

FREE OF TERRIBLE KIDNEY TROUBLE

After Three Years of Suffering, FRUIT-A-TIVES Brought Relief

MADAME HORMIDAS FOISY

624 Champlain St., Montreal

"For three years, I was ill and exhausted and I suffered constantly from Kidney Trouble and Liver Disease.

My health was miserable and nothing in the way of medicine did me any good. Then I started to use 'Fruit-a-tives' and the effect was remarkable.

I began to improve immediately and this wonderful fruit medicine entirely restored me to health. All the old pains, headaches, indigestion and constipation were relieved and once more I was well.

To all who suffer from Indigestion, Constipation, Rheumatic Pains or great Fatigue, I advise the use of 'Fruit-a-tives'."

Madame HORMIDAS FOISY.

The Woman Who Loved and Earned

BY JANE PHELPS A Modern Story of Home and Business

CHAPTER 58

Robert was completely recovered, but he seemed singularly unambitious. Fearful of hurting him, I had said nothing about a position to him but as day after day passed and he either dawdled at home or in the street I made up my mind it would be wise to talk with him. I was afraid he would get in the habit of going to the pool parlors, and to be honest I feared he might spend his idle days with Marion Hovey. Naturally, too, I wanted him to earn something. While my salary supported us, it did not leave us anything for extras.

I had invited the Murphys and the Weeds two or three times while Robert was obliged to remain in the house, and even the simple supper I provided was more than I could afford. We could live if Robert did not work just as we might have lived had I thrown up my position when we were first married. But we could have none of the luxuries. Everything went to prove how very wise I had been to hold on to my job.

"Here's an advertisement sound promising," I said one evening to introduce the subject of getting a position. "You may like to hunt it up tomorrow if you feel well enough. Robert was walking nervously about the room. 'Do sit down, dear! you will drive me wild pacing back and forth like that.'"

He took the paper and threw himself into a chair. He read aloud: "Wanted—A good salesman in first-class sporting goods house. Good references required, and a good salary paid." Sounds all right, but who will give me the "good references?"

"Why everyone for whom you have worked? Surely you deserve at least a good reference, even from Caiding."

"Oh, they'll say I am honest, and that's about all I imagine!" not the slightest interest in his tone.

"Honest and willing, besides knowing your business—the goods is about all references amount to anyway, isn't it?"

"Yes, I guess so."

Robert did not secure that position, although my bringing it to his notice seemed to have awakened a desire to get to work, as he now made a note of advertisements which seemed at all what he wanted. He spent hours each day answering them only to find he was either too late, lacked experience in that particular line, or something it was discouraging. I admitted, when tired and cross he fretted at me, declaring he was "no good."

"I don't know what to do with Robert!" I said to Mary Ryan in desperation one day. "He's getting so discouraged he is cross and unreasonable about everything."

"No sign of a job yet?"

"No, and it's three weeks since he began to hunt for one."

"To bad, Gerry, I guess little Mary will have to see if she can't help a little. I believe Leets would give him a job in the wholesale if I asked him. He's got a lot of work down there just now."

"But Robert doesn't know any thing about hats!"

"He can learn, can't he? Then he might get in the office, bookkeeper or something."

"I hate to have them know he is out of work and—looking for a job."

"Pride don't get you anywhere! Not that kind of pride. I wouldn't give a hoot for a person who would let pride keep them from getting on in the world."

"Wait until tomorrow before you say anything to Mr. Leets. Perhaps Robert will have found something today. He had quite a list to look up. I hate to have him change his line. He knows sporting goods thoroughly."

"All right! but it ain't good for Robert to be idle Gerry. It ain't good for any man to get the habit of being supported. They're preaching on women's preserves when they do. Then "How is that Hovey girl? Seen her lately?"

"No, not for some time—why?" both the tone, and the startled carelessness with which she had asked the question piqued my curiosity.

