

Dorothy Dix's Letter Box

Continued from page 8

top. When he enters the room he immediately raises the shades and then the argument starts. What would you advise me to do? I feel that it is simply stubbornness on his part. How can I break him of his silly notion? Answer: E. N. C.

It is stubbornness on your husband's part in wanting the shades up to the top of the window, but, of course, it is not stubbornness on your part in wanting them halfway down. It is a silly notion of his to like plenty of light, and it is not a silly notion of yours to prefer semi-darkness.

Can't you see yourself how ridiculously unreasonable you are and how foolish to quarrel over a little thing like the height of a window shade, especially when the difficulty is so easy to settle. Why not let your husband run the shades up while he is at home and when he is gone let them down as low as you please? And at that you will have the best of the bargain, because you are in the house and master of the shades far more than he is.

It seems incredible that any woman would be so foolhardy as to run the risk of alienating her husband's affection for her by quarreling with him over the height of the window shades. Perhaps you do not realize the danger you run, for in the height of an argument you say bitter and hard things that deal wounds that never heal, and some day, if you don't quit, your husband is going to leave you and your window shades in peace and go off to his club or to some woman who will let him monkey with the blinds all he likes.

And consider this: Your husband makes the money that supports the house and pays for the window shades. Don't you think that that gives him some right in the matter that even a wife should respect? DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Dorothy Dix—I am a young girl in my early 20's and for many years I have sacrificed everything to make a home for my father. I have never regretted it, for I love him more than anything in the world, and ever since my mother died he has been more than a father to me. But does it pay to give up everything to the one parent you have left in the world? Many have told me that I must think of doing something for myself, that I should finish my schooling, go to college, etc., but they do not know that I have not the courage to leave my dad, as that would get monotonous. TIRED DAUGHTER.

Your father did you an unintentional wrong when he took you out of school and made a little housekeeper out of you. Now that you are in your 20's it is too late for you to go back and finish high school and go to college, and the best way for you to supplement your education is by reading and studying at home. However, a college degree is by no means necessary to a woman's happiness and success in life.

The love of a father and daughter is a very beautiful thing, but you must not let it fill your life and keep you from looking out for your future, because in the course of nature the chances are that you will long outlive him and if you have not made other ties or got started in some occupation by which you can support yourself, you may find yourself at middle age left lonely and destitute.

Let us hope that your problem will be happily solved by some nice young man coming along and marrying you so that you can still have a full life of your own and still make a home for your father. DOROTHY DIX.

Red Cross Campaign Returns

In the recent annual campaign for membership and funds conducted by the Red Cross Society throughout the province $777.89 has been received in Charlottetown, $138.20 from Summerside and $577.45 from 105 school districts. In Charlottetown the collection was efficiently carried out by groups of ladies and gentlemen who conducted the house to house canvass and solicited the business houses. In Summerside the members of the I. O. O. E. have again successfully completed the canvass and in the rural districts it is still being carried on by the Women's Institutes and teachers. The Executive of the Red Cross greatly appreciates the co-operation received from the many friends without whose assistance it could not continue to carry on.

PRINCE COUNTY

Table listing donations from various locations in Prince County: Bedeque Central ($12.60), Brooklyn (4.00), Central Lo. 15 (5.95), Elmsdale W. I. (2.00), Freeborn South (1.85), Kildare W. I. (2.00), Linkletter W. I. (5.00), Malpeque (Fanning) (1.00), Middleton (3.75), Milburn (3.65), Miscouche (6.00), Murray Road (1.07), Norboro (1.50), Rosebank W. I. (2.00), Roseville W. I. (1.00), Summerside (312.20), West Point W. I. (2.20). Total: $69.00.

QUEEN'S COUNTY

Table listing donations from various locations in Queen's County: Bellevue W. I. ($1.50), Bethel (2.23), Bunbury (11.69), Charlottetown (777.89), Covehead Road (1.45), Darlington (2.30), Earncliffe (3.00), Fredericton (3.10), Glenaladale (4.80), Greenvale (3.10), Harrington (2.00), Hunter River W. I. (5.00), Milton North (11.35), Mt. Melick (15.00), Mt. Stewart W. I. (5.80), Newtown Lower (4.35), New Glasgow W. I. (4.00), North River (9.75), Ocean View (2.72), Pleasant Valley (4.25), Ringwood W. I. (6.20), Rose Valley (1.55), Royalty Central (12.15), Rustico, Anglo (7.25), Southport (6.00), Springfield (15.85), St. Ann's (2.05), Valleyfield W. I. (5.00), Village Green (1.90), Warren Grove (5.00), Westmoreland (9.90), Wilshire North (5.35), Winsloe North (2.45), Winsloe South (3.95), York (8.60). Total: $1,061.69.

