TO LIVE LONG.

The art of living long is the attractive title of a little book published by The Century Society, of Portland, Oregon, and just received by The Guardian.

The society accepts membership at a moderate fee and undertakes to teach those within the circle the art of living long and happily.

Incidentally, the little book before us gives out some definite and indefinite information, which is presumably supplementary to the detailed instruction awaiting those who are admitted to regular membership.

The burden of the instruction imparted through the book is the necessity of restraint and temperance in living. Eating to excess is very wisely condemned. Here is a quotation:

"Every morsel of food taken into the stomach, in excess of the amount needed for nutrition, is most dangerous waste material, because it ferments, decays, generates poisons, uric acid, and clogs the whole excretory system. This is the chief cause of disease, by making debilitated flesh, which is the soil in which disease germs, ever surrounding us, are eager to breed."

With which doctrine most modern physicians will agree.

"I saw few die of hunger; of eating 100,000," said an eminent physician, and provided his practice was sufficiently extensive he probably did.

It is admitted, not only by physicians but by other observers that intemperance in eating is as injurious to the health as intemperance in drinking, and although the latter vice may be subject to more acute manifestations the effect of the former upon life and morals is perhaps equally baneful.

Sleep, hunger and thirst are named "the three keepers of the temple, the body," and the injunctions given as to how these three should be treated are well worth careful thought. Temperance in all things is the keynote of long life and, although subject to accident or misfortune, there is no doubt that careful attention to these would tend greatly to the prolongation of life. The thought is worth keeping and the little book well worth reading.

MODERN EDUCATION.

At a recent meeting of the Presbytery of Toronto the Rev. Dr. Henry F. Cope, representing the Religious Education Association, an international organization, delivered an address on the education of the people in Christian citizenship. In the course of the address Dr. Cope indicated that in many instances he had found that higher education both in the United States and Canada tended to fit a man to reach the high financial position rather than to fit him to become the best type of citizen. The tendency is to specialize in departments instead of develop the whole man.

This is the problem, ever old, ever new. What is the best sort of education for the average boy and girl? Before answering that we have got to put supplementary questions: What is the end of education? Is it merely to equip youth for the struggle for wealth, or is it to teach him how to enjoy life wherever his lot may be cast?

The average higher school curriculum is adapted for the former purpose, while the latter should be the ideal.

Not every boy is capable, were it possible, of attaining a foremost position in the professions, commerce, or in agriculture. He must be satisfied to follow the beaten track. That is no reason why his life should become humdrum, monotonous, uninteresting and joyless. It is so, however, in too many instances, as the boy has not had a chance of making the most of his daily and hourly opportunities. He has not learned in whatsoever state he is therein to be cheerful, patient, self-contained and hopeful, for this is what it means to be content.

In this Island, thanks to the Government's initiative, we are awakening to the necessity for broadening education to fulfil this function and have introduced Nature Study into our school curriculum. In the development of the perceptive senses lies the secret of successful education. By this means we get that trained and organized common sense which enables the mind to appreciate truth—moral truth as well as facts of nature—which enables any average individual to value and enjoy almost every moment of his life, whether he be at work or play.

"I advocate natural history knowledge," says Huxley, "because it would lead us to seek the beauties of natural objects, instead of trusting to chance to force them on our attention. To a person unacquainted in natural history, his country or seaside stroll is a walk through a gallery filled with wonderful works of art, nine-tenths of which have their faces turned to the wall. Teach him something of nature history, and you place in his hands a catalogue of those which are worth turning round. Surely our innocent pleasures are not so abundant in this life, that we can afford to despise this or any other source of them. We should fear being banished for our neglect to that limbo, where the great Florentine tells us are those who during this life 'wept when they might be joyful.'"

On a mind thus developed it is a simple matter to graft the principles of good citizenship. A lover of nature cannot fail but be a good man, and a good man is necessarily a good citizen.

NO'ES.

It's a good wind that blows nobody ill.

Auctioneers are complaining of dull trade in consequence of so few people leaving the Island.

Watch out silver-black beauty With fur coat so bonnie, Man will soon skin dat coat An' sell it for the money.

Mink ranchers are wishing minks were foxes as they are so prolific—seven, eight and nine litters are common. Still at $150 per pair there's money in it.

It never rains but it pours prosperity. Not content with the best agricultural year of recent times, millions from foxes, and a most promising oyster industry, we are in the near future, going to have a rolled-oats mill and a woolen mill. All we want now is population.

Everybody is patting Mr. Doherty on the back—he is the most heartily-congratulated man on two continents. Even the Montreal lawyers regard his tactics in evading the law as the best thing which could happen to—What? The Canadian Immigration laws! The amendments to this act under which Mr. Doherty acted, came into force about three years ago, and there are many lawyers who now do not hesitate to term them "most arbitrary." But for Thaw's unexpected advent and summary ejection, the arbitrariness would have passed unnoticed in legal circles.

