Cards Beat Detroit In Series Opener

National League Champs Rout The Detroit Tigers In Their Home Grounds 8-3

Iron Man Infield Of Bengals Crumbles Before Sustained Attack Of Rampant St. Louis Club — "Dizzy" Dean Shows Form.

(By Alan Gould, Associated Press Sports Editor)
(A. P. By Guardian's Special Wire)
DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 3.—The front-line of the Tiger defence, the iron-man infield that they heralded as the "battalion of death" crumbled and fell back today in wild disorder, spreading nothing but doom to Detroit's hopes as the rampant St. Louis Cardinals poured through gaping holes to sweeping victory in the first skirmish of the 1934 world championship baseball battle.

Five errors by this jittery Tiger infield in the first three innings, most of them the kind of mistakes that a sandlotter would have been ashamed of, enabled the National League champions to take quick command of the proceedings and then smash the remnants of Detroit's resistance with a powerhouse attack led by Joe Medwick, slugging outfielder who tied a World Series record with four straight hits, including a home run.

Coasted to Victory

The final score was 8-3 and the verdict overwhelmingly in favor of the clouting Cardinals as they coasted to victory behind the effective pitching of the celebrated Jerome Herman ("Dizzy") Dean, king of the National League's pitchers, signalized the fact they are still riding the crest of the wave that carried them to sensational triumph in the pennant race over New York Giants.

The mighty Dean, the tall, gawky Oklahoman whose fireball had spread destruction through the National League and caused fearsome reverberations into the Americans' camp, pitched his third full game victory within a six-day period. With less than three days of rest since he blanked Cincinnati Reds for the second time in the closing drive of the Cardinals to the top, Dean subdued the Tigers with a resourceful if not altogether brilliant exhibition.

The elder of the famous pair of pitching brothers lacked his customary control and yielded eight basehits, including a booming home run by Hank Greenberg in the eighth inning, but he was seldom in anything resembling real danger or called upon to bear down against the desultory Detroit attack. Dizzy had his "fire ball" when he needed it, however, and he was content largely to ride along behind the steady, increasing lead that his team-mates piled up.

13 Hits

Against Alvin ("General") Crowder, Fred ("Fippo") Marberry and Elton ("Big Chief") Hoge, the Cardinals banged out 13 hits, capping the climax of the rout with a four-run drive in the sixth that chased Marberry from the box. This settled any lingering doubt about the outcome, as Dean himself led the onslaught with a rousing two-bagger, although the Tigers had already tossed away most of their chances in one of the most ragged exhibitions ever witnessed in a championship game.

Whatever chance the veteran Crowder had to give Dean a real battle and achieve his come-back goal, after being a victim of the Giants in last year's series and then cast off by Washington Senators, was dissipated by the complete crack-up of the Tiger inner quartet at the outset. Two errors by Marvin Owen, the third baseman, and one each by the other members of the "battalion of death" led directly to the first three Cardinal runs with Crowder helpless to do anything about it.

Yielded Six Hits

Crowder yielded only six hits in the five innings he worked, including Medwick's fifth-inning home run. With a tight defence that big wallop might have represented the only run off him but the "General" retired for a pinch hitter and his successors were promptly belted all over the park. Marberry lasted only two-thirds of an inning and Hoge, a southpaw, gained control of a hopeless situation only after being pestered for a double by Bill Delancey, Cardinal catcher, which brought in the last two St. Louis runs.

The Cardinals themselves contributed to the sloppy performance with two errors marked up against their agile centre fielder, Ernie Osratti, but they had nothing much to worry about and seemed on the whole to be playing very much like a big college football team going through the motions of an early season "breather" game.

The outcome, on the basis of the home guard's dismal showing in the first World Series setting Detroit has had in 25 years, was a terrific shock to a crowd of 42,505 cash customers who contributed $139,636 in gate receipts. The crowd itself is considerably below expectations and only a thousand or so of the ballgame capacity of Navin Field but any disappointment caused by this development paled by comparison with the mortifying performance of the Tiger infield, right out in public in the full glare of the spotlights and before a gathering that was all primed to cheer the discomfiture of the great Dean.

Big Strain Over

It isn't all over, of course, on the basis of one game. The Tigers may hurt themselves together overnight, with the jitters and tension of the first big strain behind them. They are a better club than they looked today and they still have their pitching ace, the sensational Lynn "Schoolboy" Rowe to count upon. Rowe is slated to pitch tomorrow, with Bill Hallahan, a southpaw and 1931 World Series hero, picked to take up the sharp-shooting of the Cardinals instead of the anticipated choice, young Paul Dean.

