The Crystal-Oxford Game

Fans may have noticed that I predicted a Crystal win in Summerside Friday night, but the 6 to 11 shutout was beyond even the most sanguine dreams of Island hockey fans.

The Crystals are to be heartily congratulated on coming through with such a big goal lead; they demonstrated to a nicety that Saint John Fusiliers will have to play hockey in every period of both games to win.

If the Island Central New Brunswick hockey champions display the same brand of hockey against the "Soldiers" tonight as they did out in their last game with Oxford, there will be nothing to it but wait for the finals.

Jack "Whacker" McEachern and "Chick" Williams, stars of the champion Waterville sextette, arrived in the City Saturday night from Waterville, Maine, where they have completed a most successful year.

Both McEachern and Williams look in splendid condition, but at the same time show many marks of the hard and grueling hockey for which the New England is noted.

CHURCH SERVICES

TRINITY UNITED CHURCH
 The Official Board of Trinity United Church met on Monday evening last, and organized for the work of the coming year. As its name implies, the Official Board consists of the officials of the congregation, including the Session, Committee of Stewards, and representatives of the other organizations and departments of the pastoral charge. It numbers about fifty persons.

Mr. George J. Tweedie was elected as Secretary in succession to Dr. J. C. Houston, who has held that office ever since the union. On the motion of Mr. E. T. Higgs, a hearty vote of thanks was passed and presented to Dr. Houston by the Moderator, Rev. Hammond Johnson.

At the meeting of the Young Peoples' Society on Friday evening, Mr. R. H. Rogers gave an address on poetry.

The speaker explained the distinction between poetry and prose, showed the relation of poetry to the other fine arts, and outlined the different kinds of poetry, lyric, narrative, and dramatic.

The services yesterday were conducted by the co-pastors, Rev. Dr. Ramsay being the preacher in the morning and Rev. Hammond Johnson in the evening.

Rev. Dr. Ramsay's subject was the doctrine of the person of Jesus, his text being in the words "These things are written that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the son of God, and that believing ye might have life through His name."

The reformed churches do not pay that observance to the divisions of the Christian year which distinguish the other churches; nevertheless it is fitting that we should regard with reverence and sympathy the devotion of those who keep Lent as a sacred duty, and should make it a period of self-denial and meditation in our own lives.

At this service the choir rendered the anthem "We give immortal praise" (Fletcher), Messrs. Percy D. Williams and George Johnson taking the duet part; and Miss Mary Rogers sang Rothbun's "I heard the voice of Jesus."

In the evening Rev. Hammond Johnson preached on the triumphal life. The passages forming the text of his discourse were as follows: "To him that is joined to all the living there is hope, for a living God is better than a dead lion"; "Behold the lion of the tribe of Judah."

Mr. Fred Whitehead sang Farmer's "Rock of Ages" and the choir gave the anthem "Hark, hark, my soul," by Shelley, Mrs. W. E. Fletcher taking the solo.

Announcement was made of a united prayer service, in which the Presbytery and congregation of the city will join on Wednesday evening next at 7:30 o'clock. The meeting will be held in St. Paul's Parish Hall.

Files Protest

(Special to The Guardian)
 PARIS, Feb. 25.—The British Government, it was learned this evening filed a formal protest today at the Foreign Office against the provisions of the pending French oil control measure, which, as now drafted, would cause a loss of many millions annually to both American and British oil companies by limiting their future business to their average sales during the past three years. The bill has already been the subject of a conversation between the American Embassy and officials of the French Government.

The terms of the British protest are not disclosed, but it is not unlikely that they will call the attention of the French government to the provisions of the Geneva convention against trade barriers, which was signed by Great Britain, America, France, and twenty other countries last year. According to the terms of that treaty the signatory powers have agreed not to discriminate against each other in questions such as might be involved in the Government's oil control measure.

Service of Song at "Y", Last Night

Mr. J. H. Crocker was the speaker at the regular service held in the Y. M. C. A. last night, when over 200 young people enjoyed a most helpful address on "Man" the Masterpiece of God. Mr. Crocker held the rapt attention of his audience throughout his talk, which was one of more than usual interest.

During the evening two very fine solos were rendered, one by Miss Mary Rogers and the other by Mr. Roddie Gillis.

stated that he was a member of the oldest Christian Church in the country, Grote St. Adelaide which was nearly 80 years old. An interesting fact was introduced in the notice that when an Australian Church of Christ gets too large some of its members are asked to leave and form another Church in an adjoining district. At present there are about 385 churches with some 32,000 members.