Sir Lionel Edward Gresley Carden, recently appointed British Minister to Mexico, was born September 15, 1851, and received his education at Eton.

Congratulations to: William H. Taft, former President of the United States, 56 years old to-day.

Porfirio Diaz, former President of Mexico, 83 years old to-day.

Prince of Piedmont, heir apparent to the Italian throne, 9 years old to-day.

George W. Wickersham, former Attorney General of the United States, 55 years old to-day.

Richard Olney, former Attorney General and Secretary of State of the United States, 78 years old to-day.

Sir William Whyte, former vice-president of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, 70 years old to-day.

Frederick L. Blackmon, representative in Congress of the Fourth Alabama district, 40 years old to-day.

FIRST THINGS

The first serious railway accident in history occurred eighty-three years ago to-day, when William Huskisson, M. P., was killed at the opening of the Liverpool & Manchester railway in England.

TODAY IN DOMINION HISTORY

Jumbo, the world-famous elephant, whose name has been incorporated in colloquial English as a synonym for anything of unusual and extraordinary size, was killed near St. Thomas, Ont., twenty-eight years ago to-day.

September 15 is the birthday of A. L. Edgerton Crouter, famous educator of the deaf and dumb, at Belleville, Ont., in 1846; and of N. A. Belcourt, Speaker of the House of Commons in 1904 and later Senator, in 1960. On this date in 1868 Whelan was convicted of the murder of D'Arcy McGee, the Irish-Canadian statesman, and was executed in the following February.

THE HUMAN PROCESSION

Two eminent ex-presidents, William Howard Taft and Porfirio Diaz, will be the recipients of birthday congratulations to-day. Prof. Taft, who passes his fifty-sixth milestone, has been enjoying a pleasant summer in Canada and has greatly increased his "batting average" as a golfer since he threw off the cares of state and returned to the ranks. Mr. Taft, however, did not leave his country, because of any desire of his countrymen to be rid of him, as was the case with Porfirio Diaz, the grizzled old Spanish-Indian statesman and despot who will to-day celebrate his eighty-third anniversary. After ruling Mexico for over thirty years, Diaz is spending his old age in Europe, an exile from his native land.

British interests in troubled Mexico are in the hands of an able diplomat, Sir Lionel Edward Gresley Carden, who was appointed His British Majesty's minister to Mexico in July last. Sir Lionel, who was born in County Tipperary sixty-two years ago to-day, has had much experience as a diplomat in Latin America. He was minister to Guatemala for eight years prior to receiving the Mexican appointment. He first visited Mexico thirty years ago, as a member of a special mission to that country, and in 1885 he was made British consul in the city of Mexico. He was twice in charge of the British legation in the Mexican capital.

Crown Prince Umberto Nicola Tommaso Giovanni, Prince of Piemonte, the only son of the King of Italy, will celebrate his ninth birthday to-day. The future ruler of the Italians is an exceptionally healthy lad, and has never been really ill. The Queen, who is a daughter of the fiery king of Montenegro, devotes most of her time to the care of her two and her three little sisters. The Crown Prince made his first public appearance at the celebration in Rome of the annexation of Tripoli. He is said to be very studious, like his father, and prefers books to play.

Richard Olney, who recently declined the post of United States ambassador to Great Britain, was born at Oxford, Mass., seventy-eight years ago to-day. He was attorney-general and secretary of state in the administration of President Cleveland, and has practiced law in Boston for over half a century. Mr. Olney's public service ended with the expiration of Mr. Cleveland's second term in 1897.

SAY MISSING WOMAN MAY BE IN ST. JOHN.

BROOKLINE, Mass., Sept. 13.—The Brookline police say they have reason to believe that Hattie Ella Caldwell, the strangely missing young librarian, is with relatives. "She is either with her grandmother in Kings County, N. S., or with relatives in St. John, N. B., the Chief of Police told a reporter. The cold well case has been a dropped out of sight very mysteriously. It was first thought she was lost in the woods and searching parties went over a large area. She was also hunted in Waltham, Mansfield, Attleboro, Monson and other Massachusetts towns. Some thought she had killed herself, but her family laugh at such a theory. Her younger sister, Bertha, is frustrated with anxiety about her. The St. John police may be called into the case.

BRIDE INSANE AFTER TRYING 'VOODOO' CURE.

TRENTON, N. J., Sept. 13.—Mrs. Marie Zielaska, a young Slay bride, whose home is in a foreign quarter of this city, is in the State Hospital for the Insane, driven mad, her neighbors say, by a colored "voodoo woman."

A fortnight ago, not long after her marriage, Mrs. Zielaska began suffering from some trifling nervous disorder. A neighbor, also a Slay woman, told her she was under a "spell" and had better consult a voodoo, or witch doctor. She went to Mrs. Richards Washington.

