HEALTH OF THE SKIN

Thanks to modern articles on health and beauty, most women pay a great deal of attention to their complexions and hands.

When we consider the functions of the skin, we find that one of the most important is that of the sweat glands. Waste products are daily given off from the surface of the skin.

By using a magnifying glass it is possible to see how in some skins the mouths of the sweat glands are choked with particles of dust, and worn-out tissue or castoff cells, although the surface of the skin may be apparently quite clean.

When every moment counts, the daily bath should serve to beautify as well as to cleanse. There is no better way of smoothing out tired lines in the face than relaxing completely in a tubful of warm water.

After soaking for a while in the warm soapy water, the hands are in just the right condition for manicuring, and the calloused or corn-covered feet are ready for a treatment of home chiropody.

Household Hints

By Roberta Lee

Broken China To mend china or glass, melt some powdered alum in an old spoon. Before it hardens rub this over the pieces, press them together and set them aside to dry.

Squeaking Swings Hany a piece of old leather on hooks from which a swing or other moving article is hung and it will stop the squeaking.

A Jelly Bag Holder Saw off the back from an old kitchen chair, invert the chair, place the vessel inside and tie the bag to the four inverted legs.

A Morning Smile

USING HIS HEAD

A young fellow named Goldstein got a job as conductor on the Spring street trolley line, which averages $3 to $10 a day in fares.

After two trips, Goldstein turned in to the superintendent $19.85. The superintendent looked at Goldstein and said, "You are a wonder, Goldstein; how in the world did you do it?"

For Burns and Scalds.—Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil will take the fire out of a burn or scald. It should be at hand in every kitchen so that it may be available at any time.

A certain amount of friction is absolutely necessary for the health of every skin and the chief value of the daily bath lies in the brisk rubdown which follows it.

In cases where a daily bath is an impossibility, a very efficient substitute is found in a dry rub with a very rough towel.

Women are forever complaining that their husbands sit up in glum silence at home. Very often the reason for this is that there is mighty little encouragement to talk to a wife who never listens, who yawns in her husband's face when he tries to talk shop to her and who interrupts his best story to say: "Johnny, don't pull the cat's tail."

The Way to Keep a Husband Glad He Married You is by Letting Him See That You Appreciate All He Has Done for You, and by Being Loving and Reasonable and a Sympathetic Audience

6. Be Reasonable. Don't demand the impossible of your husband. Don't expect any man who is working himself to a splintering to pay the butcher's bill to feed you on soft talk and remain the perpetual lover after he has become the bread-winner.

Don't expect a man whose nerves have been stretched to the breaking point all day in business, who has been aggravated by incompetent employees or bulldozed by a tyrannical employer; who has been badgered by unreasonable customers or clients and who is perhaps wondering how he is going to meet his note in the bank, always to come home sweet and amiable and be a little ray of sunshine in the house and be ready to put on his evening clothes and fare forth to an evening's pleasuring.

Make allowance for what he has been through. Don't ask him questions. Don't tell him unpleasant news. Feed him and pet him. Fetch him his slippers and let the poor, tired, worn-out creature flop down on the couch and go to sleep.

Don't expect your husband to be a little plaster saint. Don't make mountains out of molehills when he does something of which you do not approve. Grant him the right to have a few tastes and habits that differ from yours and even to have a few friends of his own and recognize his right to go off on an occasional fishing party with men and to have the privilege of his evening out every week.

7. Be a Good Listener. One of the main reasons why husbands leave home and go in search of affinites is to find some women who will lend them an ear. Every man has to have a woman confidant, some woman to whom he can tell his hopes and plans and dreams and aspirations and boast of his triumphs, as he would be ashamed to do to another man.

Pre-empt the job of the audience with the glad hand for yourself. Don't let any other woman get it away from you or beat you to it. Listen with an expression of rapt wonder when your husband tells you of what the boss said to him and he said to the boss.

Hang on his words while he recounts how many miles he made on a gallon of gasoline or the size of the fish he caught. Listen unwearingly while he discusses the grocery trade or lays down the law about what Hoover should do about our foreign relations. Laugh at the right places at his jokes and ask him to tell company that funny story he told you last night and the wisecrack he made to the traffic cop.

Women are forever complaining that their husbands sit up in glum silence at home. Very often the reason for this is that there is mighty little encouragement to talk to a wife who never listens, who yawns in her husband's face when he tries to talk shop to her and who interrupts his best story to say: "Johnny, don't pull the cat's tail."

8. Keep Yourself Interesting. Good looks may catch a man, but it takes brains to hold him. He gets tired of looking at a living picture after a while and in time the prettiest living picture is apt to turn into a chromo, but he never gets weary of being entertained and amused.

Therefore, read and study and go about as much as you can so that you can keep up with your husband mentally. Keep your mind alert and active. Keep on your tiptoes.

Don't slump down into being one of the women who get fat in mind as well as body and whose whole line of conversation consists of recounting the children's ailments and the cute thing the baby did and the price of butcher's meat. When homes are broken up it is nearly always an inside job, and it is the boring wife who opens the door for the entertaining vamp to come in and steal away her husband.

9. Be Appreciative. Don't take everything that your husband does for you for granted and as no more than your due. Don't hand him a knock because he can only give you a bungalow instead of a palace or a flivver instead of a Rolls Royce. Don't let him see that you think that you're yourself away on him because he is just a plodding business man instead of a get-rich-quick-Wallingford.

The average man is a slave to his family. All he gets out of his long years of toil are just his board and clothes, and they are what is left over after the wife and the children have had the best of everything. It is father who gets the neck of the chicken and has one hook in a closet and is shuffled around out of the rooms when the girls are having their beaux and the boys are playing the radio and who wears one suit two years so that Jack may have sport togs and Sally party frocks.

And whether the man's life is a martyrdom or all his sacrifices are gloriously worthwhile depends on just whether his wife and children make him see every day and hour that they appreciate all that he does for them and that they are grateful to him and that in their eyes he just about heads the lists of the world's heroes. So, if you want to keep your husband glad he married you don't weary in well-doing with the salve-spreader.

10. Be Affectionate to Your Husband. Don't consider that he is a mind reader who knows how you feel toward him without your ever mentioning the subject. Tell him how you love him and that he is still the Fairy Prince of your girlish dreams and that you think his bay-window is becoming to him and his bald head just shows his intellectual brow and that you are down on your knees every night thanking heaven for having bestowed him on you as a husband.

Men are just as heart hungry as women are. They crave love just as much. They have just as insatiable an appetite for sweet talk as women have. And as long as wife keeps the cookie jar filled husband seldom strays from the pantry shelf. So baby your husband as you do your 6-months-old. Kiss him and coo over him and tell him he is the most bootfullest sing on earl, and "muzzer's precious darling," and you couldn't lose him if you tried.

Follow these ten rules for holding a husband and you will never land in a divorce court. DOROTHY DIX.

Was In Bed All Summer

"I have to work in the store and do my own housework, too, and I got nervous and run-down and was in bed nearly all summer. The least noise would make me nervous. I was told to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I have taken seven bottles. It has made me stronger and put more color into my face. I am looking after my store and housework and my four children and I am getting along nicely now."

The good old bending exercises still remain the best muscular activities for wrenching the fat off. Touching the finger tips to the floor from a standing position, and from prone position stretching forward until finger tips reach toe tips are the tried and true old-timers. And, of course, you hasten the recovery of the flapper waistline by keeping the diet down to what you need rather than what you can eat.

His statement was much more definite than previous official intimations.
