VARIETY OF EPITHETS

Some Real Irish Flung Around at a Cork Meeting

At a meeting of the Cork Port Sanitary Authority on the question of the election of chairman, Mr. Goggin asked if the members were aware of the splendid emoluments attached to the chair, and when interrupted by Mr. Gambie, referred to the latter as a "talkative cockatoo." A heated scene ensued, Mr. Gambie calling on Mr. Goggin to withdraw, and declaring: "The man that would insult me, if he were as old as Methuselah, I'd knock the head off him." Mr. Goggin asked, amid laughter, if Mr. Gambie would meet him in a 12-foot ring, only first giving him time to train. Mr. Butterfield having suggested that Mr. Goggin substitute the phrase, "pragmatical jackdaw," Mr. Goggin withdrew the remark.

STEAM BATH FOR TUB

Hoods Fits Over One End and Forms Enclosed Chamber

From Germany, where the number of medicinal baths is legion, comes an invention that enables the average man to take a steam or hot air bath at home. A hood, with a hole at the top of the head to come through fits over one end of the tub and forms an enclosed chamber to hold the steam in. The user sits on a seat which hangs over that end of the tub and a tube connected with the hot water spigot leads under him. This tube lies along the bottom of the tub and has a wide, flat nozzle, turned upward. As the hot water flows out the steam that arises envelops the body of the person in the hood and has the same effect as the steam room of a Turkish bath. The discharge pipe of the tub is left open, so the water can run out without filling the receptacle.

GIGANTIC RUDDER

So Huge That It Has a Door For Men to Get Inside It

A rudder with a doorway into its interior is a feature of the mammoth Cunard liner Aquitania. The pin which connects the rudder to the ship is 4 feet in length and bigger than the heaviest projectile made for modern artillery. A special appliance was constructed in the ship to lift it into position. When delivered at the builder's yard the rudder was in three parts. After they had been connected and laid upon the ground, the distance that had to be walked round the complete rudder was over 100 feet.

FARMER AND CROW

Thieving Bird is Not Welcome Regardless of His Virtues

On the Pacific Coast a heated discussion raged around the crow, that pest, competent bird who has out-lived the guns and traps of man for many, many years. Opinions as to his merits and demerits were sharply in contrast, the farmer taking a firm stand against the ornithologist, and each evincing for the other that degree of contempt that is always shown when science and casual observation clash.

The farmer, as a rule, is no bird lover, because his life puts him in a position where he notices the depredations of birds, and does not furnish him the opportunity of seeing the good his feathered visitors perform. He is naturally scornful of all theories which postulate that the bird pays his way by his destruction of pests. The crow dining on some parasitic bug, beetle or fly does not attract his attention as does the crow in the corn-field or elsewhere in the crops.

Against this the man of science brings a bill of fare of the crow, with statistics concerning the contents of the crow's stomach, all of which counts but little with the farmer, who knows what he sees with his eyes.

A SHARP-EYED BOY

He Picked Out in Crowd Grandfather He Had Never Seen

"I don't know my own son. I am afraid I will never find him in the crowd, and I have been waiting eight years for this," complained an elderly man at the Montreal station as he looked searchingly about among the hundreds of immigrants who had just arrived. Just then a little child not more than four years old ran up to him, and, pulling at his coat, cried out: "Why here's grandpa." The child's mother was about to reprove him for speaking to a strange man when a certain Welshman just behind the child called out: "Baby Jim is right. It is grand-dad." Thus was the reunion of the Morgan family consummated.

The elder man had left the old home eight years before when his son was but a lad of fifteen, and had been working in Ontario in an effort to make the money to bring the rest of the family to Canada. He has had his share of hard luck, however, and the years passed without the object being attained. The son was prosperous enough in Wales to take unto himself a wife. For some years he worked as Mr. Lloyd George's gardener at the house which was burned by suffragettes.

The father finally prospered and sent the money to aid his son to come to Canada, bringing with him the wife and child which his father had never seen.