SUMMERSIDE GUARDIAN and Prince County Chronicle

-This column is reserved for news of local interest but advertising of a new way nature may be inserted at a cents a word strictly payable in advance.

-TOO MANY PUPPIES in one pen does not pay. Buy "Brayco" English fox netting at Brace's. 1620-7-8-21

-CONGRATULATIONS—Mr. and Mrs. Walter Curley, Preetown, are receiving congratulations on the arrival of a bonnie baby girl on June 29th at the Prince County Hospital.

-MARGATE UNITED CHURCH SERVICES—Margate 11 a.m. Long River 2.30 p.m. Clifton 7.30 p.m. Preacher William Briggs, student supply.

-SPRAYING MATERIALS.—Full line selling at especially attractive prices up till July 15th. J. B. Millman, Kensington. 1531-7-5-61.

-FOX FEEDING and watering pans, sold right at Brace's. 1620-7-8-21

-RESERVE TUESDAY, August 15th for Bedeque Rink Tea. 1577-7-7-15-61

-FINED $25 AND COSTS—In the prohibition court on Wednesday a party from Wilmot Valley was fined $25 and costs for the illegal consumption of liquor, S.

-CARD PARTY AT CLERMONT—A most enjoyable card party under the auspices of the C.W.L. of Indian River was held at the home of Miss Elsie Gillis, Clermont, on Monday night. The prizes were won by Mr. James Saunders, Kensington, and Mrs. Joseph Peters, Summerside. A delicious lunch and a few hours dancing completed the program.—K.

PERSONALS

-Miss Lena Bowness of Boston, is visiting her home in Bedeque, S.

-Miss Hamill, R.N., of New York is spending her vacation with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas P. Hamill of Middleton, S.

-Miss Fanny Rogerson of Victoria, P. E. I., is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Alexander McKay of Summerside, S.

-Mrs. Sarah Howatt of Boston, Mass., is the guest of her brother, Mr. Howatt and Mrs. Howatt of Summerside. They also have as their guests, their daughter, Miss Pearl C. Howatt of Boston; also their charming little granddaughter, Glenda, wee daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Waddell of Cape Traverse, S.

WHEAT AGAIN Closes Higher In "Peg" Market

(Canadian Press) WINNIPEG, July 6.—Resisting a late-session outburst of profit-taking selling, wheat futures prices lost only small fractions of earlier advances to close as much as a cent higher on the Winnipeg Grain Market today.

Spurring about mid-session to more than recover opening declines, values seldom were headed thereafter, closing 3-4 to one cent above yesterday's finish, July future at 79 7-8, Oct. 82 5-8, Dec. 84 1-4 3-8 and May 88 1-2 cents.

The closing flurry, however, lacked its usual vigor. Traders apparently were uncertain as to developments at the World Economic Conference and showed reluctance to commit themselves on either side of the market. The final selling was strongly, but quietly resisted.

Trade was hesitant generally but bursts of activity showed up from time to time. Sorties of profit-takers were checked by steady support, but trading, aside from some buying for continental account appeared to be largely local.

A fair export business was reported to have been worked overnight. Estimates of Canadian wheat shipment ranged from 400,000 to 500,000 bushels. Volume of trade however was comparatively small, due to the hesitant attitude taken by traders, pending developments in outside market news.

Immediate Payment In Gold

OTTAWA, July 6.—(C.P.)—To facilitate transactions between the mint and the small gold producers, arrangements have been made by which the mint at Ottawa and the Dominion assay office at Vancouver will make immediate payment on shipments of newly mined Canadian gold containing 50 ounces or

INSTITUTIONS

WHEATLEY RIVER W. I. The June meeting of this Institution was held at the home of Mrs. Wm. Day with eight members and six visitors present. The Vice President Miss C. J. Rattray presided. Meeting opened with singing, "Ode" and reading the "Creed" in unison. Minutes of May meeting were read and approved.

