As an art, is acknowledged to be par excellence by those competent to judge. But there is tailoring versus so called tailoring. The latter on a par with Hand-me-Downs. The former is easily detected by the ease and grace with which it fits not too tight or loose but gives a charm and style to the wearer, not easily defined by the inexperienced, which will you have. You can get the latter with your eyes shut. The former by enquiry for the store of

JAMES PATON & Co. has received a letter from Miss McEachern, their milliner, who is now visiting the Millinery openings in New York and Boston. She says: "Of all the lovely shows, I saw them this time. The hats are something beautiful and to give you some idea of the work we saw, the prices ranged from a one dollar bid to forty dollars. Gauzes, chiffons, muslins, gold effects, any number of roses, almost a box to one hat; they are handsome. Also a great many shots in the wood colors, by that I mean from fawns to brown, and green, velvet ribbons will be used and flowers of all kinds, but especially it will be a great season of roses, foliage and fruit. Nearly all trimming materials have a tint of gold."

Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Semple, came to New Glasgow from Renfrewshire, Scotland in 1820, when the subject of this sketch was two years old, and her brother the late James Semple, four years old. In December 1839 she married Robert Orr, who has now been dead some 20 years or more.
