the evidence that there was no evidence to show a motive for a crime, he concluded.

mind that a chain is no stronger than its weakest link. I also wish to remind you if all the links in a circumstantial chain are flawless, then I may tell you gentlemen it has often been said that, in a certain sense, you can never get better evidence than circumstantial evidence, because facts do not lie, as human beings sometimes do," he continued.

"Gentlemen, and I have observed during the hearing of this case there has been no undue pressing of any point by those engaged in the duty of watching over the interests of the country's justice; or no neglect of counsel to bring before the jury all the facts of the case. In this most important case you may rest assured I will endeavour to hold an even balance. My effort will be to not press unduly any point beyond what I consider its legitimate bounds. In my summation of the evidence submitted in this case I feel constrained to say at the very outset that there are some very striking and important pieces of evidence that are hard for me to understand. These facts and circumstances, these pieces of evidence, I will endeavour to bring before you in as plain a way as I possibly can, in order to assist you in arriving at a satisfactory conclusion," the Court said.

Duty of Council

Continuing he stated that, "it is true the duty of the Crown counsel is not to unduly press any matter. The duty of any public prosecutor or the Attorney General is to present all things fairly. This I feel sure has been done in this case. If I were to pass judgment I should be inclined to say that the accused is to do the very best he can for the present, when the evidence submitted is from one side only."

I want to assure you gentlemen I have a judicial duty to perform. It is far from a pleasant one. I will not shrink from doing my full duty as I see it. I hope that it may be done in a most fair and impartial manner. I may tell you further it is the practice of a judge to suggest to you gentlemen which occur to his own mind upon the evidence, and I shall do so in the course of my observations; but I do not wish to say to you, that what I have to say as a matter of observation is said not to date to you, but solely for the purpose of assisting you in arriving at your verdict. You of course may give some weight to what is coming from a person, the business of which has been to study such cases, to see how they ought to be treated, and to notice the points of them, and to see which points are the most important. But always remember you are the final arbiters of the evidence. I say to you may or may not be accepted, or may be accepted in a modified form. Gentlemen you are the sole judges of the facts. You may if you wish completely disregard everything I say respecting the facts of the case. The law in regard to the case was read to you by the Court said and read the indictment against the prisoner.

Meaning of Murder

Continuing he said, "as the Crown counsel has very well said, we all know fairly well what murder means. Junior Counsel, in opening the case read the Code, and I will read it again: 1. Homicide may be either culpable or not culpable. 2. Homicide is culpable when it consists in the killing of any person, either by an unlawful act or by an omission, without lawful excuse, to perform or observe any legal duty, or by both combined, or by causing a person by threats or fear of violence, or by deception, to do an act which caused that person's death, or by wilfully causing a child or sick person to die. 3. Culpable homicide is either murder or manslaughter."

"Now gentlemen, will be necessary for me to glance at some events preceding the unfortunate tragedy. It is up to the Crown to establish its case; otherwise your verdict should be one of not guilty. It is not enough for the Crown to say there is a good deal of darkness surrounding this tragedy on

DO YOU TAKE SALTS?

Here's a pinch that is as good as a pound

Kruschen Salts consist of several important mineral salts blended carefully in exactly the right proportions. These salts are highly refined and their quality is the highest obtainable anywhere in the world. Maybe we sacrifice something by giving you the pure mineral salts without adding any flavouring ingredients, but we believe you prefer to have your medicine concentrated in small, compact and easily absorbed doses. That's why you only need take enough Kruschen to cover a dime. It's the economical way of taking salts, too.

Another thing to remember about Kruschen—it doesn't achieve its result by irritating or inflaming the colon. It attracts to the colon the moisture which is absolutely essential if you wish to avoid constipation and achieve easy evacuation. You can get Kruschen from all druggists, 75c and 25c.

Judge's Duty

Continuing he said, "it is my duty to put before you as minutely, and certainly with a desire to make it as accurate as I can—the evidence. What then is the evidence in this case? In short, what are the facts of this case? I will describe in detail facts about which there can be no doubt; facts the tendency and import of which is for you to determine in detail all the evidence presented by the different witnesses during the course of the trial pointing out the tragedy. He started with the evidence given by Alan McKinnon who said he had gone with the accused to Mrs. Catherine Doucette's house that night. On the way they met Isidore who accompanied them to the kitchen and took place there and which was later corroborated by Mrs. Willard Duran.

The Times mentioned by McKinnon were later verified by Mrs. Edith Garnum whose evidence disclosed that Jeremiah and Isidore were still together at 1:45 a.m. on the morning of July 14, he continued.

The evidence given by Miss Mary Malone was particularly impressive to the Court. She told of hearing Jeremiah Doucette's voice mumble in the hall at his house and also a deeper voice. She had also stated she heard Jeremiah and his wife having work in the kitchen. This witness had heard a man run past her window then lighter steps. Evidence had disclosed that the deceased was lying at the corner of the house.

Continuing he said that he had not been deeply impressed with the evidence given by Henry Gauthier. He did not think this witness was telling the truth when he said he had not recognized the man who ran across the street when he came to the scene of the tragedy. Another strange thing was that this important witness had gone home without telling the police what had taken place.

Man Fell

He continued by citing Mrs. Tar-bush's evidence regarding the car stopping at the corner of the house. He also told of disclosures of Sgt. W. Higgins and Constable Howard Dowling regarding the conditions they found at the scene of the tragedy. He told of the police having a conversation with Mrs. Jeremiah Doucette, the injured woman, then later going out to Catherine Doucette's home. What took them out there, the prisoner was there, and it was up although it was about five o'clock in the morning.

He said that the demeanor of Mrs. Catherine Doucette on the stand was "the most pathetic exhibition he ever saw in this or any other case. She was the mother of the unfortunate man who was killed and the grandmother of the accused yet she was laughing, giggling and having a great deal of levity."

Continuing the Court said he was going to rush through her evidence as he did not attach much credence or weight to what she said. Briefly reviewing her statements he told of her going to Jeremiah's house and having seen she walked around it. He pointed out that there was a board fence at the place which would prevent a person from walking around the house. "To me she relates some of the most incredible things," he added.

A Motive

"Someone killed Isidore Doucette on the morning of the 14th of July last. Mr. Justice Saunders said and added, "someone cruelly and seriously injured Helen Doucette, wife of the prisoner. Who did it? What object or what mo-

Honest Ground

"If you find serious, intelligent and honest ground that will influence you in coming to the conclusion that the facts of the case are quite consistent with the innocence of the prisoner, by all means acquit him. Your verdict under such circumstances would be not guilty."

He also told them that they could bring in one of three verdicts: Guilty, Not Guilty or Guilty of manslaughter. For the latter they must be satisfied that the killing was not premeditated.

He asked the jury if they could find a motive for the crime. Was the man jealous of his wife? No doubt a man who is jealous of his wife is a dangerous man, he added.

In conclusion he told the jury that if they had any reasonable doubt as to the guilt of the accused then they were to give him the benefit of that doubt. However, it must be a conscientious, reasonable doubt.