Unless the Tigers rally behind their 22-year-old hurling giant from Arkansas, a hero of 16 consecutive victories during the American League season, their chances of making any progress against this Cardinal base crew will be just about blown to the cool breeze that is adding a chilling note to baseball's annual big show. They failed by only one to equal the all-time record for errors in a single World Series game and their partisans hope today's performance is not the fore-runner of an attempt to equal the Series record of 19 errors, registered in seven games of the 1909 series by the last previous Detroit champions.

Third baseman Owen's first error, when he failed to handle a smash from Manager Frank Frisch's bat in the opening inning, did no damage to the Detroit cause except as the foretaste of the bad news to come. The Cardinals filled the bases in the second inning on a single by Ernie Osratti, a dropped throw at second base by the usually reliable Charlie Gehring, following which Jack Rothrock boomed a single to centre, bringing home Osratti and Dizzy Dean.

Howie Morenz Satisfied With Trade Terms

MONTREAL, Oct. 3.—Howie Morenz, Chicago Black Hawks centre, was requested tonight by Major Fred McLaughlin, owner of the Hawks, to reach Chicago as soon as possible. Morenz stated he would leave here Saturday to report to his new club.

The first skating veteran, who has hurried up the ice for Canadians of the National Hockey League for 11 seasons, said he was pleased with the terms agreed upon now that the big deal has been completed and was looking forward to his season with the Stanley Cup holders.

Previously Morenz had felt he was not being fully acquainted with the terms of the deal and would retire rather than be pushed here and there after his many years in hockey but a conference with Leo Dandurand, manager of Canadiens, and a communication from Major McLaughlin changed the complexion of the matter.

CANADIAN CHALLENGER

SYDNEY, N. S., Oct. 3.—Jack Marshall of Winnipeg, outstanding Canadian challenger for the world's heavyweight wrestling championship has been chosen to oppose Ed Don George, one of the claimants to the title, who has been signed to appear here Saturday night. Don George will meet Harry Lundt at Halifax tomorrow night.

Not content with this initial gift of two runs, where the Cardinals should have been retired without scoring, the Tigers blew up again in the third. Medwick singled to start this inning but with an easy double play in sight on Jim Collins' roller to Greenberg, shortstop Billy Rogell threw wild on the relay back to first base. Medwick was forced out but Collins scampered to second on the error and then ran all the way out in public in the full glare of the spotlights and before a gathering that was all primed to cheer the discomfiture of the great Dean.

By this time the home-town crowd was beginning to boo the Tigers as lustily as they had started out to cheer Dizzy Dean and his mates. There was a brief Tiger flurry, with time out being called when Jo-Jo White walked and Manager Mickey Cochrane and Gehring singled, the latter's baseliit tallying White, but Greenberg took a futile swing at Dean's fast ball for a third strike.

Medwick's third straight hit was his fifth-inning home, into the temporary left-field stands, for a Cardinals applied the crusher in the next frame with an attack that quickly drove Crowder's replacement, Marberry, from the box. Dean started it with a long double to left centre, a hit that gave him the piercing of all basemen he did all afternoon. Martin's single, Rothrock's sacrifice and successive singles by Medwick and Collins produced another run and chased Marberry to the showers. Hoge's first pitch was pounded into the Cardinals' base by the usually reliable Charlie Gehring, for a double, scoring two more runs, but the Indian southpaw kept the Cardinals in check thereafter.

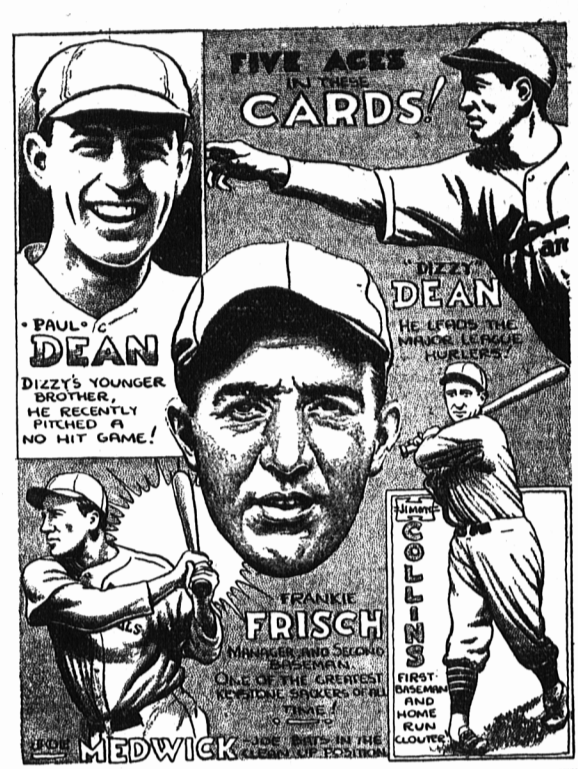

Shoved Dismal Dean, sometimes gesturing disdain of the Tigers, continually flinging fast ball across the corners, and occasionally angling with Umpire-in-Chief Brick Owens behind the plate, was inclined to get himself "in the hole" with the batters but Jo-Jo White was the only man he walked, twice giving the Tiger lead-off a fourth ball, and soon did he have anything to worry about.

