"RULING PASSION STRONG IN DEATH."—Even in its death throes the Bell Government maintains its reputation for chasing the illegitimate dollar. It sued in the County Court one of its opponents for income tax and obtained judgment THE DAY AFTER THE TAX WAS PAID. Not satisfied with this the Bell Government sent peremptory intimation two days later that unless the amount was paid within a week an execution would be issued. The defendant waits calmly for the next step—the demise of the bungling Bell Government.

VISITED H. M. C. S. PATRIOT.—Yesterday forenoon Mr. Frank R. Hertz and Mr. C. L. Miles on behalf of the Navy League visited Lieutenant Commander H. E. Reid of H. M. C. S. Patriot. They accompanied the Commander to Government House where the former called on His Honour, who immediately returned the call accompanied by his private Secretary, Captain Edward Palmer. His Worship the Mayor and United States Consul, Mr. Moomaw also called on Commander Reid, and their call was shortly afterwards returned. Mr. Hertz took four of the officers to the tennis courts in the afternoon. They attended Mrs. O'Donnell's dance at the Navy League last night. Mr. Hertz will take the party fishing today and if they return in time they will dine at Beach Grove Inn. In any event they will have dinner there on Saturday night. It is expected that a dance will be given to the sailors by the Navy League before they leave port. The ship will be open for inspection by the public from 2 to 6 p. m. on Saturday and Sunday, and a very cordial welcome is extended to all visitors. She is lying at the Marine Wharf during her stay.

Horse Owners Show Sportsmanship

By Henry L. Farrell.

(United Press Sports Editor.) NEW YORK, August 28.—Much of real sportsmanship was evidenced in the preliminaries leading up to and concluding the negotiations for the great international race between Papyrus, winner of the English Derby and the three-year-old thoroughbred to be selected as the best in the United States. Suggestion for such a race, that can surely be considered as a world's championship event, was based upon good sportsmanship by the American turf officials, and it was accepted in the same spirit by Benjamin Irish, owner of the British champion, and one of the most popular owners on the English track. Had the race been proposed during the regime of the super-horse, Man-o-War, it would have looked like the American sponsors of the idea were prompted by the desire to gain some prestige over the British thoroughbreds by backing a sure thing. While there are any number of good three-year-olds in training this season, there are none who compare to Man-o-War at his age, and when the colorbearer for the United States has to be selected through the means of a special trial race, it is evident that Papyrus will not be forced into the position of a gamester going against stacked cards. The thoroughbred that is selected to represent the United States will be an animal that, in opinion, more than anything else, is the best runner in this country, and the British invader will not be forced into a contest with a horse that is obviously out of its class, like Man-o-War would have been. The race will be over the full Derby distance—a mile and a half. Benjamin Irish could not have been criticized if he had taken the stand that the race should be run in England. He has a champion, and the first instinct of champion owners is to seek the best of everything—at least in professional sports. Those who consider everything from the commercial viewpoint will argue, of course, that no such a purse as $100,000 could be offered in England, and they will point out that a loser's end of $20,000 would induce any owner to take the chances. The policy of "money first and a sure thing," which rules pugilism and some other professional sports, cannot be applied, of course, to owners of the type and standing of Irish, Harry Payne Whitney, Harry F. Sinclair, R. T. Wilson, J. S. Couden and the others, who have candidates for the race. They represent as high a type of citizenship and sportsmanship as can be found in any line of American athletic activity, and no doubt they are inspired just as much by the desire to see a great race as they are by the motive to win the purse. In setting a late date for the race (October 20) the American officials have done the utmost to place the British horse under weather conditions as near as possible to that of the racing season in England. It is said that a typical late October day in this country corresponds almost exactly to the general run of weather on Derby Day in England. Atmospheric conditions, of course, will effect Papyrus, but it does not follow that he will be thrown off. The atmosphere is rarer here at that time, but while it might make it more difficult for him to run, there are as many chances that the conditions might make him run better. There is also the trans-Atlantic trip to be considered, but it is a sure thing that everything possible will be done to give him a safe passage, and perhaps he will travel with just as much comfort as a first-class passenger on the finest liner. As far as the difference between a turf track and a dirt track there may be some who will consider it slight and of little importance. But it will be important. It might produce greater speed in the British horse and it might throw him clear of his stride. Tennis players know the vast difference between a turf court and a clay court, and they know that American turf is harder than British turf and that it makes tennis balls much more active in this country. Low Tandler claims that he was terribly handicapped in his first best fight with Benny Leonard because he did not think enough to do his training with the ring floor padded. He worked on canvas-covered boards, and when he went into the ring against Leonard and found an inch of felt under his feet he said he was slowed up almost as much as if he had been in sand. Many of our great runners, champions and near-champions of the cinder track, cannot do a thing on board tracks when they compete in indoor meets, and there are others who get much more speed off a hard surface than they do on cinders. With animals, as with humans,
