It's Midsummer But Old London Talks Woollies

AUSTRALIA POINTS TO FINENESS OF HER PRODUCTS—FASHIONS BRIGHT WITH COLOR AT POPULAR ASCOT.

(By MOLLIE MCGEE
Canadian Press Correspondent)

LONDON, June 27—(CP)—Taking the tickle out of wool is occupying some of the most ingenious minds in England and Australia, Stanley M. Bruce, high commissioner for Australia, told a smart audience attending a wool fashion show in London during Ascot race week. He added this was absolutely necessary if women were to be made wool-conscious—a remark that seemed slightly contradictory.

The show—organized in conjunction with several of London's foremost dressmaking houses—present not only daytime and evening wear, but even filmy underthings so fine they could not have held anything as plebeian as a tickle.

The main fashion show in England was of course at Ascot. It is usual or supposedly correct for the women attending to wear a different dress on each day, but a resume of the styles seen at the opening gives an idea of what is now considered the latest and the smartest.

The Duchess of Kent wore the black and white material she had chosen at Derby House, with silver fox furs—though the weather was sunny and warm—and a high Edwardian hat rather like a hussar's bushy, ornamented with a single upstanding ostrich plume and set high on an upswept coiffure. It was remarked she recalled Queen Alexandra. The Princess Royal also wore ostrich plumes on her shady hat and a print in pastel shades. The Duchess of Gloucester was in pink.

Short Dress Favored

Long sweeping dresses were in the minority, most skirts went but two or three inches below the knee. Prints were the first favorites and bright jackets worn with printed dresses were the outstanding young fashion. Color contrasts were also in high favor. A pale blue frock was worn with purple gloves, suede shoes to match, a purple hat and purple handbag, a bright salmon sash hat and shoes went with the sapphire blue gown and wine-colored shoes, gloves and hat accompanied a raspberry pink outfit.

There were of course, the eccentrics. Two women wore poke bonnets and long lace dresses and another's hat consisted of a large red rose surrounded by leaves of fine black lace and held just above her forehead with a band of black lace. These sights added a zip of nonsense to what is considered to have been the smartest Ascot for many years.

More Sleep Needed

Mrs. B.M. Biggs of London moved a resolution at a conference of the National Association of Head Teachers at Nottingham asking the ministry of health to inaugurate a "more sleep for children" campaign. She said the rush of modern life and the lack of parental control were the cause of pale-faced children.

In her school of 300 children more than 200 lived in flats and every family in the flats had a radio, she said. A mother had told her that when a child went to bed she could hear five radios going at the same time. In the squares outside elder children played on roller skates and scooters until nearly midnight.

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

The regular monthly meeting of the Cornwell York Point W. I. met at the home of Mrs. C. D. McLean, Clyde River for their June meeting with the President, Mrs. L. H Drake in the chair. Eighteen members and several visitors were present.

The meeting opened by singing It's a good time to get Acquainted, followed by Creed, minutes, roll call.

The reports of committees were then given and new committees appointed, namely Entertainment committee—Mrs. Fulton Sanderson, Mrs. Victor McPhail, Mrs. Muriel Godfrey. Correspondence consisted of a letter from the Women's Institute branch dealing with the annual convention.

Plans for an ice cream social to be held in the near future were discussed and decided.

A splendid paper on Improving our Institute was read by Mrs. Hazen Howard. Roll call for next meeting "Household Hints."

A paper on "How to make our Institute more interesting," is been prepared by one of our mmebers for July meeting

A cordial invitation is extended to our Sister Institute "North River" to meet with us at our next meeting on July 4th at three o'clock in the afternoon at the home of Mrs. William White, York Point, to celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary.

At this meeting Mrs. Alex McNevin and Mrs. Harold Heartz from Royalty Institute were present. The delegates to the convention were appointed namely, Mrs. Fulton Sanderson, Mrs. C. D. McLean. Substitues, Mrs. Wesley Bell, Mrs. Norman McFadyen.

Money for School prizes were left in charge of School Committee. Meeting closed.

Lunch was served by Mrs. McLean and committees in charge and a social half hour spent in conversation

Big Battleships Held Unjustified

(A. P. by Guardian's Special Wire)

WASHINGTON, June 26—President Roosevelt's decision against construction by the United States at this time of battleships larger than 35,000 tons suggests that confirmation still is lacking Japan is building super-warcraft.

Reports Japan had started or was planning vessels of 45,000 tons prompted Congress to give the President discretionary authority to match them. The provision was put into the 1938 fleet expansion bill.

