THE HOME OF BURNS

"Alloway's Auld haunted kirk," stands near the road, and a few minutes after the car stopped we stood within the roofless walls and were half disposed to indulge the superstitious feeling with which the place has been invested by the powerful imagery of Burns. The sacred ruin is like so many of the ruins of Scotland beautifully festooned with ivy It is surrounded by a small plot of burying ground, and here among others of less note, is the grave of the poet's father. The original stone which marked the spot has been purloined peacemeal by the sacriligious hands of relic hunters.

Burns' monument standing near the cottage is a handsome Grecian structure. Among other things interesting, the bible presented by the poet to "Highland Mary" and Jean Armour's wedding ring, are here exhibited. Not far from the monument is a little structure containing the well known statues of "Tom O' Shanter and Souter Johnny."

In the grounds of Doonside cottage is the

"Thorn Aboon the well
Where Mongo's mither hanged herself."

THE BANKS AND BRAES O' BONNIE DOON.

I wandered along the banks of Doon. It is indeed "bonnie Doon," and has been consecrated by rich effusions of the poet. In a natural point of view the banks of Doon are characterized by scenes softly picturesque and romantic. Deeply hung with luxurant woods or projecting into bold cliffs whose rocky precipices start up in striking contrast through dense foliage under which the stream flows murmuring along, it is an ideal spot. One of the sweetest songs of the poet was composed here after the death of Highland Mary and is ful. of pathos.

"Ye banks and braes of bonnie Doon
How can ye bloom so fresh and fair."

The Auld Brig O' Doon spanning the stream is a very ancient structute consisting of a single arch. It also is beautifully festooned with ivy, and is most picturesque. It was here that Tam O' Shanter's mare

"With ae spring brought off her master hale
But left behind her ain grey tail."

Crossing the Doon we visited Turnberry and the village of Kirkoswald where Burns attended school.

In the village churchyard are the graves of Douglas Graham and John Davidson the drouthy village shoemaker. ("Tam O' Shanter and Souter Johnny") whom Burns has immortalized in his wonderful poem.

Not far from Kirkoswald are the Cassillis Downans which in Burns' day were supposed to be the haunt of fairies. Burns in his "Hallow e'en" refers to this.

"Upon that night when fairies light
On Cassillis Downans dance."

Indeed the whole of Ayrshire is a veritable fairy land teeming with memories of Robbie Burns, and a most interesting spot to visit.

ONLY A REPORTER.

Mark Twain, at a publishers' dinner in New York, talked of his reporting days in Virginia City.

'We were trying a horse thief one day, he said and all of a sudden the big, burly scoundrel pulled off his boot and threw it at the judge. It was a heavy boot, too. It was studded with bobnails.

'I am still rather proud of the way I wrote up that little incident, doing it neatly, and at the same time getting back on a rival reporter whom I disliked. I got it all in one paragraph—something like this:—

'"Suddenly the blackguardly thief, pulling off his boot, hurled it with all his might straight at the judge's head. This desperate act might have been attended with most disastrous consequences, but fortunately, the missile only struck a reporter, so that no harm was done." '—Washington 'Star.'

YOUNG BARRISTER.

This well-known draft stallion will make the season of 1908 at Park Stables, corner of Queen and Euston Streets, Charlottetown.

YOUNG BARRISTER was sired by that king of draft horses old Barrister, and his dam the imported pure bred Clydesdale mare "Myosotis," her sire, the world renowned Mc Gregor of Scotland.

As a getter of draft stock he stands unequalled in the Province today, having to his credit nine draft stallions sired by him now in the stud. Last year 12 magnificent young draft mares got by him sold at high figures for breeding purposes to parties in Nova Scotia, where Young Barrister stood for two seasons.

Combining as he does the blood of the two most illustrious sires of draft stock the Old Country has produced, breeders of heavy stock here should avail themselves of this opportunity to secure his services

Terms $8.00 for the season, secured by approved note of hand. Return privileges as usual. Mares at owner's risk.
