The death of Lawson Walker which occurred at his home in Kensington, on the 23rd ult. is much regretted by his many friends. He was the eldest son of Wm. and Mrs. Walker and had just entered on a life of usefulness and promise, being in his 26th year. He was gentlemanly and courteous to every one and through his protracted illness of over one year he manifested cheerfulness and submission to the Divine will and never murmured. He leaves to mourn besides his father and mother one brother, Scott of North Battleford, Sask., and two sisters, Mrs. D. McKenzie, Kensington, and Ethel, at home. The funeral was largely attended, although the roads were almost impassable.

Everybody is familiar with Little Lord Fauntleroy, the most amiable and lovable of child characters fiction had presented to the world. Therefore it will interest all lovers of fiction to know that this evening at Wonderland, this impersonation will be given, with Buster Brown in the title role. Buster takes and acts the part to perfection—and Dearest is one of the best impersonations imaginable. The crusty old Earl too in his gruff curtness, completely won over by the loving child—all three will be there, and Wonderland bids for a full house with confident expectation. This is a superb act, one which has won for it the fullest of praise everywhere it has been given. See it tonight at Wonderland in Summerside.

The friends of Miss Minnie Leard are pleased to know that she has returned home from the P.E.I. Hospital. To those who know her the result of her treatment is both a surprise and wonder. For sixteen years last winter over by the ventilation, in grips, etc., she returned home on April 30th completely cured able to walk without difficulty. To those who are without cause prejudiced against the Hospital, Miss Leard wishes to say that no one could be treated with more consideration and kindness. It is needless to speak of the matron, for everyone who has met her cannot but acknowledge her a woman without superior in the land and the nurses never fail in their duties.—Com.
