THE UNFINISHED PRAYER.

"Now I lay me—say it, darling." "Lay me," hepped the tiny lips Of my daughter, kneeling, bending, O'er her folded finger-tips.

"Pay de Lord," the words came faintly—

Painter still, "my soul to teep." Then the tired head fairly nodded, And my child was fast asleep.

But the dewy eyes half opened When I clasped her to my breast, And the dear voice gently whispered—"Mamma, 'Dod' knows all de yest."

Oh! the trusting, sweet confiding Of the child-heart! Would that I Thus might trust my Heavenly Father, He who hears my feeblest cry! Col. Thos. H. Ayars.

A. J. Fraser, Montague.

THE DOMESTICATED GIRL.

A Frenchwoman, in "The London Standard," gives men a talking to on the subject of their lack of interest in housekeeping. She says men are apt to forget that nearly three-quarters of their income passes through the wife's or sister's hands for household purposes, and English girls could manage just as well as French girls.

Are Frenchwomen, she asks, dowdy, dull, or uninteresting? Yet they are all housekeepers, and more than that, they take an interest in their husbands' affairs, and know the length of their purses. She says no encouragement is given to women to train themselves in housewifely accomplishments, and the wages and conditions of labor of women employed in domestic service are open to serve criticism.

Give her a decent room and a proper salary and you will save dollars. And to those who have a sister or wife managing for them at home, don't think it is easy to keep house, and because she likes it she has no brains. She will enjoy the new books. She will talk about politics as well as you do, even if she can cook a nice dinner when your cook leaves you in the lurch. She does not appreciate any less than her golfing sister a good dressmaker because she happens to make her blouses to save your pocket.

"Mac's Blood Food is the right remedy for nervousness, lassitude, anaemia and all disorders arising from an impoverished blood supply. Try it, use it, make it prove our claims. A box 50c. The Two Macs. 7-26M31.

Monday the 29th, instant having been proclaimed a Public half holiday by His Honour, the Lieutenant Governor, I would ask the citizens to observe the same, and specially request the merchants to close their places of business at one o'clock. I would also request all citizens to decorate and illuminate their stores, houses and in every way take an active part in making the visit of their Royal Highnesses, the Duke and Duchess of Connaught and the Princess Patricia a worthy success.

Karn-Morris Pianos. Pianos of Prestige. Notoriety may be bought or borrowed, but Reputation must be earned. The purchase of a piano is in most homes, an event of a life time. The utmost care should therefore be used to select the right kind of instrument. The case of a "commercial" piano may be artistically modelled and beautifully finished, and if one bought a piano merely for its worth as a piece of furniture, judgment might well be based on excellence that appeals to the eye alone. But a piano should be more than an ornament in the home. A PIANO OF QUALITY is not merely so much wood and metal, but a thing of life—an instrument with soul. A PIANO OF QUALITY readily responds to the player's touch, thought and mood, making it possible to interpret the works of the great masters in all their sublimity, splendor, strength, brilliancy or delicacy. A Piano of Quality can be swayed by the will and skill of the Player—it will produce the delicate shadings of expression, the exquisite minor beauties of tone, which are priceless to the true lover of music. Be careful when you select your piano, apply this test, and you will have a piano that will give a life long satisfaction and will be a pride and pleasure to your entire family as well as your circle of friends.