The colored woman, according to the neighbors' stories, told the bride "A man is in love with you and has put you under a spell. Your heart is filled with devils and unless you get rid of them, you'll die. You've got to send the devils back to the man."

"Here are nine nails and nine needles. Put them in water and after nine days the devils will leave you."

This was the ninth day. Mrs. Zielaska, who had been mildly hysterical, became violently insane. The voodoo was arrested on a technical charge of obtaining money under false pretenses.

MAINLY ABOUT PEOPLE

The many friends of Mr. Hammond Kelly, Southport, will be pleased to hear that he is reported to be steadily improving.

King George, it was reported today will be sponsor for the heir of the Roxburgh dukedom, whose mother was Miss Mary Golet, of New York. The Duke of Roxburgh was aide de camp to King George in 1901 when, as the Duke of Cornwall and York, the latter made a colonial tour on board the Ophir.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Warren, of this city, have returned home from a very pleasant visit to Toronto, where they were the guests of Mr. W. H. Newsome, formerly of Charlottetown. The only thing to mar the pleasure of the visit was the regrettable illness of Mr. Newsome, who has been suffering from an attack of pernicious anaemia. He is now, however, sufficiently improved to be able to take a ride in his car every day.

Rev. J. T. McNeill, M. A., B. D., and his mother, Mrs. W. C. McNeill, of Elmsdale, are visiting in Charlottetown, the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Campbell, the latter being an aunt of Rev. Mr. McNeill. Mr. McNeill has a brilliant record as a student. After graduating from the Prince of Wales College several years ago, he took a course at McGill, where he received his M. A. degree. Subsequently he received his B. D. degree from the Presbyterian College of New Westminster, B. C. He has just returned from Europe, where he took a post graduate course in one of the continental universities.

HOLD SUSPECTS FOR DIAMOND THEFT

LONDON, September 13.—That postal employes connived the theft of the pearl necklace valued at $625,000, which mysteriously disappeared on July 16, after having been mailed in Paris to a London dealer, seems to have been established by the evidence presented at the hearing to-day before a police magistrate of the New street police court of the five men held on suspicion of being concerned in the crime.

Whether the employes belong to the French or the English post office, however, the authorities decline to divulge at present.

The five prisoners were arrested September 2. Three of them, Lockett, Silbermann and Gutworth, were taken into custody at the British Museum tube station, while the other two, Grizzard and McCarthy, were captured near Hatton Garden in the centre of the wholesale jewelry district.

Taking the witnesses stand today, a Parisian diamond broker named Quadratstein, who assisted in laying the trap which resulted in bagging the quintette of suspects, testified that Gutworth told him it had cost $12,000 to acquire the necklace and that among the recipients of the money were two postmen, who received $3,000.

Quadratstein also asserted that Gutworth told him that Lockett was the man who on July 1, 1909, snatched a bag of jewelry valued at $500,000 from a Paris jeweler named Goldsmith in a street restaurant.

SHADES OF CAPTAIN KIDD

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 13.—Capt. Jensen of the United Fruit Steamship Admiral Schley, brought to this port from Jamaica the story of the stealing of a big square-rigged ship that rivals the tales of Captain Kidd. Unless the vessel was captured since Captain Jensen sailed from Port Antonio, it is still roaming the high seas.

The stolen ship was the Norwegian barque Ravenscourt, a well known trader here. She arrived at Buff Bay, Jamaica, from France a few days before Captain Jensen sailed. On her voyage one of the crew went insane and ran amuck. He stabbed the chief officer and ship's carpenter before he was subdued. The first thing that Capt. Duns master of the vessel, did on his reaching Buff Bay was to take the wounded men ashore for medical treatment. He was amazed, on return to the shore, to see the vessel with every sail set, racing out of a harbor.

Urging the crew of his rowboat to expend every effort to overtake the craft, Captain Duns pursued her ten miles to sea, and was then compelled to return. While he was endeavoring to secure a gunboat to go after the barque, he was informed that she had put in at Hope Bay, about 30 miles away. Boarding a train, Captain Duns got to Hope Bay in time to see his vessel pull up anchor and leave.

Captain Duns believes that the Swedish sailor got loose and compelled the other members of the crew to obey him and put to sea.

ANOTHER EXPEDITION TO THE ANTARCTIC

LONDON, Sept. 11.—J. Foster Stakhouse, who was intimately associated with the late Capt. Scott in organizing the fateful expedition to the South Pole, is arranging for another trip to the Antarctic. The plans are for an expedition to start from London in August, 1914, to explore King Edward VII. Land. It is expected the explorers will be away for nearly two years, sailing in the steam yacht Polar, specially built for navigation in polar regions.