Informed persons said today Mr. Roosevelt had decided the immediate international situation would not justify the United States in expanding the size and power of any of the four new capital ships for which Congress voted initial funds.

Care Needed.

"They Gave Him A Gun" Now At Prince Edward

Spencer Tracy demonstrates his phenomenal ability for the fourth successive venture in "They Gave him a Gun," which opened at the Prince Edward Theatre yesterday.

The film has Tracy, Gladys George and Franchot Tone in the principal roles.

The story deals with two men and a woman. Tracy is a circus barker who enlists in the regulars. Tone is a small-twon clerk who finds himself in the army and up in the front lines. A gun gives him courage. Gladys George is a Red Cross nurse.

When Tracy is reported missing, she marries Tone, out of pity. Tracy escapes from an enemy prison camp and the trio meets again in civil life, with the war ended. Familiar now with the use of a gun, the weakling has become a gangster. Tracy tries to save him but fails. A police bullet gets in ahead of him

As a story and a picture to reflect the evils of war and its aftermath, "They Gave Him a Gun" is a powerful medium. But it is more than that. It affords Tracy and his colleagues an opportunity for first rate artistry, which none of them has overlooked.

The audience at the Prince Edward Theatre was obviously impressed. The film is a moving demonstration of the new screen technique.

DESCUSSION ON F. C. A. ACT IN SENATE

The following excerpts are from Hansard report of the Senate debates, June 21, on the subject of a massage from the House of Commons disagreeing to an amendment made by the Senate to Bill 25, an Act to amend the Farmers' Creditors' Arrangement Act, 1934. Senate Hughes was preceded in his remarks by Senators Meighen Casgrain, Horner, Farris and Calder:

Hon. J. J. Hughes: Honourable senators, I am one of those who four years ago voted to bring into existence the Farmers' Creditors Arrangement Act, and a few days ago I voted for the amendment we are now considering. So I want to make my position clear.

The fact that this Bill has been returned from the other House, the Government declining to accept the amendment made by the Senate, is proof to my mind that the Minister in whose department the Farmers' Creditors Arangement Act is administered wishes to have the power to terminate it when and where he thinks such action should be taken. It is a fairly heavy responsibility for the Minister. The Senate, by its discussion of the measure and its amendment to the Bill, expressed its desire to share this responsibility with him. It is quite evident, however, that he thinks better results will be obtained if the Governor in Council is given power to act entirely on his own initiative. Possibly the Minister is right. In these circumstances it seems to me to be the duty of the Senate to accede to the wishes of the Government and the other House by agreeing to the Governor in Council being given that power.

But this does not prevent us from discussing the matter here and now. In fact, to my mind, it increases the duties of members of this House to give the Minister all the information they can in regard to the working of the Act in every part of the country, which information, I feel sure, he will welcome, because when he told the other House he could not accept the Senate amendment he asked the members here to give him their opinions freely. I shall try to comply with that request.

In my opinion it is practically impossible to get satisfactory results in the provinces unless the men administering the Act there are capable, honest and free from class prejudices. It is equally impossible to expect satisfactory results in Canada as a whole unless the director and his staff in Ottawa are also honest, capable and free from class prejudices.

The reports of the operation of the Act, prepared by the head office here and submitted to Parliament, show the expenditures in the several provinces. I have read from those reports and put some of the expenditures on Hansard. If the members of this House, the members of the other House, and the Government, think these expenditures are all right, I have only this to say on that phase of the subject at present. When the director in Ottawa was giving evidence before our Banking and Commerce Committee, I asked him if he ever found it necessary to reduce any of the expenditure accounts he received, and he said yes, and that by the reductions he had saved the treasury large sums of money. Then I asked him if he had ever found it necessary to increase expenditure accounts he had received, and he answered in the affirmative. These answers told me much, but I do not think they were equally revealing to all the other members of the committee.

Hon. Mr. MacArthur: Hear, hear.

Hon. Mr. Hughes: Now, with regard to the class prejudices of the officials administering this Act — of which overwhelming evidence is supplied by the officials themselves —I must take up the memorandum read by the honourable leader of the Senate (Hon. Mr. Dandurand) on the 25th ultimo. I shall read only the short part referring to Prince Edward Island. Here it is:

"2. Now as to Prince Edward Island. The debt situation of farmers in Prince Edward differs from that in almost every other province, in that the great proportion of these farmers' debts is to local merchants, who have taken mortages on the farmers' property. Many of these mortgages have been in existence for several generations, the farmer turning his produce over to the merchants, who, in turn, sold him his supplies. These merchants are violently opposed to any change in an arrangement which, for many generations, has been extremely satisfactory to themselves, but not so satisfactory to the farmer.

