Judge Stewart Adresses Gyro

At the weekly supper of the Gyro Club, which was held last Monday evening, His Honour Judge Stewart delivered the following splendid address:

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen:

Permit me to take advantage of this opportunity to heartily congratulate the business and professional young men of the City upon the successful establishment in Charlottetown of such a strong, up-to-date and worthy organization as your Gyro Club has proved itself to be.

From the gay enthusiasm and joyous good-will which I have already seen manifested, I would judge that such a society as yours offers to its members many advantages. You assemble here at regular intervals leaving behind you the cares, anxieties and distractions of your several occupations, in order to enjoy one with another the fruits of fellowship and good cheer. You do not, I take it, come to sit around this hospitable board each Monday evening, merely for the purpose of doing justice to those things that are necessary to invigorate and renew your bodily structures. I assume you agree that the soul needs to be fed as well as the body; the imagination to be clothed as well as the back; and the affections and aspirations to get a little occasional exercise. Your meetings, I doubt not, will furnish a stimulus to your minds, a spur to your affections and an incentive to the formation of lasting friendships.

True friendship let me impress upon you, is a noble and virtuous attachment, springing from a pure source; no mere temporary attachment, springing from interest, which can change in a moment. You have here an opportunity to impart and to receive knowledge, and to acquire a culture that will serve you well in every turn, no matter what your business or profession may be. I therefore felicitate you on your opportunities. You are, for the most part, a body of young men setting out upon your life's work; you are at the right age to seize upon and make the best of your opportunities. You do well to come as regularly as you can to this table of fraternity and good-will, always remembering that

BRONCHITIS?

WELCOME RELIEF!

Just think of it—a remedy that can be carried with the very air you breathe to the seat of bronchial or catarrhal inflammation. Catarrhosis is truly a wonderful remedy. In many lands it is showing grand results to sufferers from colds, catarrh, throat weakness, asthma and bronchitis. There is no sufferer from a grippy cold or any winter ill, that won't find quick relief in Catarrhosis, which is employed by physicians, ministers, lawyers and public men. Large size lasts two months and costs $1.00 and is guaranteed; small size 50c. At all druggists and grocers.

the table is ever the best centre of friendships.

A clever writer, in dealing with the spirit and disposition befitting comrades, once said "Fellowship is life and the want of fellowship is death; fellowship is heaven, and the want of fellowship is hell."

Do not permit, my friends, your ardour to be in the least cooled. If you carry out in your lives the ideals which membership in your society has placed before you, you will be able to avoid the most of the death of this world and the hell of the next.

Past Conditions

Let me now say a few words to you on the past and prospective conditions as contrasted with existing ones. As to the former, I will confine myself to a time with which I am well conversant, namely that immediately preceding the Island becoming a Province of the Dominion of Canada—early fifty six years ago. And first as to Charlottetown. It had not at that time any macadamized or paved streets; neither had it any sidewalks except poorly laid plank ones on portions of Queen's Square and Queen Street. With this exception, all of the streets and the rest of the side walks were a make up of Island red clay which in the fall and spring kept the boots of pedestrians thickly painted with liberal supplies of Island mud. The city did not then possess either a stone crusher, a steam roller, or a road machine. It had a superintendent of streets, who once a year, usually in May or early June, with a small gang of men, armed with shovels and hoes began the work of filling up and leveling off the holes in the streets with such supply of clay as the unopened condition of the streets afforded.

It was only a short time previous to the time of which I am speaking that the whole supply of city water was taken from pumps located in different parts of the town. The water so furnished became so impure by the percolation from a not too cleanly kept surface that typhoid fever, resulting in many deaths became a not infrequent occurrence.

About the year 1870, a large spring just off the Malpeque road at Spring Park was utilized for drinking and cooking purposes. Several owners of water carts were licensed to engage on the business of supplying this water at the price of a cent a bucket. This was the sole pure water dependence of citizens, until the water works act of 1887 became law, when action was taken, and the present bountiful supply of pure water soon became available. It is not, however, until about fifteen years thereafter that a complete and up-to-date sewerage system was established.

All you young men may well congratulate yourselves that you live in a time that permits you to escape the many discomforts and annoyances experienced by your forbears.

Transportation Services

Without further reference to Charlottetown's affairs, let me now call your attention to the inadequate transportation service then existing, with a word or two as to the Island banks. There was not then on the Island one mile of railroad. The steam Navigation Company owned two side wheel wooden steamers for the carriage of mails and passengers. Mails to the neighboring colonies and the United States went out every alternate day. I am now referring entirely to the service during the summer months of present ones. That there has months. Mails to Newfoundland, the West Indies and to Great Britain were only forwarded once a fortnight. The schedule for the two Island steamers was as follows: One of them (the St. Lawrence) left the wharf every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday at 6 o'clock for Point du Chene calling on the way at Summerside, and connecting at Point du Chene with the train for St. John, returning on Wednesdays, Fridays and Mondays with passengers and mail to Charlottetown via Summerside.

