NATURE'S TIME KEEPERS.

"Dainty little what o'clock. Oh, tell me, please the hour, When I blow the feather-flock That makes you like a flower?" "Child! Can I tell the hour By which each one's life is led, When you hold all the power, And blow off my downy head?" "Pretty pretty Four o'clock, You will surely know the time! With the bells you have in lock Do you ever sweetly chime?" Said this "Marvel of Peru": "My eyes are closed at four, Is this news enough for you? I can tell you nothing more." "Oh, Sunflower, bright and tall, You must be learned and wise: Tell me the hours you call When your rustling leaves arise?" "You, child," the Sunflower said, "My wisdom comes from Heaven. Senses when I hang my head, My days and nights are even."
