FEAR FURTHER TROUBLE IN ISLAND COLONY

Jamaica Government Prepares For Further Labor Outbreaks.

KINGSTON, Jamaica, July 26—(CP Cable)—Importation of tear gas, tear gas guns, truncheons, truncheon cartridges, bombs hand grenades and other weapons by the Jamaica Government was reported tonight. The weapons are for use in case of future rioting on the Island.

Jamaica was torn with labor riots two months ago, when a strike of waterfront workers extended to city service laborers sugar plantation employees and others. Four people were officially reported killed and several others were unofficially reported to have died in the disturbances which accompanied the strikes. Much property was damaged.

Alexander Bustamente, leader of the waterfront laborers and generally accepted as the Island's labor mentor, was jailed on charges of incitement and sedition but was later freed on demand of the strikers, who made Bustamante's release a condition of their return to work. Bustamante later toured the Island in an attempt to quiet the situation.

Rumors of another general rising among the Island's laboring populace, more serious than those hitherto experienced, have cast an ominous foreboding over several official attempts to solve a situation complicated by the presence of racial factors and a surplus of workers dependent on seasonal occupations.

Figures for the 1931 census show the Island's total population as 1,050,000 of whom 20,000 were whites, 18,000 East Indians and the remainder negroes.

A message to the government from the chief of the Maroons, descendants of the Island's original native population who fled to the mountains on the English occupation of the colony in the 17th century, said in case of a serious outbreak the Maroons would side with the government.

An official communique issued last night said the government had formulated plans whereby any demonstrations in any part of the Island could be nipped in the bud.

Jumps To Death From 17th Floor Of New York Hotel

Firemen immediately covered the body with red rubber mats from the entrance of the hotel. Then word of the jump spread to crowds milling in nearby side streets, thousands rushed the hotel, breaking police lines and paralyzing traffic.

While the net was being hoisted in a last desperate effort to defeat Ward's long delayed suicide, spectators in the immediate vicinity saw him nervously lighting one cigarette after another.

"I had a rope around my waist," said a policeman who had been assigned to 17th floor rescue operations, "and I was just going out the window (in an effort to clutch Ward). He was talking to an old pal of his and didn't seem to notice much until all of a sudden he looked up and saw men coming down the ropes from the 18th. floor.

"He didn't say a word. He stepped off the ledge and missed the net by very little—maybe two or three inches."

The heavy cargo net borrowed from the United States Coast Guard was lifted on ropes outside Ward's view as the rescuers attempted to carry out their plans unknown to him. However, the operations stalled and it was believed he became aware of what was going on.

Mrs. Patrick Valentine, a friend, and patrolman Charles Glasgow and others in the hotel room talked with the man on the ledge, trying to divert his attention from the operations.

Two patrolmen equipped with rescue harness and seated in bosun's chairs were ready to jump out of 18th storey windows immediately above in efforts to grab him before he could jump.

They were coupled to a line of patrolmen roped together mountain-climber fashion to draw them back to safety—with or without Ward.

Hundreds of policemen and firemen who hour upon hour had struggled to save him whitened as he plunged and there were low mutters: "God have mercy on his soul!"

Ward's movements were calm and deliberate. First he thrust his right foot half way over the ledge, then his left stepped into space, with no outcry.

Sanitory Conditions In Poultry Flocks

(Experiental Farms News)

Hygiene and sanitation are factors as important to the poultry flock as good stock, clean water proper feed and range, states W. T. Scott, Head Poultryman, Dominion Experimental Station, Harrow Ont. Failure to maintain clean and sanitary surroundings is frequently the weak spot in poultry management. Cleanliness is essential as high mortality and reduced egg production follow disease and impaired vitality. To ensure healthy surroundings remove droppings daily and scatter an absorbent such as land plaster over the dropping boards. Renew litter before it becomes too dirty, and supply clean water in clean vessels; disease may spread rapidly through the medium of dirty water or containers.

At least once a year, with a hoe and broom, scrape and sweep clean the floors and walls of the poultry house, removing dust and cobwebs, and if running water is available use the hose at high pressure. Paint roosts and supports with a good coal-tar disinfectant, full strength, and spray frequently with a solution of the same product according to the instructions of the manufacturer. The range also demands its share of precaution. Gravel or sandy loam provide the best sanitary conditions and is easily worked with a one-horse plough. All range and yards should be ploughed and cropped yearly and seeded with a quick growing crop. Sudan grass is palatable and greatly relished. To ensure a good supply, it is well to cut Sudan when about six inches high before allowing the birds access to the yards or range. Ideal sanitary conditions are supplied with a two or three year range rotation; a hoed crop intervening in the three year rotation provides additional protection against parasites that flourish in contaminated soil.

