The Charlottetown Business College was established in 1873. L. B. Miller received the Principalship in 1880, which position he still holds. During that long period hundreds of students have been prepared for commercial work, and it is doubtful if there is an institution in Canada that shows a greater percentage of successful students. Principal Miller holds an enviable record, not only as a successful teacher and manager, but he is an authority in his profession and never fails to use his high standing to advance the interests of his students while attending the College, and afterwards in getting them employment. Business men have confidence in his recommendation, for you must be about right to get it. No young man or woman makes a mistake in taking a course under his tuition.
