Heads Ontario Social Creditors

(C. P. by Guardian's Special Wire)

ST. THOMAS, Ont., June 19—A 45-year-old Toronto barrister, Major J. C. MacCorkindale is the new leader of the Social Credit Association of Ontario. He was elected head of the newly-formed organization at its first annual congress here Saturday.

A graduate of Osgoode Hall Law School, the Major saw service overseas with the Royal Field Artillery. He has long been a student of monetary systems and was active in the last Dominion election campaign on behalf of Hon. H. H. Stevens' Reconstruction Party.

Major MacCorkindale was elected to the presidency of the association by 24 votes to 13 over Lloyd Jaeger, Toronto railway employee who had acted as provisional president. In addition to the 37 registered delegates from Ontario, the congress was attended by representatives of the Quebec Association from Montreal and a delegation from the United States.

CHARLOTTETOWN

DESCUSSION ON F. C. A. ACT IN SENATE

Hon. Mr. Sinclair: Now just let us examine the statements of those who are so ready to impeach the accuracy of others. My honourable friend who has interrupted me, and who was one who threw this unfair challenge to the committee, made a statement in this House last year, which I quote from Hansard of 1937. There are several cases cited here, but it does not matter very much which I take, I do not think I will bother the House with all of them. First I will take a case in the summer of 1935:

"In the summer of 1935, Peter D. Peters, of Rollo Bay, made application to the Farm Loan Board for a loan. His application was turned down. No reason was given, so far as I know. I knew a mistake had been made, and I so informed Mr. J. D. MacLean, the commissioner in Ottawa. He admitted they were not mistake proof, and said he would have another appraisal made in the summer of 1936 by one of his best men. This was done and Mr. Peters was offered a loan of $2,500. This together with what he could easily sell of his farm last fall would more than pay all his bills in full. In the summer of 1936 the new board of review, being keen for business, and hearing by some means or other that Mr. Peters wanted a loan, or wanted to have his obligations adjusted cited him and his creditors before them. I was one of the creditors and I appeared and asked the board whether Mr. Peters had made an application to them. Their registrar not being with them that day, they could not tell, but thought they would hear the case anyhow. I then told them that Mr. Peters was both able and willing to pay his creditors in full, and did not want their interference at all. The chairman, Judge Saunders, asked Mr. Peters what he had to say. He declared he was able to pay his bills in full all right, but stated that if everybody else was getting a cut he thought he should get one too. Judge Saunders seemed inclined to agree with me, but Mr. Harding, the commissioner who represented the creditors on the board, strongly dissented, saying that inasmuch as they had come to Souris to hear this case they were going to hear it. Finally Judge Saunders agreed with Harding, and their decision was that Mr. Peters should sell $200 worth of produce off his farm, not more, and that the creditors would have to accept this amount together with the $2,450, or thereabouts, which the Loan Board would provide as payment in full. And —would you beleieve it? —the board of review made this riding without ascertaining what Mr. Peters' liabilities then amounted to."

Take notice of that.

"After thinking the matter over, and talking it over with his creditors, Mr. Peters decided to disregard the board of review altogether and pay his obligations in full; which he did.

That is the statement, honourable gentlemen, made in this House last year about that case.

Now, I have in my hand a memorandum of the Department of Finance which was sent to the honourable member in charge of the Bill (Hon. Mr. Farris). This is what it says:

"I need only quote from Judge Saunders's report on the Peter D. Peters case to indicate where the misrepresentation that Senator Hughes charges lies:

"Peter D. Peters' story to the board was that Senator Hughes was pressing him for payment and while he was both anxious and willing to do so, he was unable to pay him. Senator Hughes' statement that the board made its findings without ascertaining what Mr. Peters' liabilities amounted to is untrue."

The quotation is from the report of the chairman of the board of review.

Now I quote from a memorandum of the Director, signed by H. F. Gordon:

Whether subsequent to the submission of his proposal Peters made preferential payments to certain of his creditors is aside from the issue. He would be naturally instructed by the board that such payments should not be made during the stay of proceedings. The honourable senator misled the Senate with regard to this case.

Now, I could take up further cases.

Hon. Mr. Hughes: Who made that statement?

Hon. Mr. Sinclair: That statement is made over the signature of the Director of the Farmers' Creditors Arrangement Act, and refers to the statement made by the honourable gentleman. (Hon. Mr. Hughes) in the Senate last year.

Now, there are other cases here, but I will not weary the House by going over them. I will say this, however that I am informed by the Director that before those statements were put on Hansard last year by the honourable senator from King's (Hon. Mr. Hughes), the honourable senator met the Director in the office of the Minister of Finance; that the Minister instructed the Director to take the senator to his office and go into these cases and point out the facts in regard to them. I am informed also that he did so, and that after having done so the honourable gentleman expressed his satisfaction and said that he had been misinformed. The Director then asked the honourable gentleman to say so to the Deputy Minister, and in the presence of the Deputy Minister and the Director the statement was repeated after the cases had been gone into fully ,and after the honourable gentleman had seen the affidavits, the statement of liabilities of the debt, the conditions, and the proposals made under them. The honourable gentleman came into this House the next day, or the day after, and repeated the statements that appeal on Hansard, although these matters had been explained to him in the department and he had admitted in the presence of those two men that his informant was wrong and that he regretted having brought the matter up.