The elder Morgan had sent his picture home to England, and the little boy had been taught so carefully about his coming to see "grand-dad" that his bright eyes were the first to notice the grizzled workman, who had aged so much that his own son barely recognized him.

AN OLD SCHOOLHOUSE

Took Nearly a Century For Toronto to Grow Out to It

The oldest landmark on the banks of the Don River, which flows through Toronto, disappeared when the one roomed log schoolhouse which stood in Tomorden for well on to a century was torn down in order to make way for modern homes.

All the Tomorden children of several generations were educated in its solitary room, which accommodated about seventy pupils. There was a bell tower, but no bell was ever installed. The building was abandoned when it became too small in 1883, and after that it was occupied by market gardeners. The last teacher was Mr. Tom Gould of the Customs Department at the Toronto Postoffice.

Elbows and Fingers Were Cramped and Numb

Lived in Dread of Paralysis—Nerves Upset—Could Not Sleep—Well New—Thanks to Dr Chase's Nerve Food

Paralysis is a frightfully common these days. We are living at high tension, and too often the nerves give way under the enormous strain. The only way to be safe is to be warded by symptoms, for the nervous system does not go to pieces without giving you many danger signals, if you only know how to interpret them.

When you have frequent headaches, find yourself easily irritated and annoyed, feel discouraged and down-hearted, cannot rest and sleep well, and find appetite fickle and digestion bad, you may know that the nerves are in bad condition. Don't wait for these symptoms to become chronic but start in early with the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and head off disaster.

Mr. John Matthews, farmer, Fawn Lake, Alta., writes:—"I had cramp-torture in my legs, pains in my knees and elbows, and my fingers would get cramped and numb. I could not sleep nights, and would have to get out of bed to rub the cramps out of my legs. For two years I suffered this way, and could not get relief. Then I began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and did so with splendid results. I sleep well now, enjoy my meals and feel well generally. I only had cramps once last winter, and feel that my system has been greatly benefited by this food cure."

Cures like this are reported almost daily in the public press, and you are invited to investigate these cases for yourself. If you cannot call personally write for particulars, enclosing stamp for reply. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50c. a box all dealers, or Edmondson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

LIFE "DOWN UNDER"

Australia Offers Inducement Favorable to Longevity

As an inducement to possible emigrants, Australia might with some justice be advertised as a health resort. The death rate throughout the continent only averages about ten per thousand. The number of deaths last year, for instance, was 47,869, against 122,193 births. The Government of the Commonwealth offers various inducements favorable to longevity. Old-age pensions of ten shillings a week are paid to every person over sixty-five who has resided there for twenty years. In addition to this, there are invalid pensions, payable to anyone incapacitated who has resided there for at least five years. Later, however, the young men of Australia are being asked to make some sacrifices for their country, which may go somewhat as a set off against these benefits. A system of compulsory training has been set in vogue. The service is mainly for those between eighteen and twenty-six years of age. Two years are served in a kind of citizen force. After this, the young men serve as soldiers. The whole service, however, is anything easier than that in the British Territorial Force.

ACCIDENTALLY HANGED

Suspended From a Rope Used For Beating Carpets

A tragic occurrence took place in Cork involving the death of John Lawrence, aged fourteen. The boy was playing in the garden of Miss Mayne, on Patrick's Hill, having gone there on a visit with his mother. A rope used for the beating of carpets was suspended in the garden, with a loop attached to the end. His horror-stricken mother discovered him suspended from this by the neck, presumably whilst playing, and though at once medically attended life was found to be extinct.

Value of Sugar Beets

A noteworthy fact concerning the sugar beet crop, so extensively grown in Kent County, Ontario, is that, far from exhausting the soil, the sugar beet returns it for other crops. This fact is clearly proven by German statistics, where, in 20 years, the wheat yield was increased from 20 to 40 bushels per acre, largely as a result of rotating with sugar beets. Similar results have been noticed in Kent County wherever other crops have been planted following the beet crops.

The sugar beet, too, is a deadly enemy to weeds, and leaves clean fields behind it. This is true, also, of tobacco, which is extensively raised in the same district.
