Make dresses bright as new!

DIAMOND DYES are easy to use; go on smoothly and evenly; never leave a trace of that red stain which Diamond Dyes are used. Just true, even, new colors that hold their own through the hardest wear and washing. Diamond Dyes owe their superiority to the abundance of pure dyes they contain. Cost more to make. Surely, but you pay no more for them. All drug stores—18c.

Etiquette

By Roberta Lee

Q. In what manner should a woman thank a man who has given up his seat to her in a public conveyance?
A. She may nod, smile, or courteously say, "Thank you."

Household Hints

By Roberta Lee

The Old Telephone Book
Use the old telephone book for an iron smoother. The pages can be torn out as they become worn or burnt.

To Clean Bottles
To remove discolorations from the interior of a bottle, fill nearly full with buttermilk and potato parings. Let it stand for several hours, empty, and rinse thoroughly with clean hot water.

To Garnish
Watercress makes a nice garnish, for a change, in place of the more usual parsley.

Q. Should wedding invitations be sent to the bridesmaids and ushers?
A. It is courteous to do so, but not absolutely necessary.

Q. What is the first rule for a successful dinner party?
A. That all guests be very congenial.

What the Fashionable Are Wearing

Illustrated Dressmaking Lesson Furnished With Every Pattern

By Annebelle Worthington

An interesting feature of this polka-dotted crepe silk is the shawl collar that terminates in scarf end at left shoulder. It was a clever thought of the designer to detract from breath.

The hips are extremely flat. The circular skirt is beautifully shaped with rippling fullness at hem.

WHO ARE YOU?

A Byrd?

The Romance of Your Name
By RUBY HASKINS ELLIS

This name was originally spelled "Bird" and was adopted because some remote ancestor was a great hunter with falcons a prevailing custom of that day.

The Byrd family is of Norman origin and was established in England soon after William the Conqueror and his Norman knights wrested the kingdom from the Saxons.

The first bearer of the name of Byrd was Hugo le Bird, of Charleton, Chester County, England. His descendant, John Byrd, was the father of William Byrd, 1st, who was the founder of the American family of the name.

William Byrd was born in England in the year 1652. His father was a London silversmith but this calling did not attract the adventurous spirit of young William, so with his bride Mary, he departed for America, the romantic land beyond the seas. There they were to settle upon an estate left them by Mary's uncle, Captain Thomas Stege, a Virginia planter.

In 1674, near the falls of the River James, in Virginia, William Byrd established his home, and he became active in the affairs of the struggling colony, assisting in the defending the settlement against the marauding Indians. He built a large warehouse and became a planter and trader with the Indians. His shrewdness and tact with them together with his versatility laid the foundation for a business that grew into immense proportions and accumulated a fortune that was in the possession of the Byrd family for many generations.

William Byrd became interested in mining and conducted various other projects. In the affairs of the Colony, he was as prominent as in business. He was appointed High Sheriff of Henrico and was a member of the House of Burgesses, and was designated by the King a Receiver General of His Majesty's Revenues. This office he held until his death and it passed to his son, William, 2nd.

William Byrd, 2nd, also was a leader of men and was active in public life. He presided over the King's Council and was one of the founders of the City of Richmond. He married Lucy Parke, daughter of Colonel Daniel Parke, of the British Army in the Leeward Islands. Their daughter, Evelyn was a noted Virginia beauty, admired and loved at home and abroad. The name Evelyn has been handed down to member of the family in each succeeding generation.

The Byrds of Virginia have always served their native State with unflinching loyalty. Richard Evelyn Byrd, of Frederick County, served on the staff of General Corse in the Confederate Army. He married Anne Harrison daughter of Benjamin Harrison, of Brandon. Richard died in 1872. His son, William Byrd, served as colonel in the Confederate Army and was appointed adjutant general of the State of Texas. He married Jennie Rivers, of Austin Texas. Their son, Richard Evelyn Byrd, was born 1860, in Austin, and married, 1886, Elinor Bolling Flood, of Appomattox, Va. To this union were born three sons, who are the distinguished "Tom, Dick and Harry" so well known today.

"Tom" is Thomas Bolling Byrd, who served as an officer in the World War. "Dick" is Richard Evelyn Byrd, famous the world over as explorer and aviator and "Harry" is Harry Flood Byrd eminent statesman and ex-Governor of Virginia.

What Makes Matrimony Miserable

Concludes Advice on What to Avoid

TEN MISTAKES WOMEN MAKE IN MARRIAGE

(Conclusion)

The sixth mistake that women make in marriage is in not realizing that whether they make a success or a failure of their marriages depends largely upon what kind of housekeepers they are. There may be an occasional rare avis of a husband who is all for high thinking and plain living and who is more concerned with the sort of intellectual nourishment his wife feeds him on than he is in the kind of bread she makes.

Possibly Romeo could have made impassioned love to Juliet across a table on which was burnt meat and underdone potatoes and soggy pie, but the average man has more stomach than heart, and when he finds that his bride is not on speaking terms with the gas range or the vacuum cleaner, it deals his affection a solar plexus blow from which it never recovers.

The old rule for holding a husband: Feed the brute, has never been improved upon. Men grow blind to beauty. They weary of it. They become impervious to arts and graces, but they are hungry three times a day. They never cease to crave comfort nor the peace and quiet of a well-ordered, well-run, bright and cheerful home. The woman who is a first-class cook brews a spell in her pots and pans that binds a man to his own fireside, and flappers cannot prevail against it.

