A LEVER PRODUCT

Joint Canada, U. S. efforts Could go far

MONTREAL, May 4—(CP)—The joint strength of Canada and the United States that had solved the problem of production could be turned to hemispheric stabilization and assure success for the "good world of tomorrow."

This was the message of Leon Henderson, United States Price Administrator, when he spoke at a Canadian Club luncheon here today. Mr. Henderson plans to talk with Donald Gordon, Canadian Price Controller, before returning to Washington.

Saying that the production problem was "licked" Mr. Henderson asked that attention be given the economic problems of the whole hemisphere. He said that relations between Canada and the United States were a good example to follow.

Flexible methods of sharing materials had been used, resources had been pooled, unorthodox means had been applied "and often dollar signs were forgotten." But the object was attained.

The other nations of the new world must be brought in closely with the hemisphere plan of progress so that after "this people's war there may be an equality of burdens and fruitfulness on the citizens of each country."

Mr. Henderson said that not until Pearl Harbor did United States transition into all-out production take place. At that time American production was 112 on the United States federal index. "Right now it stands at 175 and it will reach 200 within the year."

Production had risen to such proportions that the United States would not need to compel—like enemy nations—the complete regimentation of industry. "We have reached our goal by wonderful cooperation between labor and management and using only the minimum of government guidance."

The present rate of production insured that the United States would be able to better contend with the submarine menace next year. "We have been forced to fight a two-ocean war with a one ocean navy. But next year it will be different. We'll at least have a one and a half ocean navy."

The "productive conquests" had resulted in a cost and facility review that would bring all round stability in the war effort.

Chief Birtwistle said last night that some person or persons, probably children, had been responsible for toppling the stones but he also believed the wind and other elements were responsible for some of the damage. The cemetery has been closed since 1874. Some of the older monuments bear the names of men who played a prominent part in shaping the early history of this province. In the southeast corner of the graveyard is the grave of Governor Smith's wife. Governor Smith one of the early governors of the Island, was a brother of Sir Sydney Smith the hero of Acre. War—25 Years Ago Today

Herridge stresses Canada's need For Leadership

OTTAWA, May 4—(CP)—Hon. W. D. Herridge, former Canadian minister to Washington, said today in a service club luncheon address that Canada must have a national government to give it leadership or the day may come when the United States will have to intervene in Dominion affairs.

Mr. Herridge, one-time leader of the New Democracy party, said the change from party government to national government would not come from parliament.

"You must bring about this change, you and men like you," he said to his hearers. "This country has given you its best. You can repay it. You are trained to think clearly and act wisely. You have experience. Your patriotism is unmortgaged. You are the natural leaders."

The average man was diligent to dodge responsibility, but the manpower plebiscite had put Canadians "on the spot".

"If you refuse the challenge, where is there any hope?" he said. "If men like you decline to make a fight, there is no hope. Your country will continue to subside.

"Then a day may come when something unbelievable will happen. The United States may have to intervene in Canada. We may begin to take orders from Washington.

"That would be hateful to Washington. But it would have no choice. Washington well knows what happens to a leaderless democracy. It has France painfully in mind. Washington cannot afford to have another France in North America. That might be the canker which would destroy democracy throughout the new world."

"Unless we can find leadership, I believe that the nationhood of Canada is destined for the scrap heap." Mr. Herridge said.

Canada was not fighting on the battle front or on the home front. In time of war it was not possible for party government effectively to lead a democratic state, because its very nature compelled disunity.

"When you set up a wartime party government and arm it with despotic powers, you prepare the way for Fascism," Mr. Herridge said. "And somewhere on the way to Fascism, the throat of freedom will inevitably be cut. The personnel of the government will become less mild. I warn you that it may be just as easy in Canada as it was in France, to replace the Petains by the Lavals."

When the war came, real leadership would have enacted total conscription but the people did not want it and party government ran away from it. Before the manpower plebiscite there had been a demand for conscription but party government hid behind its pre-election pledge and "passed the buck to the people." This was "a proclamation to the world that Canada has ceased to be a wartime functioning democracy."

Mr. Herridge said he believes that had Canada wished to send the Canadian corps to Libya, Prime Minister Churchill would have approved. But there was the question of whether the Canadian corps overseas was ready to fight.

"In my opinion, the Canadian corps had not reinforcements adequate to sustain it in offensive action," Mr. Herridge said. "Soldiers who have served in England support this view. The government replies that Gen. McNaughton (Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, Canadian army commander in the United Kingdom) is satisfied with the supply of reinforcements.

"This is not fair to Gen. McNaughton. There must be some mistake. To clear it up, the government should put the direct question to Gen. McNaughton: 'Are you satisfied that in the event of early and sustained offensive action, the Canadian forces have adequate reinforcements now available?'

"Lacking adequate reinforcements for even a corps, the government nevertheless sanctions the formation of an army. A strange way to strengthen our forces for a possibly impending offensive. In the circumstances there is no justification for an army. Whom do we think we are fooling?"