An Hon. Senator: Question!

Hon. Mr. Sinclair: Now, honourable gentlemen, I say it is unfair to our province and to Canada to go to such lengths in order to try to discredit an Act. To know that men will so use their position in Parliament to further selfish ends—

Hon. Mr. Hughes: Hear, hear.

Hon. Mr. Sinclair: I will not go further than that. That is far enough, honourable gentlemen. I just want to say in conclusion that I feel and believe that the Act is administered in Prince Edward Island as well as in any other province.

In regard to the discussion this afternoon on privity of contract, the chairman of the board in Prince Edward Island took the view that, on account of there not being privity of contract, the Act did not give the board power to do what was done by many other boards of review, namely, to take a third person. While proposals were formulated, they have not been confirmed by the board, and are yet standing. If this Bill goes through the proposals may be confirmed. That is a matter for the board to decide. Now I think I have said enough.

Hon. Mr. Hughes: Too much.

Hon. Mr. Sinclair: I know the learned judge who administers the Act. I do not think you could get a man on the Bench or at the Bar in Prince Edward Island who would give as freely of his time and ability as Mr. Clark has done, or who would be more careful to do justice to everybody than the present chairman of the board of review in that province.

I really feel, honourable senators that it is unfortunate that so much time has been taken with these details.

Some Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Hon. Mr. Sinclair: Had it not been that honourable members from other provinces were citing Prince Edward Island as an example of maladministration, I should not have spoken at all. I say to my honourable friends with all frankness that the storm they are making in this House is simply a tempest in a teapot, and that it really has little or no effect within the confines of the Island. I do not know that I need say anything more.

After Pneumonia Couldn't Get Strong

After many severe illnesses the patient is often left in an extremely weak and exhausted condition.

To all those convalescents needing a tonic to strengthen and build up their weakened system we would recommend Milburn's Health and Nerve Pills to assist them to recover the full enjoyment of robust health. They help to tone up the nervous system and bring back bodily strength and vigor.

Buy a box and be convinced.

Mrs. George Clark, Wallace, N.S., writes:—"Some time ago I had a severe attack of pneumonia. I never seemed to get my strength back, and was always in a weak, nervous condition until a friend advised me to take Milburn's Health and Nerve Pills.

After I had taken two boxes I felt as well as ever, so I will recommend them to any one who is suffering as I did, for I could not have taken any medicine that would have done me so much good."

Second Chance

"There are some mistakes which can't," said Maynard and turned to his work, leaving Ferguson, as it were, in the air.

"Surely you prefer to have it brought to you notice?" Ferguson protested.

"Of course," the other said sharply.

Ferguson turned away and went back to his own desk.

As he walked homeward that evening he went over the events of the day in his mind. Something had been wrong. There had been an entirely different atmosphere, a covert hostility.

Mrs. Gaddesden, however, was imperturbably cheerful and after his meal he settled down in his "harbour" with his book. Suddenly there was a tap at his door: "There's a young lady to see you," Mrs. Gaddesden said.

"What again?" he asked.

"But a different one. It's my niece, Mary Donovan."

He sprang up. "Do come in, Miss Donovan!" he called.

"You clear out. Auntie, there's a dear," Mary Donovan said, as she came in. "I want to see Mr. Ferguson alone. On business."

BAD NEWS

"You're surprised to see me?" she went on when Mrs. Gaddesden had left them.

"Well —I am. But am also pleased."

"I've got bad news for you," she said quietly.

"Bad news?" he repeated, and she nodded.

"I'm your friend," she said. "And I thought it was my duty to tell you. All day the office and the stores have been full of rumours about you."

"So that's it!" he said, almost to himself.

"Yes. As af as I can make out the rumours all came from that nasty little man Wilson."

He nodded. "Things have been awkward all day at the office. I couldn't understand it. Maynard, for example."

"Several of the people made it their business to attempt to tell me," she said, grimly.

"They would," he said.

"It was idle to deny it, of course," she said.

"What was it that was said?"

She hesitated, seeking to soften the blow. "That you had been in prison," she said, without meeting his eyes.

"I'm sorry, Mary, but it's true. I'm a gaol-bird," he said, with a rueful smile.

"Nonsense!" she protested. "I've known all about it for several days."

"You!" he said in amazement.

"Yes. I turned up the papers containing the record in the Public Library and read it all. Mr. Ferguson I've never been so sorry for anybody in my life as I am for you!"

"Thank you, Mary," he said quietly.

"And I don't think I've ever hated a man as much as I did that lawyer."

Ferguson shrugged his shoulders: "He did what he was paid to do, and did it remarkably well. I thought the Judge was unfair, and it was evident that nobody in the Court believed what I said. Nevertheless, what I said happened to be true. Not that it matters a great deal now."