Committees had no reports. Correspondence was then read. A letter from Dr. Creelman expressing the thanks of the Sanatorium Commission for $10 donated from the W. I. The annual report of the Sanatorium was received and a letter from the Red Cross Society acknowledging with thanks the receipt of $5, and a letter from the Motor Vehicle Association was read regarding the distribution of reflectors. It was moved and seconded that flowers be bought to place around the Soldiers Monument. Delegates appointed to attend the Charlottetown Convention in July are Mrs. Wm. Ling and Miss Mary Andrews, substitutes are Mrs. J. Wares and Mrs. H. Smith. Thanks were received from Mrs. Day for

BRINGING UP FATHER

Advertisement for ROSEBUD CUT SMOKING TOBACCO. Includes a cartoon of a man smoking and a pack of tobacco. Text: 'NOTHING SEEMS TO BOTHER YOU JIM, HOW DO YOU KEEP YOUR NERVES SO SMOOTH?', 'THAT'S EASY—I ALWAYS SMOKE ROSEBUD!', 'No arguing it's the Best', 'Rosebud is always smooth, soothing and satisfying in a pipe... the kind of tobacco that steers a man to genuine smoking pleasure... the kind that's blended to suit the exacting Maritime taste.', 'IF YOU PREFER PLUG TOBACCO SMOKE ROSEBUD 20c BIG PLUG', 'Large package 10c Extra large 15c', 'THE MARITIME SMOKE'.

IN MEMORIAM

MRS. A. J. MACCORMACK

(The Western Catholic) The sudden death of Mrs. A. J. MacCormack, 10647 83 Ave., Edmonton, on Monday last was a great shock to her many friends.

She was stricken with a cerebral hemorrhage and her demise followed within a half hour. She had been at Mass and Communion on Monday morning and her family and friends were little prepared for the shock of her sudden death.

The deceased was aged 60 years. She leaves to mourn their loss her husband, Mr. A. J. MacCormack, manager of the Coal Valley Mining Company; three daughters, Isabel of Saskatoon; Genevieve and Leona at home; two sisters, Mrs. Julia McIntyre of Cardigan, Prince Edward Island, and Mrs. D. J. Carmichael of Elliotville; and one brother, Mr. J. Campbell of New York.

A prominent Catholic Women's League worker, interested in every phase of parish work, and in every manner of community work, the passing of Mrs. MacCormack is a great loss to the Catholic Church in Edmonton and to the city and province. Every charitable organization had in Mrs. MacCormack a staunch supporter and she gave of her fine talents, of her time and energies, lavishly, that the orphans and the poor generally might have the care, the food and the clothing which she always claimed should be theirs. A fine speaker and of high intellectual calibre, she was ever ready to defend the principles and teachings of the Church. Ardent in her faith and zealous in the practice of that faith, she had on Sunday, the day before her death, received Holy Communion at her parish church, St. Anthony's, Msgr. Carleton administered the Sacrament of Extreme Unction in her dying moments.

On Sunday evening, Mrs. MacCormack was sponsor for the 1933 girls' confirmation class at St. Anthony's. It was fitting that one who had been so zealous for God and God's Church should thus bring to a close her life of devotion to the things which pertain to God.

Mrs. MacCormack was a native of Prince Edward Island. Before coming to Edmonton the family lived for some eight years in Battleford, Sask.

May her soul rest in peace.

FUNERAL OF MRS. A. J. MACCORMACK

The funeral of Mrs. A. J. MacCormack who died suddenly at her home, 10647 83 Ave., Edmonton, was held on Wednesday, June 7, at 10.00 o'clock from St. Anthony's pro-cathedral, and interment was

WOODROOFE-HARRIE

(The following wedding from the Sydney Post of June 23 will be of interest here as Rev. S. J. Woodroffe and family were formerly of this city.)

A wedding of much interest to Sydney people took place on Saturday last in Saint Luke's Church, Annapolis Royal, when the marriage of Florence Ritchie, daughter of Mrs. Harris and the late Frank St. Clair Harris of Annapolis Royal and great grand-daughter of the late Justice J. Norman T. Ritchie of Halifax, to Dr. Edward Kimbel Woodroffe, only son of Rev. Samuel J. Woodroffe a former Rector of Christ Church, Sydney, now Rector of Oakfield, Nova Scotia, and Mrs. Woodroffe, was solemnized, Rev. Charles DeW. White being celebrant.