"Many cases of hardship have been reported in this connection. The following are two sample cases:"

I should like to direct the attention of honourable members to the two "sample cases." Here they are:

"The creditor has been charging his debtors 10 per cent interest on his bills, taking cattle, grain or other produce, whether the debtor farmer could spare it or not, and is reported to have allowed these farmers only one-half of the value of such stock and produce as a credit on his bill."

That is "some" statement. Now, case No. 2:

"A woman owned a fair farm and provided a living for her son, his wife and a family of ten children. She owed a mortgage of $650 at 7 per cent interest, and with $32 interest only due, the mortgagee instituted foreclosure proceedings."

"These cases were adjusted by the Prince Edward Island board of review, to the dissatisfaction of the creditors."

Now I have some comment to make. Here we have sweeping charges made against the merchants of Prince Edward Island as a class.

Hon. Mr. Murdock: I rise to a point of order. Everything we are now hearing has been presented before and is on the record. The point before us now is the message from the House of Commons. It is not a question of the merits or demerits of the measure generally.

Some Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Hon. Mr. MacArthur: Honourable senators, this has not been before the Senate before. This came out in committee, and the majority of honourable members did not hear it.

Hon. Mr. Murdock: I still respectfully suggest that it will be found on Hansard. If not, I am greatly mistaken.

Hon. Mr. MacArthur: Go ahead.

The Hon. the Speaker: A point of order has been raised by the honourable senator from Parkdale (Hon. Mr. Murdock). I think the opinion of the House would be that the honourable genlteman (Hon Mr. Hughes) should confine his remarks more closely to the question under discussion, namely, whether or not the Senate shall insist on its second amendment.

Hon. Mr. Hughes: I know that some honourable senators have not read the reports which have been submitted to this House and I know that some of them were not present when this matter was discussed before.

Hon. Mr. McMeans: The honourable senator has his speech in writing. May I suggest that he put it on Hansard?

Hon. Mr. Hughes: I ask honourable members whether they will hear it. I am nearly through. I want to make some comments on the slanderous statements made by officials administering this Act, and officials of the Government respecting the merchants of Prince Edward Island as a class.

Right Hon. Mr. Meighen: On the point of order: I do not wish either to encourage or to discourage my honourable friend, but I do not see how he can discuss the way in which the Senate should deal with the amendment unless he discusses the merits of the Act.

Hon. Mr. Murdock: There is much that I do not know about the Bill, but I should like to ask the right honourable leader opposite (Right Hon. Mr. Meighen) or the leader on this side (Hon. Mr. Dandurand)—

Right Hon. Mr. Meighen: That is better.

Hon. Mr. Murdock:—as to the propriety of usurping the prerogatives of constitutional government as vested in the Governor in Council. To me that seems the important question that is involved here right now. This Bill when it came to us—

Hon. Mr. Hughes: I am addressing the House, and I do not want any other—

Some Hon. Senators: Oh, oh.

Hon. Mr. Hughes: I rise to a point of order.

Right Hon. Mr. Meighen: Go ahead.

Hon. Mr. Hughes: I say again, here we have sweeping charges made against the merchants of Prince Edward Island as a class against their characters and business methods. But in one of the specific cases mentioned the creditor is not a merchant at all, and never has been. He is a brother farmer, and in a class by himself; yet the director of this organization put him down as a merchant, and said it was only a "sample case" of the way in which the farmers in the province had been treated by the merchants as a class. I do not know the creditor in the other case, but in all probability the same remarks will apply. And I feel sure these men are not typical of any class on Prince Edward Island, yet the director, Mr. Gordon, declared they were but "sample cases" of merchants.

The memorandum prepared by the director and read by the leader of the Senate, states that the merchants are violently opposed to the operations of the Act, or to any change. The long, rambling, innocuous speech prepared by the director, and delivered by the senator from Queen's (Hon. Mr. Sinclair) on the 9th instant, states that the debtors, the creditors and everybody else on Prince Edward Island are well pleased with the Act and its administration. It is hard to reconcile, this idea, adopted by the senator from Queen's, with the declaration that he endorsed the slanderous attack made by the director on the merchants of the province

The fact of the matter is that these men do not comprehend what they are writing and saying. They are so angered that any person should disturb them at the feast which they prepared for themselves and their friends, at the public expense, that they strike out wildly on all sides, and in their rage wound even themselves. At first they apparently thought it would be a great thing to malign, traduce and slander the merchants of Prince Edward Island, and that it would be a crowning achievement to get the leader of the Senate to read the document and place it on the records of Parliament. They never thought it would become such a boomerang. Transgressors seldom provide for all the avenues of escape.

