THE KING'S COUNTY GUARDIAN

Office in Montague, Capt. W. A. Johnson, Agent. and to Souris, A. J. McDonald, Agent.

...The latest news, first of all.

...On Monday, January 10th, the parishioners of St Margaret's Church presented their pastor the Rev K. C. McPherson, with a valuable driving sleigh, the Arctic King.

...One of the busy enterprises of Souris at present, worthy of mention, is L. & N. Paquet's Launch and Dory factory. Those two young men started building dories only a few years ago and their business has increased so rapidly that they added an additional building 40 by 25 feet to their former one and installed an up-to-date surface plainer and drill boring machine. This firm constructed the speedy gasoline launch, Imperial, for Bruce Stewart & Co last summer, which goes to show what they can turn out either for speed or cruising, etc. They have now in course of construction over forty ordinary fishing dories, as well as, five gasoline motor launches for different parties on the Island. They are also making a special Gasoline motor dory with a new invention on her which will make them suitable for shore fishing purpose in the near future. This firm will be advertising and showing something never seen before. Success.

...The Nova Scotia Carriage Company began life under a new ownership and management at the beginning of this past year. The business which had been established in Kentville some five years ago previous was purchased by McKay Brothers, of Souris, P. E. I. This experienced and well known firm began operations here the first of the year, and now express themselves well satisfied with their venture. Their last season's work is all disposed of and the sleighs built during the past summer—the largest number ever manufactured here,—are all shipped to their various destinations. This is a good record for a first year's work For the coming season, the firm estimate that they have 2500 orders booked. From these present indications it would seem that business will be rushing in the Nova Scotia Carriage Company. About forty men are at present employed but if orders pile up the force will be increased. A new warehouse was erected last year. Long and prosperous years of business are predicted for these men, who, coming from Prince Edward Island have taken what was a dead failure and made it into a credit to themselves and the Province.—Halifax Chronicle.

...Perpetua McPhee of Souris, relict of the late Peter Robertson, at one time a resident of Clyde River, and lot 48, died on the 31st ult. On the 3rd inst her remains were laid beside those of her late husband, at the Baptist Cemetery, West River. Her husband died about thirty-four years ago. She had reached the good old age of four score and eight, and of a once large family, one sister, Mrs McLaughlin, Souris, is now the sole survivor.

...The storm of the 27th Dec, which appears to have been general over a large part of the Atlantic, and destructive of life and property from Newfoundland to the shores of New England, was accompanied by the highest tide ever known here, even higher than the noted tide of a few weeks ago. A fish house, belonging to Alfred Fraser, Red Point, was carried away with fishing gear, fish and four dories belonging to himself and the Messrs McInnis.

One of the finest horses owned by the College of Agriculture at Truro N. S., is Cliff Rosadore, a dark chestnut Hackney Stallion a prominent winner as a young horse in England, Upper Canada and the United States. He was exhibited in harness on the lawn in front of the College and showed splendid aetion and a most desirable carriage type.

On Saturday Dr. Standish took up the Judging of Clydesdales at the College of Agriculture, Truro, N. S. Two very fine mares, one a Baron's Pride, perhaps as good as was brought from Scotland, the other a College bred mare, were brought in to the ring and gone over very carefully, so that the students should see the points that are to be considered and the conformation that is sought Dr. Standish is very popular with the students and handles his subjects in a masterly manner.

A YOUNG GIRLS STARTLING CAS

lars of which fire occurred in the paper some time ago. The fire took place at 5 o'clock on a Saturday afternoon.

A week later her mother's barn was burned also on Saturday at the same hour and was only extinguished after the hardest exertions.

A third fire occurred on a Saturday later at the same hour, some lighted newspaper being placed between the buildings, with the result that the end was burned out of one building.

The subject in this case was seen running from the scene of the blaze It is claimed that they are positive that the girl was responsible for the two last fires at least.