The wedding was a very quiet one at which only the immediate relatives of the bride and groom were present. It was however, a ceremony of unusual beauty and the church at Annapolis Royal, the oldest Anglican Church in the Dominion of Canada, which is the proud possessor of a prayer book presented by King George in recognition of that fact, was beautifully decorated with pure white flowers.

The bride, who was given away by her uncle Charles Norman Whitman, was one of the quaintest and most beautiful seen in the historic town for many years. She wore her traditional gown, worn by her grandmother Mrs. Francis Cutler Whitman made in London fifty years ago. It was of heavy ivory silk with hoop skirt, bustle, long train frilly dust ruffles and large silk cord and tassels. The laced bodice with its slashed sleeves was laced with silk cords with gold points and the neck was finished with a Catherine de Medici collar of limerick lace edged with pearls. With this she wore a veil and wreath of orange blossoms, also worn by her mother and grandmother and carried an old fashioned bouquet of peonies and long spurred columbine.

The bride is a graduate of the McGill School of Physical Education and the groom who is a graduate in medicine of the Toronto University, practiced for a year in Baltimore before settling in Canaan, Nova Scotia, where, upon their return from their honeymoon, Dr. and Mrs. Woodroffe will reside.

The bride, who was given away by her uncle Charles Norman Whitman, was one of the quaintest and most beautiful seen in the historic town for many years. She wore her traditional gown, worn by her grandmother Mrs. Francis Cutler Whitman made in London fifty years ago. It was of heavy ivory silk with hoop skirt, bustle, long train frilly dust ruffles and large silk cord and tassels. The laced bodice with its slashed sleeves was laced with silk cords with gold points and the neck was finished with a Catherine de Medici collar of limerick lace edged with pearls. With this she wore a veil and wreath of orange blossoms, also worn by her mother and grandmother and carried an old fashioned bouquet of peonies and long spurred columbine.

The bride is a graduate of the McGill School of Physical Education and the groom who is a graduate in medicine of the Toronto University, practiced for a year in Baltimore before settling in Canaan, Nova Scotia, where, upon their return from their honeymoon, Dr. and Mrs. Woodroffe will reside.

The bride, who was given away by her uncle Charles Norman Whitman, was one of the quaintest and most beautiful seen in the historic town for many years. She wore her traditional gown, worn by her grandmother Mrs. Francis Cutler Whitman made in London fifty years ago. It was of heavy ivory silk with hoop skirt, bustle, long train frilly dust ruffles and large silk cord and tassels. The laced bodice with its slashed sleeves was laced with silk cords with gold points and the neck was finished with a Catherine de Medici collar of limerick lace edged with pearls. With this she wore a veil and wreath of orange blossoms, also worn by her mother and grandmother and carried an old fashioned bouquet of peonies and long spurred columbine.

The bride is a graduate of the McGill School of Physical Education and the groom who is a graduate in medicine of the Toronto University, practiced for a year in Baltimore before settling in Canaan, Nova Scotia, where, upon their return from their honeymoon, Dr. and Mrs. Woodroffe will reside.

The bride, who was given away by her uncle Charles Norman Whitman, was one of the quaintest and most beautiful seen in the historic town for many years. She wore her traditional gown, worn by her grandmother Mrs. Francis Cutler Whitman made in London fifty years ago. It was of heavy ivory silk with hoop skirt, bustle, long train frilly dust ruffles and large silk cord and tassels. The laced bodice with its slashed sleeves was laced with silk cords with gold points and the neck was finished with a Catherine de Medici collar of limerick lace edged with pearls. With this she wore a veil and wreath of orange blossoms, also worn by her mother and grandmother and carried an old fashioned bouquet of peonies and long spurred columbine.

The bride is a graduate of the McGill School of Physical Education and the groom who is a graduate in medicine of the Toronto University, practiced for a year in Baltimore before settling in Canaan, Nova Scotia, where, upon their return from their honeymoon, Dr. and Mrs. Woodroffe will reside.

The bride, who was given away by her uncle Charles Norman Whitman, was one of the quaintest and most beautiful seen in the historic town for many years. She wore her traditional gown, worn by her grandmother Mrs. Francis Cutler Whitman made in London fifty years ago. It was of heavy ivory silk with hoop skirt, bustle, long train frilly dust ruffles and large silk cord and tassels. The laced bodice with its slashed sleeves was laced with silk cords with gold points and the neck was finished with a Catherine de Medici collar of limerick lace edged with pearls. With this she wore a veil and wreath of orange blossoms, also worn by her mother and grandmother and carried an old fashioned bouquet of peonies and long spurred columbine.