HINTS FOR The Motorist

WINTER GEAR SHIFTING TROUBLES

Cars that are kept in cold garages or allowed to stand idle for long periods out of doors in winter frequently give trouble in regard to changing gears. Not only it is sometimes next to impossible to engage low speed, or reverse, at starting, because the gears cannot be meshed, but it is not uncommon to find that the shifting-lever can hardly be moved from one position to another. The first named difficulty is really a clutch trouble, occasioned by the failure of the driven member of the clutch fully to disengage itself from the fly-wheel, on account of the increased adhesiveness of the cold oil or grease between them. The clutch continues to run with the engine, even when in disengaged position, carrying the clutch gears with it and preventing their meeting with the stationary gears. Thinning the oil used with a metal disc, clutch or using thinner grease in the clutch bearing is the remedy. Regarding the gear required, before the engine is started (with the clutch held disengaged) is another way of overcoming this difficulty. The presence in the gearbox of grease, hardened by cold, generally accounts for trouble experienced in moving the gears from one speed to another. It becomes so solid between the gears and on the rear slides that it can hardly be pushed out of the way by the force exerted through the shifting lever. The remedy for this condition is to add enough light oil to the gear box, so that the gearbox grease shall be thinned sufficiently to permit it to flow readily, even when it is at its coldest.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE LEGAL DISPUTE

BOSTON, February 17.—A motion to re-open the hearing before a master in litigation involving three parties in the Christian Science Church, was filed with the Supreme Court yesterday. Counsel for the directors of the First Church of Christ, of Boston, asked the court to instruct Frederick Dodge, the master, to complete the evidence on the issue of the legality of the removal as a director John V. Dittmore, before making his report.

The effect of the motion, if granted, will be to delay decision in the controversy between the trustees of the Christian Science Publishing Society and the directors at a time when the report of the master on all parties was understood to be almost ready for presentation to the court.

The late Dr. Bambrick of Holy Trinity church, Yarmouth, served more than a decade in one pastorate. I suppose if his work was put down in cold statistics, his baptisms, marriages and funerals numbered in the hundreds. But the work of such a man cannot be told in statistics.

Dr. Bambrick was a man of exceptional broadness of mind, yet he never prated of his broad vision and never gave offence to those of narrower vision. He was one of the most eloquent Anglican preachers I have never heard in either Canada or United States. His language was beautiful. His word pictures of the events in the life of Christ were wonderful. I have never heard Holy Day sermons better than his. Some criticized him because of repetition of special sermons, such as Good Friday and other special days, but in years to come when they have listened to others, they will realize that not even a master orator can improve on those magnificent special

A TRIBUTE TO THE LATE REV. DR. BAMBRICK, RECTOR OF YARMOUTH

Not many realize just how much the average rector of a town in Bethlehem on Christmas Day or the crucifixion on Calvary on Good Friday or the resurrection on Easter Day, Dr. Bambrick painted a picture so real and so sympathetic to the occasion that like the prayers of the prayer-book, it couldn't be improved upon.

His charities always kept him financially poor. He never turned away from a needy case and never shifted the responsibility to somebody else. I have heard it said that the begging poor always went to Dr. Bambrick regardless of church affiliations.

He was human, and because he was human, his heart was bigger than his purse. He had his faults, just like all the disciples whom Christ chose as his apostles, but his faults were not faults of the heart. He had tried, he might have had far bigger and more remunerative pastorate, than Yarmouth, but his tastes were simple and he seemed to be wedded to Holy Trinity. We who know Holy Trinity, cannot conceive of it, ever being quite the same without Dr. Bambrick.

Kindly and sympathetic such was he. Who boasted not of narrow piety but of his daily earthly task. Giving far more than he would feign to ask.

Mourning with those who mourn, none know how deep He felt the sorrows, or how oft, he'd weep

With those whose loved ones as he stoog bare-head He buried in the City of the Dead. Laughing with those who laughed in humor kind. Broad-shouldered, versatile, of bigger mind

Than those who go about in solemn mien. Boasting of piety that might be seen. Guy Cathcart Pelton, Vancouver, B. C. Feb. 3, 1920.
