THE OUTLAW
The Story of a Girl Who Didn't Want to Marry
By ETHEL LLOYD PATT.

Chapter XXVI

I suppose I really was attracted to Hugh Trotter the first time I saw him, when he was so kind and understanding with me in my difficulties. Then, in the weeks that followed when he apparently made no effort to see me, I was pained. And then, although I would have been glad of the companionship of some clean young man, my own affairs engrossed me again and I forgot him.

But when Hugh finally did come to call upon me, with the explanation "a story" all of the charm and attraction he had for me, when first I saw him, came back. He was a man of course, he was a man of the world. He spoke intimately of people whose names I had read in the newspapers with awe. He had actually spoken to the President of the United States—inter-viewed him, as he said. He knew who were the real husbands of the great actresses. If a murder or a divorce occurred, Hugh knew the inside story. Naturally, I was ready to hang on his words. Then, Hugh came of a better family than my own. I mean his mother and father must have been people of education. Although he was inclined to be rather careless in dress when first I met him, never the less, stamped upon him in manner and speech was the mark of caste.

On that first night, when Hugh looked, me up in my home in the suburbs, the way he insisted upon going into the kitchen to meet my mother had warmed my heart. Now I know that I liked Hugh then because his simplicity was real. Indeed, if anything, I suppose my mother's soiled and crumpled apron aroused a deeper courtesy in him toward her. Although at the time he seemed not to notice her dress, and certainly, neither was she attracted to Hugh. I never saw her more thoroughly at ease with anyone. She called him "my boy" and she piled him with apple pie which she herself had made.

Again I answered sharply before he could do so. "Oh, you can't have a doctor," I explained. "We can't afford doctors. If we're sick we have to get over it as best we can. You must remember that the only money that comes into this house belongs to my father. If he gave us money for a doctor for mother, he wouldn't be able to spend it in the village on his way home."

"Mother!" I cried quickly. "Don't say that! Oh Mr. Trotter! If you only would! I'm so worried over her sickness. Of course, I know what she needs. It's rest and no worry."

The "Pesky" Tire Valve Inside
One Of The Pneumatic Tire's Weakest Points

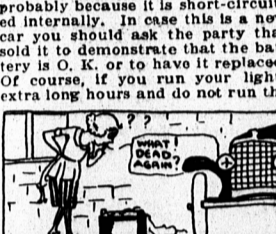

Did you ever laboriously remove a casing from its rim and pull out the tube, expecting to find a slow leak in it, only to discover that the tube itself was perfect and that deflation was caused by a defective valve-plunger or "valve inside"? If so, you know why the above uncomplimentary adjective is used. If not, do not be deceived into so doing, but test the valve for leakage before going further. When a tire requires frequent re-pumping, revolve the wheel until the valve stem is at its highest point, remove the cap, fill a tumbler with water and hold it up so that the valve stem projects into the liquid. If the tire still contains air and bubbles escape through the water, you have a valve leak, which may be done by using the slotted point of the screw driver in place, which can be done by using the slotted point of the screw driver in place, which can be done by using the slotted point of the screw driver in place, which can be done by using the slotted point of the screw driver in place...

ENGAGING GEARS IS DIFFICULT

J. A. M. writes: I have to throw into gear just as soon as the engine of my car starts, for if I speed up the engine and then try to engage the gears, I can hardly do so at all and there is a terrific noise. What is the reason for this?

Is there a short-circuit in the ignition?
Answers: Perhaps your generator is not charging the battery properly. Your ammeter should show a charging current of from 10 to 15 amperes at all speeds from 10 m. p. h. upward. Your ammeter should never show discharge current unless lamps are on or the ignition switch is on "battery."

CLEANING TAR FROM BODY WORK

L. G. asks: How can tar be removed from the finish of a car?
Answer: Nearly all well stocked automobile supply houses carry a more or more brand of tar remover and we understand that these do the work very well, with the minimum damage to the varnish. Fresh tar spots can be removed, very often, by rubbing them with the fingers wet in kerosene or applying kerosene on cheesecloth, wiping off the excess of kerosene when the tar has disappeared.

BATTERY DOESN'T STAY CHARGED

J. H. B. asks: What causes the battery in my Ford sedan to run down so fast? It never holds its charge (because the generator is too strong)

Questions of general interest to the motorist will be answered by Mr. Clough in this column, space permitting. If an immediate answer is desired, enclose self-addressed, stamped envelope.

RECEPTION IN HONOR OF MR. AND MRS. W. R. SHAW.

Saturday evening a reception was held at the home of Miss Lottie Steeves, 52 Gordon Street, Moncton, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Shaw, who returned on Tuesday from Charlottetown, where they spent their honeymoon, having recently been married at Boston. The bride and groom were taken completely by surprise on their arrival by about thirty of their friends assembled here. Congratulations were showered upon them, after which Miss Pearl Russell tendered a solo. "O Promise Me". A huge basket containing many useful and beautiful gifts was presented to Mr. and Mrs. Shaw, to which the groom made a fitting reply, expressing deep appreciation of the welcome extended to them. During the evening dainty refreshments were served. With the singing of "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows" and the National Anthem the party broke up shortly before midnight, all having spent a very pleasant evening. Although Mrs. Shaw (nee Miss Margaret McKenzie, R. N., Brockton, Mass.) is almost a stranger to Moncton, she has already made many friends. Mr. Shaw has been