The seventh mistake that women make in marriage is in expecting too much of their husbands and of marriage in general. If they could only bring themselves to accept their husbands "as is," as the shipping manifests say, most of them would be happy and content and bless heaven for what they've got instead of being disgruntled and dissatisfied.

Unhappily that is not the case. Every girl builds up a fantastic figure of an impossible creature who is a sort of a composite portrait of Rudy Vallee and Mr. Ford and Job that she expects her husband to be, and when she finds out that she is married to a mere man, who is a little shy on soft talk if he is long on money-making or who isn't much good as a bill-payer if he is a glib love-maker, why, she beats upon her breast and cries out that husbands are a false alarm.

And it is the same way about marriage. The women who talk about the disillusion of marriage are those who thought it would be all billing and cooin and who quit cold when they find out that, like everything else in life, it calls for work and worry and patience and forbearance and grit and backbone.

The eighth mistake that women make in marriage is in throwing away the bait with which they caught their husbands. Every woman knows that when she was trying to lure her particular John up to the proposing point she doted herself up and put her best foot foremost; that she was so amiable that butter wouldn't melt in her mouth; that she listened to everything that John had to say with bated breath and that if he had a fault she never let him know that she perceived it.

But, alas, after marriage she drops all of these allurements. She doesn't bother to dress herself up for a mere husband; she develops nerves and temper and she spends her time calling his attention to his weaknesses and shortcomings. Now no man marries to get a critic. He gets knocks enough in the outside world and what he chiefly desires in a wife is a salve-spreader who will plaster over the bruised spots on his vanity with the healing ointment of her admiration and praise. If wives would continue to practice on their husbands the arts with which they ensnared them there would be mighty few men running around hunting up afflictions.

The ninth mistake that women make in marriage is in throwing mother in their husband's teeth. Young husbands are full of egotism and their most cherished belief is that the sweet little girls they have married regard them as oracles who are capable of settling offhand every problem on earth. Picture, then, their dismay when they find out that their brides pass lightly over their opinions and turn to mother as the infallible dispenser of wisdom. It is a blow to the bridegroom's vanity from which he never recovers and it is the real reason why mother-in-law is nearly always persona non grata to her son-in-law.

Of course, the silly little young wives do not realize the harm they are doing when they quote mother on every occasion, but nevertheless "mother says" is the fighting word in innumerable homes. "Mother says you smoke too much." "Mother says I should have a better car." "Mother says you shouldn't go out alone on an evening." "Mother says she doesn't see why you belong to so many clubs," and the fat is in the fire. Young Mr. Newlywed isn't going to have any mother-in-law back-seat chattering his household if he knows it, and so mother-in-law is first aid to another divorce.

The tenth mistake that women make in marriage and the most fatal of all is when they cease to be lovers, when they quit trying to vamp their husbands, when they put cold cream on their faces at night and turn an ear for their husbands' kisses and slump down into just being housekeepers instead of lady loves.

Women think they have a monopoly on heart hunger and that they are the only ones who ever crave sentiment and romance, but this is not true. Just as many men as women starve for affection and for a little of the glamour and the glory of the love that is still warm with passion and vibrant with thrills.

It is the warm-hearted, affectionate women who never cease telling their husbands how much they love them, how much they admire them, how much they appreciate them, who keep the home fires burning.

Which one of these ten mistakes do you make, Mrs. Woman?

BEAUTY QUESTIONS ANSWERED

Laugh Wrinkles
Dear Miss Leeds—Will you please tell me how I can get rid of laugh wrinkles? They seem to spoil my face and I will thank you a lot if you will please answer this soon. L. D.
Answer—The only way to smooth out these wrinkles is through massage and the use of a tissue cream.

Perhaps your skin is dry? If so you must use creams for cleansing and lubrication, as a dry skin always wrinkles very early. Massage gently across the wrinkles, using almond oil or any light oily cream to lubricate the massage. If the wrinkles are quite deep it would be a good idea to massage in the following lotion and leave it on overnight: Dissolve sixty-five grains of alum in six ounces of rosewater, and add slowly one and one-half ounces of milk of almonds. Mix well. Do not get any of this lotion into the eyes. Massage it gently into the skin after the nightly cleansing and leave it on all night. In the morning wash it off and before applying powder apply a fairly creamy powder base.

Superfluous Hair

Dear Miss Leeds—(1). Is the electric needle the only method for removing hair from the face?
(2). Could you tell me, please, where to find an expert operator of that method.

G. W.
Answer—(1). Yes, it is the only method which removes hair safely and permanently. (2). Any reliable physician can recommend a competent operator for you.

Puffs Under Eyes

Dear Miss Leeds—I am a young girl 17 years old and have large puffs under my eyes which make me look much older. Is there any way to remove them?
ANSWER—When a girl of your age is troubled with pouches under the eyes I am very much afraid the cause is an internal one. Are you getting the sleep you require? Are the eyes themselves weak? I feel that the best thing for you to do is to consult a physician to find out the real state of your general health.

After making the internal adjustment it would be wise to treat the pouches under the eyes also. After a thorough facial cleansing at night, put a good food cream on around the eyes, very gently, massaging lightly from the nose outward. Leave this on overnight. Wash off in the morning and apply the following astringent: One and one-half ounces rosewater, eight drops tincture of benzoin, one-half ounce toilet alcohol. I sincerely hope that you will do all you can to get this defect corrected at once for, as you say, it makes you look much older. It is also very important that you discover the cause for this condition and avoid any more serious trouble.