At the evening service an exchange of pulpits was made with the Baptist Church and Rev. Eaton spoke on the topic "God Speaks." The music at this service was an anthem by the choir and a quartette by Central Christian Male Quartette. At the conclusion of the service a very fine sacred concert was rendered under the direction of Professor Lantton, a report of which appears below:

CENTRAL CHRISTIAN CHURCH SACRED CONCERT

The Central Christian Church was packed to capacity last night to hear one of the finest sacred concerts given in this city for some time. Every number was so well rendered that it would be unfair to particularize. The artists taking part are among the leading singers of the city. The following was the program:

to fight for the supremacy of the Brit. Empire in South Africa. They could not understand how a colony far removed from the Mother Country could be interested in a struggle in which it had no stake save a desire that the supremacy and integrity of the British Empire should be preserved.

But they understand it now, and if the occasion arose, those who craved their necks to see the Canadians pass that day in Pretoria, would themselves fight, as many of them did later in the Great War for the supremacy of the old flag. For there is something in the Colonizing power of the British Empire, which makes those, her adopted sons, who have lately come under her flag, fight to the death in her defence, should danger ever threaten the Empire of which they form a part.

You will allow me to recall to you the words spoken by General Roberts to the Canadians at Pretoria on the eve of their departure for Canada, Sept. 25th, 1900. It was a brilliant review and every man in excellent health marched past that great General. In the presence of Lady Roberts and his daughters General Roberts said: "I cannot allow you to depart without expressing my thanks for and appreciation of your loyal services and excellent work, especially at Paardeberg on Feb. 27th. I am sure the people of Canada will be pleased to hear how gallantly and how splendidly you have behaved in action. Deeply I regret the losses you have suffered. I should have been happier if you had returned in your full strength, but no one could expect you to pass through 80 arduous days of some of you have returned sooner than the rest of the regiment, but, I recognize the urgency of private affairs. I am confident that the Queen and the British people will never forget your services. If it should ever be my good fortune to visit Canada. I hope to meet you all again.

The Canadians travelled from Pretoria to Cape Town in open train cars. On their arrival they were given a most hearty reception. On behalf of the citizens of Cape Town, the Mayor of the City thanked the men for the splendid services they had rendered on the field. General Roberts was a great general and a great Christian soldier, and I feel sure those noble words spoken to you by him when you left Pretoria have remained a great inspiration with you ever since.

The mention of General Roberts brings to our mind today another great soldier who won great distinction in the Boer War. He was a cavalry officer in those gloomy days which opened the Boer War, and as Chief of Staff under General French, won great distinction in his remarkable operations around Colpaert. Like many others of the gallant soldiers of these now distant days, Field Marshall Haig, who joined the great majority of those who bled and died for King and Empire, never, in all her long and glorious history has Scotland been more profoundly moved than in the passing of her greatest son. It is estimated that 100,000 people passed his coffin as he lay in state, in that grand old Presbyterian Cathedral, St. Giles in Edinburgh. The inhabitants of that ancient city turned out en masse to witness next day the funeral cortege as it went its way from St. Giles to the Waverly station to be conveyed to Wyburgh Abbey, where, along-side of Sir Walter Scott, another of Edinburgh's greatest sons, in another sphere, all that is mortal of Field Marshall Haig will lie until the resurrection morn.

I may be permitted to say that an extraordinary and natural affection is felt in Scotland today that the great leader, who by sheer force of character dominated the later years of the Great War was an elder of the Presbyterian Church. Earl Haig was too deeply planted in the soil of his native Scotland to retreat from the Church of his boyhood years, and his Scottish chaplain at the front has put it on record, that he attended regularly the worship at the little Scotch church near his headquarters at the front, even in hours of the greatest stress, and that it was from his deathbed that he drew those deep draughts of faith which supported him in the course of an ordeal such as few men in the world's history have been called upon to face.

It is worthy of record that a Roman Catholic, Field Marshall Foch and a Scotch Presbyterian, Field Marshall Haig were the two men upon whom the issue of the greatest struggle of the ages depended. If these men too deeply planted in the soil of their native land, were in the course of an ordeal such as few men in the world's history have been called upon to face. It is worthy of record that a Roman Catholic, Field Marshall Foch and a Scotch Presbyterian, Field Marshall Haig were the two men upon whom the issue of the greatest struggle of the ages depended.

And so, veterans of the Boer War, you belong to a glorious succession. You belong to that noble army, who in the building up of Empire, did their duty nobly and well. You heard the words of King and Empire, and you went forth not knowing whether you went, but God in His great mercy brought you back to your dear Island home, and today you have thanked Him for His great goodness to you. May His continued blessing be upon you and more than conquerors ye shall prove in that warfare in which there is no discharge, that warfare in which the human race is ever seeking the dominion of our souls.

May your glorious traditions and your present faith in God enable you "to carry on" until the end of the journey.
