New Order Issued Re P.E.I. Tubers

From information received yesterday by Mr. G. H. Barbour, prices and supply representative of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board some P.E.I. potatoes will probably be sent to areas in Canada where the shortage is most acute.

Mr. Barbour received the following telegram last night from Mr. W. A. Stanford who works for the food administrator: "Please instruct all carlot receivers potatoes your region report to you immediately by grade holdings in excess 200 bags seed and table stock potatoes. Receivers to retain 50 per cent of holdings in each grade for disposition upon instruction from your office".

No instructions were received as to where the potatoes were to be shipped but it was assumed they were intended to relieve regions where the shortage was most severe.

It is estimated that there are probably 300,000 bushels of potatoes yet to be shipped from this Province.

Hears Son Is Japaness Prisoner

A widowed mother who never gave up hope, this week received answer to prayers for her son's life when official word transmitted through the Red Cross told her that Pvt. Everett H. M. Dunbrack, 24 was alive although a prisoner of the Japanese.

Mrs. Hilda Dunbrack of 17 Underwood Park, has not heard directly from him in nearly two years, and the news of him being a prisoner of war was the first she had heard concerning Everett since May 7, 1942, when word came that he was missing after the fall of Corregidor.

Mrs. Dunbrack, whose husband died 12 years ago, is among the Waltham mothers making the utmost contribution to the war effort. Not only is she herself employed in a war industry, but there is one other son in service and another going Monday in a Selective Service contingent, leaving the only one of her four children remaining at home, a daughter, Hazel who is a sophomore at Waltham High School.

Pvt. Everett Dunbrack, concerning whom word was just received, is the eldest of three sons The second boy is Kelsey C. Dunbrack who last September enlisted in the navy, received training at Newport, R. I. to qualify as electrician's mate, third class, and now is on active duty as a member of a destroyer crew in the Pacific theatre of operations The youngest son, Gordon was 18 year old last December. Upon leaving Monday with a contingent from Board 151, City Hall, the youth hopes to obtain assignment to the ground crew of an air unit

The telegram received by Mrs. Dunbrack concerning her oldest son was as follows: "Your son Private Ernest H. M. Dunbrack, is reported a prisoner of war of the Japanese government in the Phillippine Islands. Letter follows "

Born in Waltham Jan. 9, 1919 the young man attended Whittemore School and graduated from Waltham High School in the class of 1937. For two years he was a member of championship Waltham High hockey teams, playing as goalie. He also went out for football and basketball. After school he went to work in a grocery store and also in the Waltham Watch Co until in October of 1940 he enlisted in the ground crew of the Army Air Force.

He received his training at Fort Slocum, N. Y., and in January of 1941 was assigned to Nichols Field in the Phillippines. —Waltham News Tribune

(Private Dunbrack is a grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Burhoe, Alexandra, P. E. I.)

THE KIRK OF ST. JAMES

The morning service at The Kirk yesterday was broadcast over CFCY when the Minister, the Rev. T. H. Bussell Somers preached on the text "For godly sorrow worketh repentance to salvation not to be repented of but the sorrow of the world worketh death" (II Cor. 7:10) and in the evening on the subject "The Lonely People of the Gospels." He outlined the case of The Virgin Mary, Thomas, the man by the pool of Bethesda, Judas and our Lord. Speaking of Judas, Mr. Somers said: "we find in him the loneliness of sin. Having received the sop at the Last Supper, he went immediately out and it was night. Why did he hurry from that little company? Nobody drove him from the supper table. Our Lord did not rise with clenched hands of loathing and hound him on to the bosom of the dark. In that brief hour everything is intense, and you see in a flash into the heart of things —into the infinite love of the Redeemer; into the infinite loneliness of sin Your little child goes singing through the house, and prattles to you of a hundred trifles. And then some day the child is strangely silent, and shuns you and forgets his little songs. And then you who are mothers know at once that there is something troubling that little conscience, and that the one path to communion is confession. Sin separates the mother from her child. Sin separates the lover from his loved one. We think that sin is going to make us happy, but in the end it only makes us lonely. From every company, from all society, from love and fellowship, from home and heaven, sin drives a man out into the night. Every sin we conquer in the battle helps us to a richer comradeship. Every sin we deliberately cling to is a mighty power in us making for loneliness and to be lonely for ever —that is hell.

London Newsman

British Isles probably is the Canadian Army whose March manoeuvers sent German reconnaissance planes streaking home with the alarm that invasion armies were massing.) Britain's finest—the 8th Army, desert-toughened into one of the greatest assault forces in the world, and the 1st Army, veterans of Dunkerque—are in Africa.

2. There has been no slackening of the heavy supply shuttle to North Africa and to Murmansk, no sign of a gathering of the tremendous fleet necessary to land an ardous army in France and keep it there. More than 800 ships, the greatest force of its kind in history carried the men and material to North Africa for the much smaller landings last November.

3. The pattern of air attack and the massing of air forces, have not yet taken a form foreshadowing imminent landings.

Multiply Dieppe tenfold, back it with 1,000,000 men poised to strike, blanket it with air power capable of sweeping the luftwaffe from the coast and channel skies—and that is the probable pattern of invasion when it does come.

Multiple Dieppes

The multiple Dieppes, unofficial observers here believe, will be conducted simultaneously at the best beachheads from North Cape to the eastern Mediterranean.

There will be division-strong commando assignments combining seaborne assault troops with parachute and air-borne forces.

Some will prove diversionary, but others will establish footholds, and into one or two of these will pour the first 1,000,000 allied fighting men.

It may be supported by a Russian offensive from the east and accompanied by diversionary attacks into southern Europe.

An examination of the map and a recheck of past commando operations show these obvious landing-place possibilities:—

1. Ostend, Calais and Boulogne closest beachheads to England; Dieppe, barriers of which have been tested; and Le Havre. Their advantage is their nearness, allowing heavier air cover and swift troop crossings in complete relays of small landing craft. It is only 20 miles from England to Calais, 67 to Dieppe and 105 to Le Havre. Their disadvantage is that there the German defences reputedly are the strongest and deepest.

2. Cherbourg and the Normandy Peninsula; Brest, Lorient, St. Nazaire and the Brittany Peninsula. It is 88 miles to Cherbourg and 165 to Brest. The coast would protect both flanks as the Allies deepened their drive inland. Disadvantages are, again, the strength of long-prepared German defences, the greater width of France to be crossed before bringing the fight to German soil, and the treacherous currents of the Breton coast.

In addition, there are the possibilities of co-ordinated attack on the low countries and North Sea coast of Germany— closest to Berlin of all bridgeheads. An attack on Norway—where the Germans are extended, but where a double water crossing would be necessary to follow on to German soil—is expected to clean up that flank and eliminate enemy submarine and air bases.