The bride is a graduate of the McGill School of Physical Education and the groom who is a graduate in medicine of the Toronto University, practiced for a year in Baltimore before settling in Canaan, Nova Scotia, where, upon their return from their honeymoon, Dr. and Mrs. Woodroffe will reside.

The bride, who was given away by her uncle Charles Norman Whitman, was one of the quaintest and most beautiful seen in the historic town for many years. She wore her traditional gown, worn by her grandmother Mrs. Francis Cutler Whitman made in London fifty years ago. It was of heavy ivory silk with hoop skirt, bustle, long train frilly dust ruffles and large silk cord and tassels. The laced bodice with its slashed sleeves was laced with silk cords with gold points and the neck was finished with a Catherine de Medici collar of limerick lace edged with pearls. With this she wore a veil and wreath of orange blossoms, also worn by her mother and grandmother and carried an old fashioned bouquet of peonies and long spurred columbine.

The bride is a graduate of the McGill School of Physical Education and the groom who is a graduate in medicine of the Toronto University, practiced for a year in Baltimore before settling in Canaan, Nova Scotia, where, upon their return from their honeymoon, Dr. and Mrs. Woodroffe will reside.

The bride, who was given away by her uncle Charles Norman Whitman, was one of the quaintest and most beautiful seen in the historic town for many years. She wore her traditional gown, worn by her grandmother Mrs. Francis Cutler Whitman made in London fifty years ago. It was of heavy ivory silk with hoop skirt, bustle, long train frilly dust ruffles and large silk cord and tassels. The laced bodice with its slashed sleeves was laced with silk cords with gold points and the neck was finished with a Catherine de Medici collar of limerick lace edged with pearls. With this she wore a veil and wreath of orange blossoms, also worn by her mother and grandmother and carried an old fashioned bouquet of peonies and long spurred columbine.

The bride is a graduate of the McGill School of Physical Education and the groom who is a graduate in medicine of the Toronto University, practiced for a year in Baltimore before settling in Canaan, Nova Scotia, where, upon their return from their honeymoon, Dr. and Mrs. Woodroffe will reside.

The bride, who was given away by her uncle Charles Norman Whitman, was one of the quaintest and most beautiful seen in the historic town for many years. She wore her traditional gown, worn by her grandmother Mrs. Francis Cutler Whitman made in London fifty years ago. It was of heavy ivory silk with hoop skirt, bustle, long train frilly dust ruffles and large silk cord and tassels. The laced bodice with its slashed sleeves was laced with silk cords with gold points and the neck was finished with a Catherine de Medici collar of limerick lace edged with pearls. With this she wore a veil and wreath of orange blossoms, also worn by her mother and grandmother and carried an old fashioned bouquet of peonies and long spurred columbine.

The bride is a graduate of the McGill School of Physical Education and the groom who is a graduate in medicine of the Toronto University, practiced for a year in Baltimore before settling in Canaan, Nova Scotia, where, upon their return from their honeymoon, Dr. and Mrs. Woodroffe will reside.

The bride, who was given away by her uncle Charles Norman Whitman, was one of the quaintest and most beautiful seen in the historic town for many years. She wore her traditional gown, worn by her grandmother Mrs. Francis Cutler Whitman made in London fifty years ago. It was of heavy ivory silk with hoop skirt, bustle, long train frilly dust ruffles and large silk cord and tassels. The laced bodice with its slashed sleeves was laced with silk cords with gold points and the neck was finished with a Catherine de Medici collar of limerick lace edged with pearls. With this she wore a veil and wreath of orange blossoms, also worn by her mother and grandmother and carried an old fashioned bouquet of peonies and long spurred columbine.

CULT OF BEAUTY

MONTREAL, Que., July 6.—Beauty culture accounted for about one-quarter of the total amount, approximately $20,000,000, spent in Canada during 1932 for toilet preparations, soap and washing compounds, according to the Industrial Department of the Canadian National Railways.

