A BABY SAMSON
Sheffield Child Not Yet Five Years Old Strong as a Man

In every sense of the term the four and a half year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Chester, of Sheffield, England, is somewhat of a handful to his proud parents. Master Chester is accustomed to take his exercise with 65 pound weights and the bending of nails. Before he was two and a half years old he astonished his mother by toying with a 28 pound weight. When a babe of two years old he gave her a caress that made her "see stars," and dislodged a tooth. The doctors are, of course, interested in him, and after a searching examination—aided by X-ray apparatus—they pronounced him to be a thoroughly normal child, though probably the largest of his age in England.

Four feet in height, and weighing 112 pounds, he measures, with proportionate sturdy limbs and remarkable muscular development. Naturally, something more than normal diet is needed to sustain this energetic and steadily-growing youngster. Save for a daily bowl or two of soup, he practically a vegetarian, though very partial to fish. Milk, eggs, and bananas, however, seems to be his mainstay. Of milk his daily consumption averages about three quarts, quite apart from a jar of cream, which he prefers slightly soured. Six or eight eggs, and of a dozen and a half bananas, and, of course, plenty of bread and butter, complete his daily dietary.

ROBERT BURNS' RAZOR
Interesting Relic of Scottish Poet Sold in London

There came under the auctioneer's hammer in London a rare personal relic of Robert Burns, and one of the intimate belongings of great men. It is the last razor that Scottish bard ever used, and belonged to David Paterson, a citizen of Liverpool, who bought it eleven years ago at the dispersion of Edward Quail's collections of antique pens and curios.

In 1833 the razor was presented by Robert Burns, junior, to William Dunbar, who in 1865 passed it on to T. A. Porter, from whom in 1873 it went to J. Harris Gibson. It came into Mr. Quail's possession in 1876, and remained one of his most prized possessions till the day of his death.

Kitten as Football
At Fortar, Scotland, Alexander Ross, a farm servant, and John Cameron were charged with having cruelly tortured a kitten by throwing it several times on a fire and using it on the road as a football. The magistrate described the case as a diabolical one and imposed fines of $10.

DR. A. W. CHASE'S CATARRH POWDER 25c.
is sent direct to the diseased parts by the day, belonging to Mr. Moses, of Brogryn Farm, Oyster, died at the age of seven. Pink was endowed with almost human sagacity, and had won the first prizes in various parts of the dog world twice in succession. "I never patted her," Mr. Moses said, "and her ears went down. If others patted her she took no notice of them but looked at me as if to ask if it was right." Pink was a smooth-haired collie, cleanly built after the greyhound style. That was how she got her speed. She was as gentle with a chicken or a pig as with a sheep. She never distressed or irritated sheep, but if one were stubborn she would stand facing it, and at the whistle walk quietly up and send it by the nose, and the sheep had to go where she wanted.

A FEW DON'TS

Don't be a spoil-sport.
Don't court indigestion.
Don't make too big a splash.
Don't forget your poor relations.
Don't grumble, whatever you do.
Don't leave everything for "mother" to do.
Don't press wine where water or lemonade is preferred.
Don't, if you get up on your wrong side, make everybody else miserable.
Don't let the children sit up too late—they only get tired out and fretful.
Don't be made miserable. Misery loves company—but is seldom an agreeable house-guest.
Don't, if you give your children a party, keep nagging them to what they must and must not do.
Don't envy another's happiness and enjoyment. Make the most of what you have, and be grateful for having that much.

TO PROLONG SLEEP

MAN AFTER DEATH
Extraordinary Scientific Researches Into Disembodied Spirits

News has reached Paris of the extraordinary researches into the nature of disembodied spirits, made by two Dutch doctors who have conducted the investigation. They constructed an apparatus whereby they claim they are able to measure the density and volume of the weight of a man after death, which they term "man-force." The instrument, the details of which were revealed to them in the course of a series of seances, is called a "dynamistograph," or force register, but is more popularly known among the public here as a spirit trap.

It consists of a large upright cardboard cylinder, impervious to air and closed at each end, with a tin disk, the whole being attached to an extremely sensitive weighing apparatus. The spirits declare they can enter this cylinder sideways through the cardboard walls, but are prevented from rising or sinking through the metal disks, and are thus confined for the time being. After a long series of experiments the two doctors announce that the "man-force," or disembodied spirit, has a density equal to that of air, a volume of fifty-two litres, and an average weight of sixty-seven grams. They also declare that the "man-force" is charged with electricity and is composed of a hitherto undetected gas. It is not eternal, they state, but lasts usually about an hundred years after death, ultimately decomposing gradually. Acting under the close supervision of a disembodied person, one of the investigators has modeled in clay a figure of a "man-force" as it would appear if visible. The figure is a very uncanny appearance and consists merely of a head, shoulders, and breast, terminating in a point like a balloon. The head is hairless and has no ears, while the other features have the vague appearance presented by a show-man during a sharp thaw.

Light Never Thought of Patenting It no one ever thought of patenting it before. It is nothing more than a strip of some light-absorbing material that is to be worn across the eyes and has loops to go around the ears and hold it in place. Simple as it is the device is perfectly logical and should be effective, as everyone knows that one of the chief causes of awakenings is the shining of the morning sun in our closed eyes, the sharp light penetrating our eyelids. That is one reason why we can sleep longer in winter than in summer.

Death of Best Sheep Dog
Pink, the greatest sheep-dog of her day, belonging to Mr. Moses, of Brogryn Farm, Oyster, died at the age of seven. Pink was endowed with almost human sagacity, and had won the first prizes in various parts of the dog world twice in succession. "I never patted her," Mr. Moses said, "and her ears went down. Postmaster says: 'Zam-Buk Acted on the Burn like Magic.'

Whenever you—or the children—sustain a burn apply Zam-Buk! Takes the fire out of burns like magic! Mr. A. Summers, Postmaster of Gledhow, Sask., writes: "I would like to bear testimony to the wonderful healing properties of Zam-Buk. I have used it for—some considerable time for cuts, bruises, etc., with excellent results, but the most wonderful cure in my experience happened recently when my little boy (two years old) fell from his chair on to a red hot heater!"

One side of his face and his ear were just frizzled. I dressed the burns liberally with Zam-Buk every day, and within two weeks the burns were healed. I was afraid my boy would be disfigured permanently, but there is no scar left. I always recommend Zam-Buk to my friends, and would advise everybody to keep a box handy."

Zam-Buk is just as good for cuts, bruises, poisoned wounds, scratches, ulcers, eczema, piles, festering sores, barbed wire scratches, etc., and all skin injuries and diseases. 50c. box. Druggists and stores everywhere, or post free for price from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. Refuse harmful substitutes and imitations. Have you tried Zam-Buk soap? 25c. tablet, best for baby's tender skin.