Col. Herridge said a national government might be created by a declaration of Parliament that the circumstances of war demanded a national government, by formation of a cabinet with membership based on the relative voting strength of the various parties in the 1940 general election, and the creation of a war cabinet of five members with supreme authority over conduct of the war in all its manpower, economic and strategic phases.

Urges support For Red Cross

At last night's Gyro dinner the members were privileged to hear an eloquent, stirring and convincing appeal on behalf of the Canadian Red Cross by the Hon. Dr. W. J. P. MacMillan. The Doctor told of the work which the Red Cross has done for the wounded, the sick, for the men, women and helpless children of countries laid waste by war, for prisoners of war. The finest military hospital in England is maintained by the Red Cross. Equipment, surgical and medical supplies, clothing, foods, are being sent in ever increasing quantities. He spoke especially of the parcels of food being sent to prisoners of war. 40,000 of these parcels are now being sent per week, Great Britain has asked that this be doubled. Imagine our boys living in Japanese Prison camps fed on rotten, inferior fish, the poorest rice and so-called soup, if more of these food parcels are not sent said the doctor, these boys will not come back alive.

No call made on the people of Prince Edward Island since the start of the war has been denied. The Island has never failed in any part of it's war effort and in the coming drive for $9,000,000 throughout Canada, Dr. MacMillan expressed the sincere conviction that the Island would oversubscribe more than double its quota in support of this the world's greatest humanitarian organization. The Red Cross is your society, it must have workers as well as money to carry on its great work.

Butter Shortage In Some Districts

MONTREAL, May 4 — (CP) — A spokesman for the wartime prices and Trade Board said tonight that some places in Canada have been affected by a hortage of butter. He added that although the situation is "not alarming on the whole" it is under study in Ottawa.

The spokesman said that "the situation should right itself in a very short time." There has been no acute shortage of butter in the Montreal district, the spokesman added.

B. C. Man For New Fire Marshal Post

OTTAWA, May 4 — (C P) — Oswald Lewis Lister, chief of the British Columbia University area fire department at Vancouver, has been appointed fire marshal of the Canadian army, a new position said a return tabled in the House of Commons today for Dr. H.A. Bruce (Con. Toronto-Parkdale).

He is graded as an assistant quartermaster-general with rank of Lieutenant-colonel. He served in the first great war as a gunner and sergeant.

Cropping Has Started At Farm

"The spring planting season came in very early," Dr. J.A. Clark, Superintendent of the Experimental Station said last night. "Turnip sticklings were set out on Friday April 24," he added. Saturday the 25th was the warmest day ever recorded at this station in April with the thermometer reaching 80 degrees Fahrenheit. Mixed grain was sown on that day. On Monday the 26th oats were sown on the rotations west of the buildings and by Tuesday noon one-quarter of an acre of hollow-crown parsnip sticklings had been set out. These are from foundation stock seed produced at the Charlottetown station.

The balance of the rotations between the station building and the railway, in grain, were seeded during the week. Mangels were also sown last week.

The new meadows which were rolled on April 22 and 23rd. came through the winter with very little killing from ice or frost. The pasture and clover looked very promising.

The Superintendent walked across the lily pond on the ice on April 23—five days later the ice was all gone and the first dandelion bloom was picked on the lawn.

The pruning of the orchard was completed last month. The time for grafting will soon be here and repairs or replacements should be made for all trees damaged by mice.

The bees have wintered well. The demand for package bees exceeds the supply.

Prosperity Back For Fishermen

MONTREAL, May 4—(CP)—Canada's fisheries are enjoying a degree of prosperity unmatched since the close of the last war the Royal Bank reported today in its monthly letter.

The letter stated: "As in the earlier struggle the fishing industry has again demonstrated an ability to adjust itself to new and unfamiliar conditions."

The latter said that dislocations arising from the loss of overseas markets, enforced shifts in the buying habits of consumers, requisition of vessels and shortage of experienced men had been rapidly and effectively surmounted.

Rotarians hear Address by Scout Official

Mr. John A. Stiles, O.B.E., B.A.Sc., M.E.I.C., Chief Executive Commissioner of the Boy Scouts of Canada delivered an interesting address on "The father and his son" at Rotary yesterday.

Mr. R. H. Rogers was named president of the Club as the election of officers took place. Other officers named were: T. W. L. Prowse, Vice President; W. R. LePage, Secretary; A.L. MacPherson, Treasurer. Directors D. J. Bonnell, Ian Burnett and T. G. Ives.

Commissioner Stiles, in his opening remarks, said that he had "quite a lot of experience with boys." He had three of his own and had learned a great many things which would probably be of interest to his listeners.

In his opinion it was "pride of family" which had made England great "and it will go a long way in making Canada great." He believed he could prove this by a study of British history. He asked the fathers present if they had told the boys their family history. Without this information, the boys could hardly be proud of their parents and therefore it is a duty to tell them about their family history.

The speaker declared, "We are too prone to say mother brings up the children and father brings home the bacon." He went on to say, "Happy is the boy who has a beautiful mother and a father who is a chum." That boy longs to be a man.