When Alexander Mackenzie was Prime Minister of Canada he declared that he had to rest on his arms night and day to protect the treasury. If he lived in this day and generation he would, I think, have to employ an army to do that work; and even then the raiders would outwit him. Some ten or twelve years ago a customs scandal, with headquarters at Montreal and ramifications in many other places, which shocked the country, was unearthed. I am afraid that history, in principle, if not in volume, is repeating itself. Here I think of the words of Robert Burns:

But och mankind are unco weak,
And little to be trusted.
If self the wavering balance shake,
'Tis rarely right adjusted.

I am inclined to give the Minister the responsibility and the power he wishes. We shall have to wait but a few months, and I am inclined to watch results. Perhaps they will be better than some of us expect. I am going to vote that the responsibility be given to the Minister.

Hon. Mr. Dandurand: "Honourable senators, I may state that the House of Commons has not taken exception to our amendment on the score that it was unconstitutionor that it invaded the rights of the executive. I have yet to learn that Parliament could invade the rights of the executive, since the executive is governed by the laws that Parliament itself passes.

This message, although it expresses the unanimous opinion of the House of Commons that the Senate should not insist upon its amendment, is not quite satisfactory to me, because of the reason given namely

"The adoption of the said amendment would impose hardship on certain provinces."

Now, we are facing two opposing opinions: that of two members from Saskatchewan, who say we should let the Act come to an end on the 1st of January as far as Saskatchewan is concerned; and that of the House of Commons, which says that to do so would impose a hardship in certain provinces. I am sorry the House of Commons did not indicate the provinces. I have just run through the discussion which took place in the House of Commons, and I find that there were some representations from British Columbia. I do not know but that there were some from Manitoba also. It would have been far more satisfactory to the Senate to know in what provinces the amendment would work hardship. Yet, inasmuch as the House of Commons has asked that this amendment be not insisted upon, I have placed a motion before the House, and I shall naturally be satisfied with the decision of the Senate.

Hon. Mr. Griesbach: Question!

The Hon. the Sueaker: The question, honourable senators, is on the motion of Hon. Senator Dandurand seconded by Right Hon. Senator Graham that the Senate do not insist on its second amendment to Bill 25, and Act to amend the Farmers' Creditors Arrangement Act, 1934.

Hon. Mr. MacArthur: Honourable senators, I understand that the special committee on railway matters is desirous of meeting. If I were to speak now, I might delay that meeting. With your permission, therefore, I would move the adjournment of the debate.

Some hon. Senators: No, no.

Hon. Mr Marshall: Make your speech now.

Hon. Mr. MacArthur: No. You want to meet, do you not?

Some Hon. Senators: Question!

Hon. Mr. MacArthur: Do you not want to go to committee?

Hon. Mr. Dandurand.

Hon. Mr. Dandurand: I think we should send the Bill back to the Commons to-day.

Some Hon. Senators: Question!

The Hon. the Speaker: Hon. Senator MacArthur moves, seconded by Hon. Senator Hughes—

Right Hon. Mr. Meighen: He cannot second the motion, I am afraid: he has already spoken.

The Hon. the Spekar: Seconded by—

Hon. Mr. MacArthur: The honourable senator from Cardigan (Hon. John A. Macdonald).

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it your pleasure to adopt the motion for the adjournment of the debate?

The motion of Hon. Mr. MacArthur was negatived.

The Hon. the Speaker: The question now, honourable senators, is on the motion of Hon. Senator Dandurand, seconded by Right Hon. Senator Graham, that the Senate do not insist on the second amendment to Bill 25. Is it your pleasure to adopt the motion?

The motion of Hon. Mr. Dandurand was negatived.

The Hon. the Speaker: Will some honourable member now move that a message be sent to the House of Commons accordingly?

Right Hon. Mr. Meighen: I think that motion follows from the negative vote. I think all that is necessary now is that a message be sent to the House of Commons to acquaint that House that the Senate insists upon its amendment. I will so move.

Hon. Mr. Dandurand: I think reasons must be given.