"But it does matter —to your friends."

"I only have one, Mary," he said, as he looked up to meet her waiting eyes.

"It's difficu't to track it down, but apparently than man Wilson met different men in different bars on Saturday. It all seems to come from him."

"Well —he's finished me in Mossford."

"Whatever for?" she protested.

"I couldn't go on," he said. "I should feel a pariah. No. It's finished."

"Isn't it cowardly not to face them?" she asked, quietly.

"I suppose it is. But it needs something more than courage —a kind of brazenness I don't possess. If I were a criminal I'd face it—but, as it is, I should want to explain things to people when they were rude to me," he added with a little smile. "Apart from anything else, I should be at everyone's mercy."

"How?"

"I couldn't correct an office boy. Maynard's attitude to-day shows me what I should have to expect. I don't blame them. From their point of view why should they be asked to work with a man like me?"

For moment she did not reply. He watched her as she looked down at the fire. Her face was white; she obviously felt the whole thing as much as she had said.

"I shall always be grateful to you," he said.

She looked up and smiled at him: "You poor dear!" she said.

"You do see I can't go back to Trevowes?"

"But what will you do?"

He shrugged his shoulders: "I haven't the fainest idea, Mary."

Mrs. Gaddesden came in at that juncture bearing what, in her considered opinion, was a panacea for all the ills— a pot of tea: "I thought you'd both like a cup of tea," she explained.

"Thank you, Auntie, Mary said.

"I won't interrupt your talk," she said. "But I hope there's nothing wrong."

Mary Donovan smiled without replying and Mrs. Gaddesden apparently accepted the smile as an assurance that nothing was wrong.

"She's a dear!" said Ferguson as he watched Mary Donovan pour out the tea. "What made you turn up my case?" he went on.

"Something that George Garrod said made me suspect the truth. He'd no idea at the time that he had unwittingly given you away. It was the last thing he wanted."

"He's a good fellow, Mary," Ferguson said. "And he's very much in love with you."

"How do you know?"

"I hear all the family news."

"Oh, from Auntie. I suppose he is," she went on.

"A good, solid fellow. He was very decent to me at a time when decency of any kind surprised me."

Mary Donovan nodded: "It's a pity that we can't control our emotions," she said. A pity that we can't fall in love with the people we should."

"It may be that our emotions are a better guide than our reason."

"It may be. I have no intention of marrying George."

"But I thought . . ."

"So do many people. But they are wrong. And at last I think he knows it. But I didn't come here to-night to talk about my affairs. I thought that I should warn you about the whisperings at the office. You would be ready for them then."

IN THE HYGIENE COURT OF JUSTICE

Typist Accused of Headaches

(Before Mr. Justice Kruschen)

Prosecuting Counsel: This, my lord, is a case of a young woman charged with habitual headaches. It is a sad case, because her affliction renders her unfit for work or play, a misery . . .

Judge: What is a headache? (laughter)

Counsel: The dictionary defines it as a continuous pain in the head.

Judge: (addressing prisoner): Why do you have a continuous pain in the head, young lady?

Prisoner: I don't know, my lord. It isn't my fault.

Judge: The question of whose fault it is will be decided by this Court. Do you admit the charge?

Prisoner: Yes, my lord.

Judge: What steps do you take to prevent these headaches?

Prisoner: I sometimes take a sedative, my lord.

Judge: Sedative? Do you really mean to tell me that a sedative prevents headaches?

Prisoner: No, my lord, of course a sedative doesn't exactly prevent them, it. . . .

Judge: Have you ever heard of Kruschen?

Prisoner: Yes, my lord. I used to take it regularly.

Judge: And did you have headaches then?

Prisoner: N-no.

Judge: Young lady, you may count yourself fortunate in being brought before me. In this court we regard preventable illness as a crime. The complaint from which you suffer is caused by nothing else but neglect—neglect of the very first rule of sane and healthy living. It is caused, like so many other afflictions, simply and solely by constipation—or that even more dangerous and far more prevalent condition of semi-constipation. A pinch of Kruschen Salts—as much as will lie on a ten-cent piece—taken in a cup of coffee, tea, or a glass of water, every morning will help to finally and completely rid you of your trouble. My ruling is that you go straightway and get a bottle of Kruschen and begin this necessary practice tomorrow morning.

Prisoner: (smiling through her tears) Oh, thank you, my lord.

Counsel: About costs. . . .

Judge: Quite insignificant. The cost of 'the little daily dose' is much less than 1c a day.

KRUSCHEN SALTS

relieve constipation and rheumatism

Kruschen is a combination of several mineral salts which your body must get, in some way, to keep the blood pure, the inside clean, and the system generally toned up, but which you can't get in Nature's own way without abundant exercise and fresh air. You should have these salts every day; hence the importance of the "little daily dose". Every drug counter in Kruschen in 25c, 45c and 75c bottles. It's the little daily dose that does it.