Commissioner Stiles said that his "test for sin" was the "breakfast table test." He studied the demeanor of his boy when they came to breakfast. If the boy appeared to be sour and cross he had been sinning.

He pointed out that the wrong type of life imposed on the boy develops inconsideration, selfishness, laziness, and rudeness.

What Might Have Been

He went on to say: "Suppose we take a look at what might have been your boy's life, had his circumstances been different. Look around the house, find an old fur overcoat and out of it make for your boy a one-piece suit. Now take him away into the country to a cave. Find a thorn bush to place at the mouth of the cave and then tell your lad that hereafter he is to live the life of the cave man. The next morning your boy will push aside the thorn bush and proceed to read the morning newspaper. First, he will read the weather report, or before that the social column, and then he will go to the water hole to read the market report. Upon his ability to read the morning newspaper will depend whether or not he is going to live in the world in which he now finds himself.

"Of course you will laugh at this picture and consider it a ridiculous caricature. However don't forget that muscles never came from ease and character seldom comes from riches."

The speaker warned against making life too sheltered for the boy. He cannot get muscle without exercise nor can be build character without a struggle. Boys should be taught the value of money.

He went on to say that at present the boy is too far away from the soil. If he had his way he would not allow a boy to graduate from college until he had cultivated an acre of ground all by himself. There is danger in getting too far away from the soil.

Mr. Stiles pointed out that the school coach is important in the life of a boy. This individual teaches him to be a good sport and gives him a lesson in being able to take it. Men sometimes become too lazy to live—too lazy to breathe, he said. They sit in their offices whereas it would benefit them to get out in the fields, play golf, go fishing and get other healthful recreation.

The Chief Executive Commissioner advised the fathers to "walk with your boy, sit with him, talk with him." Tell him how men succeed in groups. When a number of men get together there is in their presence something which makes them stronger than individuals.

Talk to Him

Talk to them about nature, about birds, trees and the soil, he continued. Teach them that "our great mother is the earth." He referred to John Buchan's story dealing with the great pioneer whom he had met in Canada. This individual was wholly secure, his philosophy was of the best kind, and he was one of the few aristocrats of mankind. Scouting tells the boys to imitate this pioneer.

Talk to the boy about studying. There are three simple steps in learning anything. First the student must pay close attention to what he hears or reads; next he must turn away and try to remember what he has read; then he must do something about it. The speaker pointed out that it is necessary for man to learn to do something with his hand. "There are no expert machinists ever out of work and you do not find cabinet makers in the penitentiary."

Education is everywhere, Mr. Stiles declared. It matters not how much money a boy has so long as he wants to become educated. "If you know what you want you are half way there," he pointed out. Young men are sometimes hampered by having too small a vision.

Boy's Decision

The decision as to what a boy is going to be rests with the boy himself. It should not be decided by the father or another. The speaker declared he was "at war with vocation guiders." Nobody but the boy himself should decide his future career.

An important duty for the parent is to teach the boy to put first things first. He should be taught to sort things out and do the most important thing first. Also he should be taught the difference between knowledge and wisdom.

He concluded by stating, "the boy's life is his own conquest not yours. The best thing you can do is to lead a life of truth in his sight and pass on to him the philosophy and history of your family with a prayer to God that you are not making any mistakes."

The President, T. G. Ives announced that the shields donated to the "Queen Charlotte" are now in place and the Commanding officer extended a hearty invitation to Rotarians to "Come aboard" any time.

Judge H. L. Palmer occupied the chair and many of the Executive Officers of the Boy's Scout Association were present, including the following. Wm. Warren, B. R. Taylor, John J. Morris, R.S.P. Jardine, Wellington Dixon, Stanley McInnis and Provincial Scout Commissioner K. M. Martin.

Other guests were His Worship B R. Holman, Mayor, Mrs. J. Y. Reay, Provincial Commissioner Girl Guides, Miss Lillian Duchemin, District Commissioner, Girl Gides, Mr. Fred Driscoll, Mr. F. G. Hutcheson and Mr. T. M. Cumming, Supervisor Y.M.C.A. at the R. A. F.

Urge Guerillas To Prepare Way

MOSCOW, May 4—(AP)—The people of the Ukraine were urged today by Marshal Semeon Timoshenko to engage in guerilla warfare behind the German lines and so prepare the way for a Red Army of liberation.

"Help us with everything possible," read a proclamation.

This could best be done, the Marshal's proclamation noted, by blowing up bridges, by preventing the Germans from carrying away material and manpower, by breaking down the German communications, and by watching the direction of the enemy's flight and attacking the Germans from the rear.

OILY SKIN

As a remedy for oily skin the following has been found very effective: After washing the face in hot water and soap wash with ice-cold water, holding the cold cloth on the face where the oil condition is the worst. The cold water closes the pores and helps to stop the free flow of oil. Witch hazel is also good to use in this rinse water. Equal parts of lemon juice and witch hazel are sometimes used for this condition. Rub onto the face before going to bed and wash off in the morning.