The bride, who was given away by her uncle Charles Norman Whitman, was one of the quaintest and most beautiful seen in the historic town for many years. She wore her traditional gown, worn by her grandmother Mrs. Francis Cutler Whitman made in London fifty years ago. It was of heavy ivory silk with hoop skirt, bustle, long train frilly dust ruffles and large silk cord and tassels. The laced bodice with its slashed sleeves was laced with silk cords with gold points and the neck was finished with a Catherine de Medici collar of limerick lace edged with pearls. With this she wore a veil and wreath of orange blossoms, also worn by her mother and grandmother and carried an old fashioned bouquet of peonies and long spurred columbine.

The bride is a graduate of the McGill School of Physical Education and the groom who is a graduate in medicine of the Toronto University, practiced for a year in Baltimore before settling in Canaan, Nova Scotia, where, upon their return from their honeymoon, Dr. and Mrs. Woodroffe will reside.

The bride, who was given away by her uncle Charles Norman Whitman, was one of the quaintest and most beautiful seen in the historic town for many years. She wore her traditional gown, worn by her grandmother Mrs. Francis Cutler Whitman made in London fifty years ago. It was of heavy ivory silk with hoop skirt, bustle, long train frilly dust ruffles and large silk cord and tassels. The laced bodice with its slashed sleeves was laced with silk cords with gold points and the neck was finished with a Catherine de Medici collar of limerick lace edged with pearls. With this she wore a veil and wreath of orange blossoms, also worn by her mother and grandmother and carried an old fashioned bouquet of peonies and long spurred columbine.

The bride is a graduate of the McGill School of Physical Education and the groom who is a graduate in medicine of the Toronto University, practiced for a year in Baltimore before settling in Canaan, Nova Scotia, where, upon their return from their honeymoon, Dr. and Mrs. Woodroffe will reside.

The bride, who was given away by her uncle Charles Norman Whitman, was one of the quaintest and most beautiful seen in the historic town for many years. She wore her traditional gown, worn by her grandmother Mrs. Francis Cutler Whitman made in London fifty years ago. It was of heavy ivory silk with hoop skirt, bustle, long train frilly dust ruffles and large silk cord and tassels. The laced bodice with its slashed sleeves was laced with silk cords with gold points and the neck was finished with a Catherine de Medici collar of limerick lace edged with pearls. With this she wore a veil and wreath of orange blossoms, also worn by her mother and grandmother and carried an old fashioned bouquet of peonies and long spurred columbine.

The bride is a graduate of the McGill School of Physical Education and the groom who is a graduate in medicine of the Toronto University, practiced for a year in Baltimore before settling in Canaan, Nova Scotia, where, upon their return from their honeymoon, Dr. and Mrs. Woodroffe will reside.

The bride, who was given away by her uncle Charles Norman Whitman, was one of the quaintest and most beautiful seen in the historic town for many years. She wore her traditional gown, worn by her grandmother Mrs. Francis Cutler Whitman made in London fifty years ago. It was of heavy ivory silk with hoop skirt, bustle, long train frilly dust ruffles and large silk cord and tassels. The laced bodice with its slashed sleeves was laced with silk cords with gold points and the neck was finished with a Catherine de Medici collar of limerick lace edged with pearls. With this she wore a veil and wreath of orange blossoms, also worn by her mother and grandmother and carried an old fashioned bouquet of peonies and long spurred columbine.

The bride is a graduate of the McGill School of Physical Education and the groom who is a graduate in medicine of the Toronto University, practiced for a year in Baltimore before settling in Canaan, Nova Scotia, where, upon their return from their honeymoon, Dr. and Mrs. Woodroffe will reside.

The bride, who was given away by her uncle Charles Norman Whitman, was one of the quaintest and most beautiful seen in the historic town for many years. She wore her traditional gown, worn by her grandmother Mrs. Francis Cutler Whitman made in London fifty years ago. It was of heavy ivory silk with hoop skirt, bustle, long train frilly dust ruffles and large silk cord and tassels. The laced bodice with its slashed sleeves was laced with silk cords with gold points and the neck was finished with a Catherine de Medici collar of limerick lace edged with pearls. With this she wore a veil and wreath of orange blossoms, also worn by her mother and grandmother and carried an old fashioned bouquet of peonies and long spurred columbine.

The bride is a graduate of the McGill School of Physical Education and the groom who is a graduate in medicine of the Toronto University, practiced for a year in Baltimore before settling in Canaan, Nova Scotia, where, upon their return from their honeymoon, Dr. and Mrs. Woodroffe will reside.