After spiking the first Tiger threat, in the third, Dean breezed along steadily until the sixth, when Greenberg's hard single to centre, followed by Osratti's wild throw which enabled the big Tiger first sacker to gain second base and Gehring's single through the infield accounted for the second Detroit run. Greenberg, the New York Jewish boy whose hitting was a big factor in the Tiger pennant rush, belted one of Dizzy's fast ones into the left field stands in the eighth.

There was a flicker of hope when Rogell opened the ninth with a single. The Tigers were beginning to take a toehold and there was some suspicion that Dean was tiring. Owen shot a wicked grounder toward the box but the ball caromed sharply off Dizzy's leg and directly into the hands of first baseman Collins for the putout. Rogell reached second but he was tagged out by Martin, on Fox's sharp grounder. Pepper missed the double play at first, because of a low throw but Dean hitched up his trousers and struck out Gerald Walker, pinch-hitting for Hoge, to end the ball game.

Mammoth Trade Completed Between Mt'l. Canadiens And Chicago Black Hawks

(Canadian Press)
MONTREAL, Oct. 3.—Ranking as one of the greatest player deals in National Hockey League history, the mammoth trade between Chicago Black Hawks and Montreal Canadiens, with side trades involving Montreal Maroons and Boston Bruins, was completed and officially announced today.

The deal—Canadiens send to the Stanley Cup holders, Chicago Black Hawks, Howie Morenz, outstanding centre, Lorne Chabot, goaltender, and Marty Burke, defenceman.

Chicago sends to Canadiens Leroi Conacher defenceman, Len Goldsworthy, forward, and Roger Jenkins, defenceman.

Canadiens give to Maroons Leroi Conacher and Herb Cain, and in return Maroons renounce all rights to Nelson Crutchfield, the star of McGill University's senior team last season. Cain while he played with Maroons last season, was Canadiens property until today's deal.

Canadiens exchanged Johnny Gagnon for Joe Lamb of Boston Bruins, both being right wingers. These trades were announced by Leo Dandurand, managing director of Canadiens, and Tommy Gorman, Vice-President of Maroons.

New Line Canadiens plan to use Nels Crutchfield at centre of a new line with Jack McGill, another brilliant member of McGill University's team, at left wing and Joe Lamb at right. Dandurand stated both Crutchfield and McGill had come to terms and he was scheduled to meet them both tonight so that contracts would be signed.

Possibility some further trades would develop out of the major deal was seen by Dandurand. He stated he was ready to make a cash offer to Maroons for Conacher, if the big red team would let the burly defenceman go. Dandurand also revealed he had received a cash offer for Goldsworthy from the Black Hawks, Major Fred McLaughlin wanting to buy back the forward he tossed into the six-player shift.

Ready To Dicker Dandurand is ready to dicker with Boston for Ed Clapper, forward and intimidator he would give Albert Leduc and Leo Bourque, defencemen for the smart Bruin veteran, Frank Patrick and Art Ross of the Bruins are due here Saturday to confer with Dandurand and Lester Patrick of Rangers will be here this week and may have a player or two to put on the block.

Howie Morenz, who announced yesterday he was through with hockey because he had not been consulted in the deal and was tired of reading every day that he had been sent to some team or other, visited Dandurand today. A few differences have to be ironed out but observers felt Howie would feel the call of the game and appear for his 12th season in hockey and his first with the Black Hawks.

CARDINALS JUBILANT OVER WIN

Dizzy Dean Claims He Had An Off Day When Congratulations Are Showered.

(By Charles Dunkley, Associated Press Sports Writer)
(A. P. By Guardian's Special Wire)
DETROIT, Oct. 3.—Back in the Cardinals' dressing room after today's winning World Series start against Detroit, the long, lissajointed Dizzy Dean ambled over to his locker to pull off his shoes. Frankie Frisch, manager of the Cards, hustled over to warmly shake his hand. The other players immediately followed.

Dean begged a cigarette from one of the gentlemen of the press before he amazed them with the statement that he had pitched a "terrible game."

"Boys," he said between puffs, "I'm telling you the truth when I'm telling you I was lousy in there today. That old curve ball of mine just wouldn't take off, it wouldn't go up or down and as a result I had to pitch my head off. Ain't that a fact? Didn't I have those guys down to three-and-two lots of times?"

