RASPBERRIES AND CURRANTS

Try this way of serving raspberries and currants: Put them in a deep bowl—either separately or mixing the two fruits together—and sugar very well, turning the fruit again and again to ensure that the sugar is evenly distributed.

Then put a plate upside down on the top of the fruit, and on that an iron or some heavy weight. Stand in a cool place all night and serve very cold next day.

"Holy Grail" Cup On View in London

LONDON, Aug. 7—A cloudy green glass cup, shaped like a cocktail glass, now on exhibit in a dingy hall in the shadow of Westminster Abbey, may prove to be the Holy Grail, the cup from which Jesus drank at the last supper.

The cup, found during excavations in a cave between Antioch and Hamath, Palestine, last June, arrived in London Wednesday.

Resting in a glass case on a pedestal, the pale transparent green vessel has the place of honor in the centre hall of the Bible lands exhibition. Blue and gold silks decorate the case and a bright electric light burns down on the fragile glass.

Since the cup has been on view, the price of admission has jumped from six pence (12 cents) to a shilling (24 cents) although only a few school children and Sunday school teachers have viewed it.

Authorities do not say definitely the Antioch cup, as it is known, is the Holy Grail. All they guarantee is its authenticity as an antique work dating from the last century B.C. to the first century A.D.

Archaeologists date the cup on two grounds:

1. Because of its short stem. After the first century stems of such cups became higher.
2. It is undoubtedly a Roman-blown glass of the kind used at the time of the last supper. Later, the church forbade the use of fragile material for sacred rites.

The cup, covered with the dirt of ages, is not symmetrically shaped; the bowl being slightly lopsided. It measures approximately three and one-eighth inches in diameter, two inches at the foot and is two and three-eighths inches tall.

Experts are studying a seal on the box enclosing the cup but the inscription is so blurred there is little hope of proving the cup is the Holy Grail until further excavations are made in the cave where it was found.

IN MEMORIAM

MRS. ALFRED HIGGINBOTHAM

The sudden and unexpected death of Mrs. Jane Clow (Henderson) Higginbotham, aged 89 years, of Cambridge Road, on June 12, 1935, came very unexpectedly and was a shock to her family and large circle of friends by whom she was so long and favorably known.

Her husband, the late Alfred Higginbotham, predeceased her about ten years ago.

Her family, who were strongly attached to their mother by natural earthly ties: Thomas, in Coleman, Alta.; Caroline (Mrs. Frank Vuozzo) and Gladstone, Montague; Annie (Mrs. Neil VanDerstine), Peter's Road; Laura (Mrs. Benj. Richards) deceased; Harry, deceased; Daisy (Mrs. Alfred McLeod) Cambridge Road. Two brothers and two sisters survive: Edwin, Henderson, Murray Harbour, West, and William in the United States; Janet (Mrs. Bruce), Truro, and Mrs. James Finlay, Boston, Mass.

The late Mrs. Higginbotham was highly respected by the many relatives and acquaintances to whom she was so long and favorably known. Generous, ever ready to help others, she will be sadly missed in the community and especially by her immediate family and relatives. She lived a long and peaceful life, and with her husband and family succeeded in building up a splendid home, comfortable and attractive. A consistent member of the Presbyterian Church at Peter's Road.

The funeral service, held in Peter's Road Presbyterian Church, was conducted by Rev. J. H. Douglas, where a large audience was congregated. The hymns sung were favorites of the departed, and her family. The pall bearers were: Joseph and Fred Vuozzo, Archie McLeod, Milton Richards, Gladstone and Lloyd Higginbotham. Interment was made in the Peter's Road Cemetery beside her husband to rest there until the Resurrection morn.

The many floral tributes from her family and friends showed the high esteem in which she was held. To the bereaved family, wherever residing, our deep sympathy is extended.—P. (Patriot please copy)

Husbands, Not Wives, Cause Hen-Pecking

LONDON, Aug. 7—Husbands—not wives—are usually to blame in cases of henpecking.

This may sound queer, but Dr. G. Giehm, a leading Berlin psychiatrist, has come to this conclusion after observing the husbands of 30 women in his sanatorium for nerve cases.

"As a rule, only women who have their husbands under their thumb are hysterical," he states.

"It is not egotism, a peculiarity of married men, nor their lack of being able to understand their wives' spiritual life which are the causes of these women's hysteria," declares the doctor.

But the remaining 17 were men of weak and unbalanced character. Ten of these were "genuine hen-pecks," and according to Dr. Giehm, four were suffering from neusthenia and three were inveterate drunkards.

The ten "henpecked" husbands Dr. Giehm found to be "over-sensitive, weak, shy persons, who fearing the bright light, prefer to live always in the shadow, and who, doubtful of their own courage, must be forced to do something."

The Wrong Baby

BALTIMORE, Aug. 7—There can be no names in this story because a mother might be upset, and a nurse might lose her job, but what happened was this: A child was born to Mrs. X, and

Seek Publicity For Old London

(Canadian Press) LONDON, Aug. 7—The London County Council is seeking powers to spend money on publicity for London. "Punch" remarks that regret will be felt at this by those for whom the charm of this little-known place has been its seclusion.

When the matter is considered seriously it seems odd that the Empire metropolis does not possess such powers already. Within the last 20 years various seaside and other resorts have obtained powers to spend money on self-advertisement. Blackpool, the great amusement centre of Lancashire, managed many years earlier to rush

Little Boy Tries to Eat Thermometer

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7—Though the heat and the humidity continued intense here today, the only casualty here was a small boy who tried to eat a thermometer.

Carlton Jackson, three, saw all his elders inspecting a thermometer as the mercury hit 89. He investigated and the long red line looked like candy to him. The red bulb looked particularly good. So he bit it off.

Long Sleeved Dinner Frocks

Dinner dresses for autumn are usually confined at the wrist backs are slashed and sleeves also are sometimes slashed. Sometimes an evening ensemble consists of a gown with formal décolletage, worn with a little jacket buttoned at the waistline. Velvet printed plain and crushed, and velveteen, woollens, jacquard crepes, metals, and lace are fabric choices.

Lloyd George is for Modern Girl

LONDON, Aug. 7—Lloyd George prefers the modern girl and the education which makes her what she is.

He said so at the speech day of St. Felix school, Southwold, where his grand-daughter is a pupil. Recalling that the school was founded just at the time "when the prim and grim Victorian era was coming to an end," he went on:

"The old academies for young ladies—they were not girls in those days—at best were an expensive joke, and at their worst they were an atrocity."