Summer Management Of Bees

(Experimental Farms News)

The summer is the most important season to beekeepers because at this time we expect the major honey flow if all conditions are normal, states E. D. Craig, Head Beekeeper, Experimental Station, Kentville, N.S. Even if there is an abundance of nectar - secreting plants, such as the Dutch and alsike clovers, and if weather conditions are favourable during their period of bloom, a good honey crop is not assured unless each colony has a good, prolific queen and an abundance of stores during the spring, plenty of super room for storing the honey, plenty of room in the brood chamber for the queen to lay, and sufficient ventilation when hot weather prevails.

Queens that have been allowed to occupy two ten-frame full-depth supers up to the beginning of the main honey flow should now be put in the lower chamber and a queen excluder placed over it. Where a shallow super is used as a second brood chamber the queen is not placed below but is allowed the use of both chambers the entire season. Swarming can generally be detected by tipping the shallow super and looking for queen cells along the lower edges of the combs. If none are found the colony is not likely to swarm. All colonies should be examnied every nine or ten days during the active season. If queen cells containing larvae are found destroy all the queen cells and remove the old queen. Ten days later again destroy the queen cells and introduce a young queen; or leave the best-developed queen cell.

Where one wishes to make an increase when removing the old queen remove also three combs of emerging brood with adhering bees, and a comb of honey, place them in a new hive on a new stand and fill up the remaining space with drawn combs. Such increase should be made before July 10 otherwise the bees seldom build up to a strong colony by fall.

There is much loss of honey each year because beekeepers fail to put on supers in ample time. Frequently the honey flow is on before the beekeepers realize it, and consequently the bees may clog the brood chamber with honey. Under such conditions colonies will swarm in a short time and the swarm often absconds, the result being that the crop of that colony is lost and sometimes the bees also. To be on the safe side each colony should have at least three full depth supers where ten-frame Langstroth hives are used.

Top supering does away with heavy lifting and saves time This method places the first super over the brood chamber on top of the queen excluder, the next super on top of the first, the third on top of the second, and so on, and gives as good results as the old orthodox method of placing each super directly above the brood chamber, which meant considerable extra labour where two or three supers were given each colony during the honey flow.

Honey should not be removed from the colony until it is thoroughly ripe, or until two-thirds of the honey is capped over. Placing a wood-wire bee-escape board fitted with two-way bee escapes under the supers to be removed will clear them of bees in twenty-four hours. The honey should be extracted when warm, or as soon as possible after removing the supers. After extracting, strain the honey through two thicknesses of cheesecloth.

As the crop gathered from the fall flowers is less than that from the clovers, two supers will as a rule be all that is necessary for each colony.

MOTION

Mr. Chamberlain said the Government's aim was maintenance of peace through removal of all possible causes of conflict but warned that "though we seek peace Britain is not willing to sacrifice even for peace British honor and vital traditions."

Mr. Chamberlain disclosed that appointment of an unofficial mediator was in response to a request from the Czechoslovak Government.

He explained that Lord Runciman made a peer after his long service as Board of Trade President, would not have the power of arbitration and would work independently of the British Government in an effort to solve the problem which has been disturbing Europe.

The London-Paris understanding cemented anew by last week's state visit of the King and Queen he said was a "solid buttress of peace." But he added talks between foreign secretary Viscount Halifax and French leaders during the royal visit resulted in " no new undertaking and no new commitment."

RELATIONS WITH U. S.

With the United States the Prime Minister asserted, Britain's relations have never been better. Negotiations for a trade pact have been held up by certain difficult details, "but I know there is good will on both sides and hope we do not have to wait too long before we announce we have come finally to an agreed conclusion." The war debt question however, "has to be a settlement between two parties and cannot be settled by one alone."

As for the Sino-Japanese conflict, Mr. Chaberlain declared Britain did not consider it possible to extend a loan to China but was studying other means of aiding that country. He warned Tokyo that "when the Japanese Government claim they are protecting their interests in China, they must recognize that we too have our interests in China and that we cannot stand by and see them sacrificed."

ATTACKS GOVERNMENT

Sir Archibald Sinclair, Liberal opposition leader charged that Britain was following a policy of isolation instead of mutual assistance. Mr. Chamberlain countered with a plea that all parties unite behind his program for "the establishment and maintenance of peace and for the disappearance of all causes of conflict and irritation and grievances in one country or another."

Stressing the progress of "our great rearmament program," the Prime Minister said that "day by day the armed strength of our country becomes more formidable."

Britain's prime interest in Czechoslovakia, Mr. Chamberlain said was to avoid a deadlock between the negotiating parties or excessive haste by the government in dealing with the pro-Nazis.