The girl, however, is absolutely unconscious of having done this work and is totally irresponsible of having done it. She will deny all knowledge of it positively, for it was done while in the sub-conscious state and when out of this state she remembers nothing of what may have transpired while in this strange condition.

The result was that she has had to be watched continuously ever since those fires, her brother watching her all night and other members of the family by day.

She had no objection to coming to town and is under the impression that she is going to take a position in the Hospital. She is a good worker when out of the hypnotic state and is rather pleased that she is getting a position.

One of the most strange things in connection with the case is the noises which have continued since last June when she first showed those peculiar symptoms.

These knockings are heard in the house, are loud and very annoying. They are due to her operations upon the sense of the hearing, conducted by her while in the hypnotic state and can be heard a distance of half a mile by many of the neighbors. These noises are like some one pounding or hammering upon the house.

The last night at her home was the worst in this respect. The rapping continued all night and the neighbors have been much annoyed. At times there would be a vibration as though the house was rocking.

While in the hypnotic sleep referred to she is capable of the most astonishing feats of mind-reading, being able to tell of events taking place at a distance and describe things minutely and correctly in every instance and particular.

There is no way of explaining clearly this phenomena. Scientists claim that the human family is developing a new sense entirely different from that possessed by man at present and by this sense clairvoyence and prophecy will become developed in many people. In the case here described the subjective mind only is acting and not the active.

The case is without question one of the most marvellous ever recorded Exam.

THE W. S. HARKINS CO IN THE MANXMAN

Hall Caine's great story, "The Manxman," was the bill with which the Harkins Company completed their engagement at the Lyceum Saturday night. For the second time that day the S. R. O. sign was hung up long before the multitude who sought admission had ceased to arrive. At the matinee, "Pierre of the Plains" was the bill, and the house was packed to the utmost limit of its capacity, while hundreds were turned away. In the evening similar conditions prevailed, and many were compelled to return home, as it was impossible to crowd more into the house.

"The Manxman," which, as the name indicates, is a story of the Isle of Man, is a well constructed play, and relates a story of burning interest, which holds the attention from beginning to end. A number of the characters are difficult to enact and the peculiar Manx dialect employed make them more so, and only a company of clever artists could do this piece anything but justice. Its presentation Saturday night, however, left little to be desired.

The interest of the story centres about the triangular love affairs of Peter Quillian (The Manxman), Philip Christian who is to be Deemster and Katherine Creagan, daughter of a tavern keeper. Peter asks for the hand of Katherine, but is spurned by her father, who has ambition to see her the wife of the future Deemster. Peter decides to go away, and exacts a promise from Katherine to be faithful to him during his absence, leaves her under the special care of Philip Christian, who swears no ill will befall her, and he goes to Kimberley to seek his fortune. During his absence Katherine and Philip fall in love, but when Peter returns, Philip refuses to marry Katherine, giving as his reason his promise to Peter, but really because he does not consider her socially good enough to be the wife of the future Deemster. Spurned by Philip, Katherine marries Peter, but subsequently finds that she cannot love him, and she leaves him and goes to Philip.

The incidents that follow are intensely dramatic, and come in quick succession to the end, which is very unsatisfactory, as there is no reconciliation, and all three drift apart.

Harry English as Peter Quillian, had the most difficult part but his handling of it was almost above criticism.

E. L. Delaney, as Philip Christian, has a part that was scarcely less difficult and hard to present.

Miss Lora Downin, in the part of Katherine Creagan, had an unsavory character to portray, but her interpretation was faultless.

A. J. Price, as Caesar Greagan, Katherine's father, took the part of the hyprocritical, Bible-quoting tavern keeper, who did not practice a little bit what he preached so volubly. Mr Price's work in the part was one of the features af the play, and was highly appreciated.

The other members, who took more or less minor parts, did the work assigned to them well, and materialy helped to make almost perfect the presentation of one of the strongest bills ever placed before a Sydney audience. (The above company are now playing in this city.)