Manager Frisch took the victory calmly. He had praise for the freshmen of the team—first baseman Collins, catcher Delancey and Joe Medwick, the outfielder batting hero of the day with three singles and a home run.

"Delancey really caught a whale of a game," Frisch boasted. "He looked like a sweetheart in there." Frisch announced that Wild Bill Hallahan would be his starting pitcher tomorrow. He refused to make any reference to the five blunders the Tigers made in the first three innings when the Cardinals scored three runs.

Gloom Thick Over in the Tigers dressing room just across the hall from the Cardinals, the gloom was as thick as pea-soup. Manager Mickey Cochrane went to the showers before he would discuss the game. Backed up to his locker was Del Baker, Tiger coach, muttering over and over: "It takes four games to win a World Series, boys."

Cochrane, while disappointed in losing, wasn't completely downcast. "It's gone," he said. "Tomorrow's another day and I'll shoot Rowe at them. Crowder pitched a swell game while he was in there. It wasn't his fault that he lost. If any players had got by the jitters in those first two or three innings they would have caused plenty of if I ever saw one. It was a fast ball low and outside."

World Series Sidelights

By Paul Mickelson, Associated Press Sports Writer (By Guardian's Special Wire)
DETROIT, Oct. 3.—It was a typical football day—cold and raw and the Tigers fumbled and booted like a team of excited yearlings, making five errors in 2 1-3 innings. They simply handed the game to the Cards and the Cards took it like they did the National League pennant.

Dizzy Dean posed happily with Al Schacht, the Washington comedian, enveloped in a big Tiger skin, before the battle began and then went out to collect the big one himself with the aid of "Ducky Wacky" Medwick.

The bleary-eyed bleacherites, most of whom had stood at the gates overnight, boomed lustily when it was announced the game was being held up to enable thousands of reserve seat ticket-holders to get in. The game was delayed for 18 minutes and how the bleacherites shouted in derision!

Celebrities were numerous, but the great Dizzy kept the cameras trained on himself. Kenesaw Mountain Landis, high mogul of baseball, sat near the Cardinal dugout. Babe Ruth, sad and solemn, looked on from the press box.

Rogers Hornsby, who led the Cardinals to their thrilling world series conquest in '26, joined the Tiger board of strategy. The rajah, now manager of St. Louis Browns, was closeted with the Tigers for several hours, diagnosing every Cardinal player and pitcher for Mickey and his men. But even the rajah couldn't master mind against errors.

Al Schacht wowed 'em with his antics. In practice he pushed Owen off third and caught relays standing, sitting and falling. He also directed the 30-piece band for a few numbers.

Alvin Crowder deserted by his devious, diagnosing every Cardinal of all when he stepped up to bat in the third inning. Dizzy was booted in the same inning when he shot two "dusters" at Cochrane in succession. Dizzy almost injured the Tiger battery, too, when his bat slipped out of his hand and travelled 30 feet.

Greenberg's homer was the longest drive of the day, sailing halfway up to the newly constructed bleachers in left centre-field.

ADD TO TERROR (By The Canadian Press)
LAHORE, India, Oct. 3.—Venomous snakes added to the terror of villagers in recent Punjab floods. In one village five persons died of snake-bite in one day.

Someone Inquired what he thought of the Cardinals. "They all look good when they win," Cochrane snapped. "Dean was bad today, huh? Well he had enough to beat us. That ball that Medwick hit was a perfect pitch. I'd give it to you if I ever saw one. It was a fast ball low and outside."

ADVANCE TO MARITIME PLAYDOWNS

Eliminate Borden Nationals In Hard Fought Game By a Score of 9 to 5.

In one of the greatest softball struggles to be waged on a local diamond, the 8th Battery, City League champions, yesterday won the Provincial title by defeating the Borden Nationals 9-to-5, thus advancing to the Maritime playdowns. Borden won the first game of the series 8-7, but the Battery boys tied it up by taking the second hit on Monday 10-3, making necessary the third game.

It was a pitchers' battle all through with Goes and Stull on the mound, but while the 8th Battery played almost errorless ball, the Nationals proved unsteady and finally broke in the eighth inning to allow the locals six runs to put the game on ice.

It was Hal Gaudet, husky third baseman, who headed the Battery attack by pounding out two homers which almost blasted Stull from his citadel, and accounted for four of his team's nine runs. Gordon Stewart, playing right field for the locals, played almost as brilliantly defensively as Gaudet played offensively, handling no fewer than five drives to his lane.

L. McAleer and B. McAleer were the Borden standouts with the former snaring a hard drive over second, while his younger brother drove in three runs in a short-lived eighth inning uprising.