He said London had urged Praha to submit its proposed nationality statute to Sudeten leader Konrad Henlein before presenting it to parliament. "I don't think a great amount of pressure was required of us to induce the Czechoslovak Government to do what they have been anxious to do all along," he said. However chances grew dimmer for a solution without foreign assistance.

Provincial Exhibition Newslets

Save for Exhibition! No matter what your circumstances are you cannot afford to pass up this year's great big Fair at Charlottetown, August 15th to 19th. On the afternoons of Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, harness racing, balloon ascension and twelve clever and sensational vaudeville acts will feature the program. In the evening for very little money you can see the greatest show that has ever been given east of Montreal, consisting of the Cavaudex Girls, dance and costume review, the Cycling Wheelers, Marie's Animal Circus, Eric the Great, performing 210 feet in the air, the Diving Demon and his Champion Divers, Carr Brothers, Bonette's slide for life, the Horse Show with beautiful horses and attractively costumed riders, all concluding with the most spectacular and magnificent fireworks display ever given here.

Charlottetown will be the great centre of interest in the Maritimes August 15th to 19th, when the big Fair gets under way with its thousands of entries of cattle, horses, sheep, swine, poultry, industrial, art, needlework and other exhibits. Its great program of judging, which will commence every morning at nine o'clock and will be handled by the best experts in the Dominion, brought here at great expense. In the afternoon in front of the Grand Stand there will be the biggest program of harness racing of the season with the best horses in the Maritimes competing for over $5,000 in purses and premiums. The owners and drivers love to come to Charlottetown because they like our people and always have a good time here. Between the heats of the harness racing there will be a big balloon ascension with parachute drop, the Cavaudex Girls Review, the Cycling Wheelers, Marie's Animal Circus, Carr Brothers, European clowns, Eric the Great, the Diving Demon, Pat Rafferty of the Dumbells, who sings the good old soldier songs, and Rex Doyle, the boy with the million-dollar personality and voice. A Master of Ceremonies will conduct the show afternoons and evenings. There will be no waits, everything will go like clockwork.

The management of the Provincial Exhibition are receiving offers from dozens of motor truck and motor boat owners who are anxious to enlist their services in picking up Bonette's balloon when it comes to earth or water, after his ride through the sky. Each afternoon the Bonette Balloon will be a feature at the Provincial Exhibition. Ascension will be made shortly after two o'clock and when the great big bag 75 feet long and 45 feet wide ascends into the sky with Bonette Senior on board, spectators will certainly get a real thrill. When it has ascended to about one thousand feet Bonnette Junior will bail out, plummetting to earth at a terrific rate of speed; then his parachute will open and he will come gracefully down hanging by his teeth, or executing one of four different stunts daily. This balloon act was the biggest feature in connection with several American fairs last season and drew enormous attendances. There is no question but that it will prove an equally great drawing card at Charlottetown, August 15th to 19th.

Premier And Dalhousie Campaign

The following letter has been received by Rev. H. G. Wright, Pine Hill Divinity Hall, Halifax from Premier Campoell:

Reverend Sir:

I have much pleasure in commending to the public of Prince Edward Island the proposed campaign for an increased endowment fund of Pine Hill Divinity Hall. It is particularly appropriate that the new endowment should be in part associated with the establishment of a Chair in memory of your late Principal, Doctor Clarence MacKinnon.

The educational branch of the church, in particular, has sustained a great loss in Dr. MacKinnon's recent death.

The influences of Dr. MacKinnon and of your college upon the religious, educational, and social life of the Maritime Provinces have been profound, and have extended far beyond the bounds of the denomination with which they have been particularly associated. Great numbers of students and others from Prince Edward Island have derived lasting benefits from this worthy institution.

I am pleased to make a contribution, necessarily small, towards your campaign, and trust that it meets with every success.

Yours sincerely,
THANE A. CAMPBELL.

"Ulterior Motives" Charged At Sidley Inquest At Toronto

TORONTO, July 26—Protest by executors of Mrs. Mabelle Horlick Sidley today failed to halt the opening of a coroner's inquest into her death here July 6 but a court ruling as to the coroner's jurisdiction will be sought before the inquiry resumes Aug. 2.

A motion for an order prohibiting Chief Coroner Dr. Smirle Lawson from "taking any further proceedings" in the inquest will be made before Mr. Justice Ainslee Greene of the Supreme Court of Ontario Thursday.

D. L. McCarthy, counsel for the Sidley executors (excepting William Sidley, the son), protested as today's scheduled inquest began against the "prostitution" of the inquest proceedings to "ulterior motives" which did not concern the cause of death.

The executors and members of Mrs. Sidley's family for whom he spoke "feel very keenly that these proceedings have been launched not for the purpose of ascertaining the cause of death but for ulterior motives which have no bearing on the facts proper to be ascertained on this inquisition," Mr. McCarthy said.