Right Hon. Mr. Meighen: If reasons have to be given, I do not know that I should undertake to express them now. I do not see why reasons are always necessary. The reason in this case is obvious —simply that the clause is meritorious.

Right Hon. Mr. Graham: Why?

Be sure to tune in tonight.

You would have to say why.

Right Hon. Mr. Meighen: Because the Act should go out of effect in all provinces except Saskatchewan and Alberta on the first of January next. I know of no rule which compels us to give a reason for insisting. However, I would put our reason this way: that in the view of this House there is no further necessity for the Act in any of the provinces except Saskatchewan and Alberta after the 31st of December, 1938.

Hon. Creelman MacArthur: Honourable senators, it seems to me there will likely be a terrible state of confusion. If a message goes back to the Commons in that form the Bill may be dropped altogether, and in that case the Governor in Council would not have the prerogative or right to take an action and we should be worse off than we were before.

I know I am not in order, but nobody has spoken about the first amendment today.

Hon. Mr. Dandurand: It has been approved.

Hon. Mr. MacArthur: I know that, but nobody has said why it was approved. Why has there been this omission? From the very start this Bill has been ambiguous and confusing. Even after it had passed through criticism in the other House, it was in such a form when it reached us that our Law Clerk had to point out an amendment which was necessary in order to make it constitutional. That fact has not been touched upon here today.

Now, if the Bill is dropped altogther, where will Prince Edward Island be? We shall be in a state of confusion. There will be many more jobs handed out to political appointees, there will be a continuation of inefficiency and of disadvantage to creditors, not only in Prince Edward Island, but all over Canada. It seems to me the Senate has a duty to perform, and that is to try to arrange a conference with the other House. I do not know why we cannot have one.

Hon. Mr. Copp: That is what will likely follow.

Hon. Mr. MacArthur: No, it is not. The honourable senator from Cardigan (Hon. Mr Macdonald) had correspondence with the director of this Act, who says that certain things were said and done, and who challenges us to have an investigation and prove our contentions in this House. Nothing would please us better than to have an investigation. I wanted to speak tomorrow, but honourable members are tired and sick of hearing about Prince Edward Island and would not give me any assistance. However, I want to make it plain that we are not going to stand for this Act much longer in Prince Edward Island.

The Hon. the Speaker: The question before the House is the motion by Right Hon. Senator Meighen, seconded by Hon. Senator Griesbach, that a message be sent to the House of Commons informing that House that the Senate does insist upon its second amendment to Bill 25, an Act to amend The Farmers' Creditors Arrangement Act, for the following reason: That there is no further necessity for the Act in any of the other provinces after the 31st of December, 1938.

The motion was agreed to.

PISQUID WEST W. I.

The June meeting of the Pisquid West Women's Institute was held at the home of Miss Ida Handrahan with nine members and three visitors present. Meeting opened by singing the Institute Carol, followed by Creed in unsion.

Minutes of last meeting were read and approved. Reports from the different committees were heard and some reappointed for next month. All correspondence was read at meeting.

A discussion took place regarding District Convention to be held at Mt. Stewart Hall on July 4th As a number on the programme for the Convention it was decided to have a reading. Mrs. James Hughes Miss Ida Handrahan were appointed delegates to attend the convention in Charlottetown. It was also decided to hold an ice cream festival and dance. Roll call for July meeting is a riddle Due to the long discussion the programme was left until July meeting. A lunch was served by the hostess assisted by the Misses Ida and Mary Handrahan and Miss Erma Jay.

A pleasant hour was spent listening to Victrola Sections which were enjoyed by all. Meeting closed by singing God Save the King.

Sir Harry Luke New Governor Of Fiji

(C. P. by Guardian's Special Wire)

LONDON, June 26—Appointment of Sir Harry Luke, Lieutenant-Governor of Malta since 1930, as Governor of Fiji was announced tonight by the Colonial Office. He will succeed Sir Arthur Richards who recently was appointed Captain-General and Governor-in-Chief of Jamaica.

Sir Harry, 54, has been associated with the civil service for 30 years. A son of the late J. H Luke of London, he was educated at Eton and Trinity College, Oxford. His first civil service position was private secretary and A. D. C. to the Governor of Sierra Leone from 1908-11.

Now He Knows

Gumm—"Did you know any reliable rule for estimating the cost of living."

Bovle—" Yes. Take your income —whatever that may be—and add 10 per cent."

Getting Ready

Wife—"What do you think baby is thinking about?"

Brute—"I suppose he's thinking what to say about tonight."
