Arliss Reveals Incomparable Artistry in "Man Who Played God"

George Arliss, first gentleman of the screen, brought to the Prince Edward Theatre yesterday a portrayal of genius which evidences in every way the genius possessed by the star. "The Man Who Played God" is the latest Arliss starring vehicle for Warner Bros. and achieves the virtually impossible by surpassing the surpassingly fine films this eminent actor has made for the talking screen. In this picture Mr. Arliss shows what the talking picture can be when intelligently and humanly handled in casting, direction, story and setting.

There is no doubt that "The Man Who Played God" will be one of the outstanding memories of the 1932 picture season.

"The Man Who Played God," then, is Arliss' greatest picture, absorbing dramatic, human and real. It is great in every department and in every sense of the word. The cast supporting Mr. Arliss includes Violet Heming, Bette Davis, a newcomer, Ivan Simpson, Louise Closser Hale, Andre Lugent, Oscar Apfel, Donald Cook and Raymond Milland.

"The Man Who Played God" will appeal to every resident of Charlottetown, regardless of race, creed, nationality or position in life. It is a story of a man with whom Fate played strange pranks, a drama as human as you and I. Readers of The Guardian are urged to see this picture, representing as it does a milestone in talking picture achievement.

"Once A Lady" Ruth Chatterton's Most Appealing Role

One of those events looked forward to and cherished by movie millions, a new Ruth Chatterton picture, is currently the draw at the Capitol Theatre. The newest opus for the "first lady" of films is titled "Once A Lady," and is a melange of the surefire dramatic play which this emotional actress so effectively handled in "Madame X," "Sarah and Son," and "Anybody's Woman."

The story is of a Russian adventuress transplanted from Paris, scene of many amorous conquests, by the different wooing of an English son of wealth. The changed environment, with the husband's disapproving family alienating the affection of a daughter from her mother, and a moment of indiscretion with a former admirer on the eve of an important election in which the young man is interested, provoke a break-up. Reported killing in a train wreck, the outlawed wife remains "dead," becoming famous butterfly in Paris, but jealously watching the career of her daughter from a distance.

The manner in which the husband's faulty divorce decree, fear of scandal, and the woman's anonymous devotion to her grown daughter's love urge, are dramatically woven into a happy event for the second generation, makes an impressive climax. Don't miss it.

A magistrate says habitual mendicants should be made to work. They beg to differ.

Scout News and Notices

WOULD YOU LIVE TO BE 100?

All are familiar with the exponents of long life who credit their full years to smoking, or not smoking, to a drink a day or an apple a day, or an onion a day, or to being blessedly single, or blessedly married. The newest recipe, and promising a full hundred years, reward, comes from an authority from whom it seems we should have heard previously—Lord Baden-Powell, head of the world Scout Movement.

The promise is made in a characteristically breezy letter to the Editor of "Camping," incident to denial of a rumor that the hero of Mafeking had discontinued sleeping out of doors.

Writes B. P.—
 "Dear Mr. Editor—I am sorry, but I'm going to have you up for libel, slander, and malicious perjury, seeing that in the February issue of camping you make two definite statements about me which are terminological inaccuracies of the first order.

"I haven't had a 'severe cold'—I never catch cold. I did set a touch of the 'flu round about the middle region for a few days, but it wasn't what you would call a 'cold.' People who sleep out of doors don't catch colds.

"2. As to my 'advancing years making it unwise for me to sleep out of doors,' they would make me look darned silly if I succeeded in driving me indoors to sleep. My goodness! What ever put that idea into your—Why, man, I—me—sleep in a nasty, stuffy house! Not I.

"What has 'over 70' got to do with it? I've learned wisdom in my 75 years, and that tells me that if everyone slept out—and especially on these jolly frosty nights—we should all live to 100 or more; but as this would overwork the club it is perhaps just as well that some should sleep in and die early—say at 90 or so. But for me to sleep in! Not if I know it!—Yours, BADEN-POWELL."

A dog show by mail was a unique event recently staged by the Lone Scouts of Ontario. The dogs were not mailed. The boys sent in snapshots and a 200-word description indicating breed (if any), size, colour, work done on the farm, tricks, and general character. There was keen competition.

MELBA APPROVED WHISTLING

During the recent newspaper "whistling 100" debate Lord Baden-Powell recalled a Scout concert given at Albert Hall by Madam Melba "at which there was some excellent chorus whistling." B. P. declared the art should not be allowed to die "because of the scarcity of tunes in modern music."

The beautiful and useful gifts, testifies to the popularity of Miss Dolron in the community. Miss Dolron although taken by surprise thanked the assembled friends for their lovely gifts and kind wishes. A delicious luncheon was then served by Mrs. George A. Loelcer, assisted by Mrs. Frank Gallant, and Mrs. John L. Dolron. The remainder of the evening was spent in games. The dream so fondly cherished by our farmers and others in the ranks of labor that prices would never again descend to former low levels has had a rude awakening. Potato prices never reached such a low ebb since "Confederation!" We may say the same of pork, wool, eggs, cheese and other commodities which now border in the same ridiculous category.

In fact it looks like a big joke, and would be funny were it not for the fact that it has also a pathetic side.

A man stepped into a milliner's shop the other day on business, and accidentally sat down on a hat that some one had laid on a chair. He remained there until no one was looking in that direction, and then quietly got up and stepped to one side. There was a lady in at the time looking for a hat shaped to suit her. She finally found the one the man had put in "shape" and it just took her fancy; it was, she said, just what she wanted.

Soviet Russia's Consul Recalled

MOSCOW, April 18.—(A.P.)—Soviet Russia asked the Manchurian Government today to recall its Consul from Blagoveshchensk, Siberia, on charges that he had abused the privilege of coded telegrams by sending to various parts of China and abroad appeals signed by General Mah Chan-Shan, Manchurian Minister of War.

The request, issued by the foreign Commissariat, said General Mah, was in refuge in Helungkiang Province, of which he is Governor.

The Commissariat ordered that none of the Manchurian Consul's telegrams be transmitted and asked that a substitute Consul be appointed.