The bride, who was given away by her uncle Charles Norman Whitman, was one of the quaintest and most beautiful seen in the historic town for many years. She wore her traditional gown, worn by her grandmother Mrs. Francis Cutler Whitman made in London fifty years ago. It was of heavy ivory silk with hoop skirt, bustle, long train frilly dust ruffles and large silk cord and tassels. The laced bodice with its slashed sleeves was laced with silk cords with gold points and the neck was finished with a Catherine de Medici collar of limerick lace edged with pearls. With this she wore a veil and wreath of orange blossoms, also worn by her mother and grandmother and carried an old fashioned bouquet of peonies and long spurred columbine.

The bride is a graduate of the McGill School of Physical Education and the groom who is a graduate in medicine of the Toronto University, practiced for a year in Baltimore before settling in Canaan, Nova Scotia, where, upon their return from their honeymoon, Dr. and Mrs. Woodroffe will reside.

The bride, who was given away by her uncle Charles Norman Whitman, was one of the quaintest and most beautiful seen in the historic town for many years. She wore her traditional gown, worn by her grandmother Mrs. Francis Cutler Whitman made in London fifty years ago. It was of heavy ivory silk with hoop skirt, bustle, long train frilly dust ruffles and large silk cord and tassels. The laced bodice with its slashed sleeves was laced with silk cords with gold points and the neck was finished with a Catherine de Medici collar of limerick lace edged with pearls. With this she wore a veil and wreath of orange blossoms, also worn by her mother and grandmother and carried an old fashioned bouquet of peonies and long spurred columbine.

The bride is a graduate of the McGill School of Physical Education and the groom who is a graduate in medicine of the Toronto University, practiced for a year in Baltimore before settling in Canaan, Nova Scotia, where, upon their return from their honeymoon, Dr. and Mrs. Woodroffe will reside.

The bride, who was given away by her uncle Charles Norman Whitman, was one of the quaintest and most beautiful seen in the historic town for many years. She wore her traditional gown, worn by her grandmother Mrs. Francis Cutler Whitman made in London fifty years ago. It was of heavy ivory silk with hoop skirt, bustle, long train frilly dust ruffles and large silk cord and tassels. The laced bodice with its slashed sleeves was laced with silk cords with gold points and the neck was finished with a Catherine de Medici collar of limerick lace edged with pearls. With this she wore a veil and wreath of orange blossoms, also worn by her mother and grandmother and carried an old fashioned bouquet of peonies and long spurred columbine.

The bride is a graduate of the McGill School of Physical Education and the groom who is a graduate in medicine of the Toronto University, practiced for a year in Baltimore before settling in Canaan, Nova Scotia, where, upon their return from their honeymoon, Dr. and Mrs. Woodroffe will reside.

The bride, who was given away by her uncle Charles Norman Whitman, was one of the quaintest and most beautiful seen in the historic town for many years. She wore her traditional gown, worn by her grandmother Mrs. Francis Cutler Whitman made in London fifty years ago. It was of heavy ivory silk with hoop skirt, bustle, long train frilly dust ruffles and large silk cord and tassels. The laced bodice with its slashed sleeves was laced with silk cords with gold points and the neck was finished with a Catherine de Medici collar of limerick lace edged with pearls. With this she wore a veil and wreath of orange blossoms, also worn by her mother and grandmother and carried an old fashioned bouquet of peonies and long spurred columbine.

The bride is a graduate of the McGill School of Physical Education and the groom who is a graduate in medicine of the Toronto University, practiced for a year in Baltimore before settling in Canaan, Nova Scotia, where, upon their return from their honeymoon, Dr. and Mrs. Woodroffe will reside.

The bride, who was given away by her uncle Charles Norman Whitman, was one of the quaintest and most beautiful seen in the historic town for many years. She wore her traditional gown, worn by her grandmother Mrs. Francis Cutler Whitman made in London fifty years ago. It was of heavy ivory silk with hoop skirt, bustle, long train frilly dust ruffles and large silk cord and tassels. The laced bodice with its slashed sleeves was laced with silk cords with gold points and the neck was finished with a Catherine de Medici collar of limerick lace edged with pearls. With this she wore a veil and wreath of orange blossoms, also worn by her mother and grandmother and carried an old fashioned bouquet of peonies and long spurred columbine.