WIFE WHO WAS CROSS and TOUCHY

Put Herself Right with Kruschen

"I am 36 years of age," a woman writes, "yet some days I have been feeling as if I were 100 years old. I would get fits of exhaustion for no good reason at all. I was not fit to live with because I would be so cross and touchy. I did not seem to have any ambition to do my housework, and I was tired all the time."

"Two years ago I had sciatica all down my left side from the hip to the ankle. My doctor said that it was caused through my nerves. I took Kruschen and found it helped me very much. Since I started taking it I am now feeling like a new woman. It seems a lot easier and I have a lot more energy." (Mrs.) G. M.

AIMED TO END

The insurgents were trying to crush the unexpected resistance by the capture of Balaguer and at Tremp which have supplied virtually all of Catalonia's industrial plants.

Further north, fleeing ahead of the insurgents between 5,000 and 6,000 civilian refugees struggled across the snow and ice-covered passages of the Pyrenees to reach France.

The first group of 750, including many women and children, arrived at Gavarnie, France. It was said many of the refugees from the upper Cinca river valley would die of hardship and exposure before they could reach France.

Maurice Amyot was the boy who benefited from the other boys of the village. She's afraid they would be hurt. She says it's nothing for Lawrence to toss off a pound of porridge, three eggs, two cups of coffee and a bit of thick stew for breakfast. Sometimes he eats two full-sized pies for desert.

Next to wanting to be a minister, which surprised his mother, Maurice carried his pocket knife as he could "get in a poke at Joe Louis."

Companies Taxation Act. The bill provides for a change in the tax on insurance companies, which last year had been increased from 1 to 2 percent on gross premiums. The amendment exempts returned premiums including cash value of dividends.

The existing Act imposes a 4 per cent tax on gross earnings of trust and loan companies. The figure in the bill was left blank, the Premier explained, as it was represented this rate was too high, and perhaps not to be reduced.

Mr. Trainor and Hon. Mr. LePage opposed this suggestion. On the latter's motion the 4 per cent tax rate was retained. The bill was reported agreed to with amendments.

The following bills were read a third time and passed: An Act to amend the Summer-Isle Incorporation Act. The Mechanics Lien Act.

On motion of Premier Campbell the House went into committee with Mr. Stewart in the chair on second reading of the bill for appointment of commissions outside the Province to take affidavits and proof of the execution of deeds.

The Premier explained that the bill was to consolidate existing legislation with some slight variations. It was agreed to without amendment.

The House adjourned until 11.30 on Friday.

Canadians Spend Large Sum On Sweepstakes

(C.P. By Guardian's Special Wire) OTTAWA, April 7.—Canadians spent $1,100,170 on tickets in the Irish hospital sweepstakes on the Grand National according to an estimate made for the Canadian Press by statisticians.

The figures were reached as an average of four estimates based on the assumption that Canadian purchasers had the same probability of drawing prize winners as all other purchasers.

These estimates were made on the number of consolation prizes drawn by Canadians, horses starting and total prize money. In each case the amount of prize money going to Canadians was divided by the total amount of prize. This of course gave a fraction which was multiplied by $13,790,010 the total world sale of tickets.

The statisticians found their four estimates varied only slightly, despite the different methods used in reaching them.

The estimate made on consolation prizes gave the total expenditure of Canadians as $1,078,000, that of horses drawn $1,130,000, horses starting $1,144,000 and total prize money $1,054,000.

The statisticians also estimated that Canadians spent $603,530 on the British hospital sweepstakes on the derby last year when total prize money was $1,031,780, indicating a heavy increase in Canadian purchase of Grand National tickets over those bought on the derby.

SUPERSTITION SURROUNDS INDIAN DEATH

(By Charles I. Jones) (Canadian Press Correspondent)

QUEBEC, Que., April 7.—Out of Quebec's woods today came the story of Xavier Tabson and how the well-guarded secret of his death finally broke through the silence of the bush and brought a murder charge against his brother.

Tinged with Ojibwa superstition, the tale of tragedy in the wilderness was coupled with the strange case of a body who "had to be put to bed sometimes when the moon was full" and with the stoicism of a widowed squaw who saw one son die and another arrested for his death. It was locked within an Indian family more than a year.

The boy—14 year old Dave Tabson, dark-haired and powerfully built—was held tonight on a murder charge. Flying policemen took him out of Pontiac county's game lands after the bush grapevine had carried out word of his brother Xavier's death.

As they held the youngster for mental examination, Quebec provincial policemen pieced together the long-secret of the killing. It had been obtained only after months of travel by bus and private dogged officers hunted through the woods for the nomadic Indian family of fur-trappers.

The trail was months old even when they started. Xavier was killed early in 1937 on the banks of the Dumoine River, about 150 miles southeast of here. He was shot by Dave, eight years younger than him, during an argument between the dark-skinned brothers.

The family—14 included another brother Maurice, 46 year old Mr. J. Louis Tabson, the mother, and a young sister, Josephine—decided to have the killing appear accidental, police said. The aged woman, who declared, impressed on the family that outsiders were to be told Xavier had shot himself while cleaning his shotgun with a ramrod.

Then the family went through a ritual to remove the stigma of the killing. The gun was imbued with an evil spirit, the mother said, and must be disposed of. It was thrown into the Dumoine river.

The cabin in which the family lived was evil, too, the Ojibwas were told. It was fired one night and burned to the ground.

The little Indian group, living off the fur-trapping trade as their ancestors did, packed up its goods and moved off after burying Xavier in a nearby Indian cemetery. From there, the Tabsons vanished into the thickly-wooded interior of the county.

Months later, a vague rumor of foul play came out of the woods. After the sparsely-peopled area, provincial police learned it was enacted at Wolf Lake. A lone two weeks ago Constables J. Alphonse Matte and G. Lortie of the Noranda detachment boarded a plane for Wolf Lake.

Landing at the lake, the policemen found they had been directed to the wrong "Wolf Lake"—100 miles east of the lake they sought. But bad weather held their plane to the ground there, and for five days officers and pilot lived on nothing but salt pork provided by the caretaker of an abandoned lumber camp.

When they finally hit the right Wolf Lake, it was to find the whole Indian family except young Josephine had deserted the camp on a hunting expedition. The girl, though, told the constables she had seen her brother's death and described the shooting.

It was not until Tuesday of this week that a message came to Noranda to say the family was back at Wolf Lake.

The swarthy Dave was at the cabin when the plane dipped down again to the lake, and this time he came back to Noranda with the officers.

The police decided the accused youth should undergo mental examination. He was held here tonight, but he was to be taken later in the week to Ville Marie, Que., to be questioned by mental experts.
