Forced Feeding Ups Milk Yield In Calif.

BY HOWARD C. HEYN

PARAMOUNT, Calif., May 10 — (AP) — "Shotgun" dairying, they call it, and it's big business for a colony of Dutch immigrants in this flat suburban district.

They feed copra, among other things, and they often wear out an entire herd in a year.

They supply more milk than any other county in the United States, yet they can't quite meet the needs of the Los Angeles metropolitan area alone.

This isn't farming, it's industry. The cows are in stalls and corrals, for there are no placid meadows. Land is too costly for alfalfa growing. Paved streets, instead of country roads, bisect the even rows of houses and barns and the rumble of feed trucks is never stilled.

Forced feeding (the shotgun technique) consists simply of giving booby all she'll eat of a rich diet—copra, linseed meal, cottonseed meal, hay. This system has built up a milk production of 10,500,000 gallons a month and yields $61,000,000 annually to the dairymen. They have to produce as much milk as possible because feed is high. All of it is shipped in.

Copra, the dried and broken kernels of the coconut, comes from the Philippines. Plants at nearby San Pedro crush it, extract the oil and mill the residue for cattle feed.

Such is the intensified activity of Paramount, Artesia, Clearwater, Bellflower and Norwalk. The Dutch, along with substantial numbers of Portuguese and Swiss, go about their dairying with no sentiment whatever. When their cows "burn out," they sell them for beef and buy fresh ones, for about $300 each.

The average dairymen has 100 cows on 10 acres or less. He expects each cow to produce 1,200 gallons a year. He can't afford to be sentimental.

The influx of the Dutch began after the Second World War. Charles Koopmans, who operates an insurance and travel agency in Paramount, estimates their present number at 20,000 or more, many of whom left Holland because of the effects of the war.

When It's Too Dry or Wet, Don't Spade Garden Soil

One of the first maxims beginning gardeners are likely to hear is: "Never work the soil when it is wet." They often have to learn by their own experience, the hard way, that it is difficult, often impossible, to work most soils when they are too dry.

There is a point in between when the ground is neither too wet, nor too dry, and any garden task can be performed with a minimum of exertion and a maximum of benefit, so far as working the soil is concerned. Spading, cultivating, sowing seed and transplanting seedlings all are tasks most easily and efficiently performed when the soil is just right.

When soil makes a mud pie, it's too wet to work.

When soil crumbles like this, it is just right to spade.

To determine this point requires neither practice nor experience. Just pick up a handful of the soil and pat it between the hands. If it makes a mud-pie, the soil is too

Winner Of McKee Aviation Trophy Is Announced

OTTAWA, May 10 — (CP) — This year's winner of the McKee Trans-Canada Trophy for meritorious service in the advancement of aviation is Capt. B. A. Rawson, director of flight development, Trans-Canada Air Lines, Winnipeg. Defence Minister Claxton announced tonight.

The award to Capt. Rawson recognized "his outstanding contribution to advancement in the field of aviation during 1947, backed by an excellent record of achievement during a 22-year period of association with aviation development in general."

The McKee Trophy has been awarded annually since 1927 for outstanding service in the Canadian aviation field. Last year it went to Group Capt. Z. L. Leigh of the R. C. A. F. This is the first time the award has been made to a T.C.A. employee.

A wealthy aviation enthusiast, the late Dalzell McKee of Pittsburgh, Pa., established the award. In 1926, accompanied by Air Vice-Marshal A. E. Godfrey, then a squadron leader, now retired and living at Gananoque, Ont., he made the first trans-Canada flight by seaplane. He donated the trophy in recognition of the assistance accorded him by the R. C. A. F. Capt. Rawson, whose home town is Fort William, Ont., has been widely known for many years in aviation circles, both as a pilot and administrator. He began his flying career in the United States where he flew first for the Meteorological Bureau and later with American Airlines. He joined T. C. A. in 1937 shortly after its organization. In 1941 he was appointed director of flight operations and in 1945 assumed his present duties.