The other steamer, named the "Princess of Wales," left Charlottetown at five o'clock on Tuesday morning, going to Port Hawkesbury, Cape Breton thence to Pictou, connecting with the train for Halifax and returning on Wednesday via Port Hawkesbury to Charlottetown. This steamer at the same hour left Charlottetown on Thursday morning, calling at Port Hood, Cape Breton, thence to Pictou, returning on Friday via Port Hood. At the same hour she left Charlottetown, calling at Georgetown on Saturday morning, thence to Pictou, making a similar connection, returning on the following Monday via Georgetown to Charlottetown. At that time there was no Intercolonial railway, except between Halifax and St. John.

Inland Mail Service

As to the inland mail service all over the Island, it can be stated that it only provided for such service two days a week, with the exception of two routes, one between Charlottetown and Summerside and the other between Charlottetown and Georgetown, where a daily horse drawn mail coach operated.

As to the five winter months mail and passenger service, it is correct to say that the only service for mails and passengers consisted of a very inadequate, poorly equipped and somewhat dangerous ice boat service, operated between Cape Traverse and Tormentine. The distance between Cape Traverse and any part of the Island could only be made by horse and sleigh, and when the mails and passengers reached Tormentine the same means of conveyance had to be utilized for a distance of forty miles in order to reach a railway connection at Sackville. This winter service, both external and internal owing to the storms that frequently prevailed, was of a very uncertain character.

The Banking Houses

The Island then was provided with five banking houses, three in Charlottetown, one in Summerside and one at Rustico, the latter called the Farmers' Bank of Rustico. None of the Charlottetown Banks had a large capitalization than $100,000.00 neither had they any reserves. Discounts could only be made two days a week, and the hours for business would be considered in this day somewhat restricted. When the hour for dinner arrived, the whole staff fled out, the manager locking the door, thus entirely terminating banking business for an hour. The Summerside bank followed the same custom. As to the Bank of Rustico, if a customer desired to get his note discounted, the most likely place to find the cashier in the Summer season would be hoeing potatoes on his farm. It is difficult to ascertain the amount of paid up capital of this institution, but it must have been very small. Having thus dealt with past conditions, it seems quite unnecessary to been great headway made is quite evident to all. What of the next century? Let me as an answer to this question refer to a scene depicted in a late number of London Punch. Reference was made to vast sums being spent in the paving of England's roads, so as to render them capable of supporting the heaviest kind of traffic. The page on which this was written showed three distinct scenes. The first represented a road over sixty feet wide, solidly paved on which moved row after row of motor cars, five abreast, with the rows close together, and reaching back as far as the eye could see. The second scene pictured the same road absolutely bare of everything, whether in the form of human, animal, or vehicle, except one single apparently dejected old man driving before him a wheelbarrow, and above this as a picture of the heavens, crowded with a multitude of aeroplanes in active operation.

The Future

I will now call your attention to an article which the Earl of Birkenhead recently contributed to an American publication. He is one of the ablest jurists and most brilliant statesmen that ever in the history of England presided in a court of justice, or was entrusted by his sovereign with a department of state. From his great knowledge and experience, he gives an extraordinary forecast of the changes which the coming century will bring about.

He sets forth that our means of travel, our sources of wealth, our medicine, and our very ideas will change as drastically in the next century as they did in the course of the last. He says that the people living in the year 2029, looking back on the year 1929 will consider it as primitive and quaint as the year 1829 seems to the people of the present day. Referring to the fact that one pound of coal can only be made to yield one horsepower for one hour, he asserts that there is locked up in the atoms that constitute a pound of water, ten million horsepower hours. He also avers that there is enough combined power in the quantity of water displaced by a large Atlantic liner, if released and properly applied, to lift the whole of Ireland from its present moorings, and carry it out for submergence in the depths of the Atlantic ocean. With such enormous and immeasurable potential power all about us, he even fears that some daring investigator may some day start an atomic catastrophe that shall blow up the whole universe. He appears to be fully satisfied that we will have, in the coming century cheap atomic power on a cosmic scale. There will be no farming done, as it is carried on at the present day. An offspring will be bred by laboratory methods. He visions the abolition of epidemic diseases as being fairly certain, as well as the discovery of cures for tuberculosis and cancer. Complete and prolonged local anaesthesia, he says will become practicable, so that not only will operations be painless, but the patient will feel no pain afterwards as a result of them. With this will come completely painless childbirth. Biologists, he holds, will then have learned the secrets of the living chemistry of the human body, and rejuvenation will only be an ordinary well recognized matter of a few injections. Production will become so cheap, and wealth will accumulate to such an extent, that men will only work as machine minders one or two hours a day. Doubtless many of these anticipations will be realized; yours, not mine, may be the great pleasure of seeing them fulfilled.
